The continued drive of the Southern forces in China, with the capture of Tsinan, refugee accounts from Hankow of the slaughter by bandits of 5,000 men, women and children at Kingmen, a mission station, the killing of an American of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Mission Hospital at Tsining, and the report of another execution of another American missionary by Nationalists made up the sum of tragedies as reported by despatches from various Chinese centres Wednesday.

The drive of the Southern forces has carried them another step nearer Peking. Advices from both Shanghai and Nanking tell of the capture of Tsinan, capital of Shantung, by the forces under Feng Yu-Hsiang. Sixty thousand rifles and 110 field guns are reported to have been seized.

Made Up of Army Deserters.

The bandits who raided Kingmen, a city of 600,000 inhabitants in Hupeh Province, were made up of army deserters and a peasant organization. Refugees reaching Hankow gave appalling descriptions of the sacking of the town and the massacre.

Tens of thousands of Northerners who were driven from the city of Tsinan are trekking back along the roads, with brigandage rampant.

Dr. Walter F. Seymour, superintendent of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions Hospital at Tsining, Shantung, has been shot and killed by a Chinese soldier.

From Tokio comes a report that an American missionary was executed by Nationalists at Yenchowfu. This is only about fifteen miles from Tsining and it is thought possible that the two cases are identical. The Nationalist central executive committee at Nanking has protested against the despatch by the Japanese Government of troops to Shantung.

Missionaries Safe.

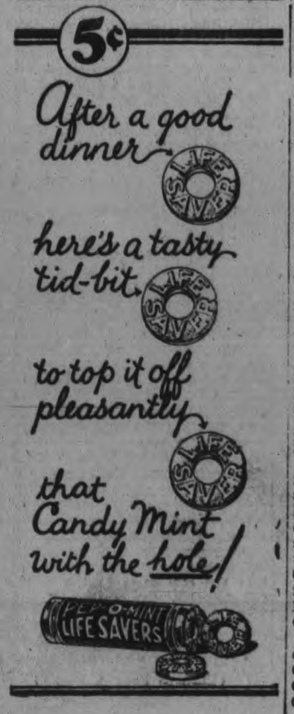
NEW YORK, April 26 (Canadian Press).—The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions yesterday announced it had been advised of the safety of its other missionaries at Tsining, South-Eastern Shantung, China, where Dr. Walter F. Seymour of the board's hospital at Tsining was shot to death. Among the missionaries at Tsining was Miss May Stewart of Funmore, P.E.I.

"Soldiers shot Dr. Seymour through the heart," said a cable to the board from the Presbyterian China Council at Shanghai. "All others in Tsining saved. Will leave as soon as possible."

INTERESTING LOOM FOUND AT MARMORA

Mrs. W. Hilton Has Relic Handed Down for Generations.

MARMORA, April 26.— Half a century ago several weaving looms might have been seen in this vicinity. For example, in the western section of the township of Marmora was the Jones' loom operated at first by the pioneer of that name who had been a weaver by trade in the old country. Then there was the loom used by the late Mrs. Scott, a pioneer settler in North Marmora. Today apparently there is only one loom left of the number and that, it is interesting to note, is set up in Marmora village on the kitchen verandah of Mrs. W. Hilton. To this lady who has long since passed life's allotted span, the loom was bequeathed by an aunt who was in receipt of it from the preceding generation. Mrs. Hilton proved to be an expert at weaving and five years ago, after moving with her late husband into the village from their well known farm in the township, wove thirty five yards of carpet upon it.



'Quakes Felt In New England States

RUMFORD, Maine, April 26.—(Canadian Press). — Two sharp earthquake shocks, one following the other within a few seconds' time, shocked Rumford at 6.37 last night. In the thickly-settled sections of the village, residents rushed from their homes into the streets and proprietors of stores reported that goods swayed on the shelves. No damage was done as far as known. They also were felt at Lewiston, more than thirty miles distant.

TWO BODIES FOUND IN DETROIT RIVER

One Identified As That of Beer Runner—Other Man Victim of Foul Play.

WINDSOR, April 26.—Two bodies were yielded up by the Detroit River yesterday. One of them, so far unidentified, is believed by police to be that of a man who came to his end from foul play, while the other was that of Albert Forton, Detroit, drowned last Wednesday when the boat in which he was transporting a cargo of beer to the Detroit shore capsized in a heavy sea. The body of a man, name unknown, who was with Forton at that time has yet to be found.

But there is no possibility of its being the second of the two bodies found yesterday, police say. Forton's body was pulled from the water off Tecumseh, and had only been in the water a few days, while the other, recovered near Lasalle, had been in the river for at least three months.

There was no mark on the body by means of which it could be identified, but Chief of Police Albert Langlois of Lasalle declared that the face showed distinct traces which would indicate that the man had been slain.

NEGLECTED ANAEMIA.

Often Leads to the Most Serious Consequences.

In no disorder is delay or neglect more dangerous than in anaemia. Usually the first noticeable signs are pale lips and cheeks, dark rims under the eyes and a feeling of weariness. Then follow headaches, backaches, palpitation and breathlessness. The only way that anaemia can be overcome is to enrich the blood, and it is because of their wonderful blood-enriching and blood-making properties that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have won such great success in the treatment of this often most stubborn disease.

Thousands of young girls who were in an anaemic condition owe their present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. One of these, Miss Katie McEachern, Port Hood, N.S., says:—"I praise the day I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had not been feeling well for some time. I was very pale, had severe headaches, dizzy sepils, and occasional fainting spells. The least exertion would leave me tired and breathless. In this condition I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I continued their use until I had taken six boxes, by which time I was again enjoying good health. I hope my experience will lead other sufferers to give this medicine a fair trial."

If you are at all run-down, or weak, you should begin at once to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and you will soon be well and strong. These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SECOND READING HARBOR LOAN

Ottawa House Discusses Saint John Harbor Commission Bill.

BENNETT AGAINST LOAN.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 26 (Canadian Press).—A bill to provide for a loan of $5,000,000 to the St. John Harbor Commission passed second reading in the House of Commons yesterday and was given consideration in committee. Progress was reported on the bill when the House rose at six o'clock.

Hon. R. B. Bennett, leader of the Opposition, took the ground that this money should not be advanced by way of a loan. The Duncan report, he said, had advocated the development of the port of St. John and Halifax by the use of public monies. This did not imply that the government should loan money to harbor commissions. It meant that the government should appropriate certain sums for the development of these ports and expend them for that purpose without demanding interest.

If the tolls at the port of St. John were to be fixed sufficiently high to meet an interest payment of $250,000 every year, it would be a serious handicap to that port. The tolls would be so high that the traffic would not go there.

Hon. James A. Robb, Minister of Finance, remarked that he was sure citizens of St. John and of Halifax, and other places where harbor development was being carried on, would be pleased with the view expressed by Mr. Bennett. He was not sure that the taxpayers generally would approve them. He remarked that the Opposition appeared to have jumped from their economy of last week to extravagance this week.

Mr. Bennett retorted that the minister was embarking on a policy of extravagance rather than economy. It would not be economy to force a port to charge tolls which would divert business from that port. He favored, said Mr. Bennett, a policy which would vote only what sums were required from year to year. In this way Parliament would approve every dollar and keep track on all expenditures.

Goldberg, a lawyer from St. John, N.B., is being held here by two excise and preventive officers and a local detective, in connection with the seizure of $82,000 worth of alcohol on the docks at Montreal, April 16. On Tuesday the customs officer here was notified from St. John to seek a man from the New Brunswick city who was known to be in Montreal. As a result of inquiry, Goldberg was located. Goldberg, accompanied by a local detective, left for St. John yesterday.

Trading More Active With Prices Better

TORONTO, April 26 (Canadian Press). — Transactions increased on the standard Mining Exchange this morning, and the improvement was further marked by better prices in the majority of issues Pend Oreille recovered some of its recent loss, advancing sixty cents at 19.25, while Noranda was tightly held and gained five at 18.25. Sherritt Gordon and Abana advanced a similar amount at 6.20 and 2.70 respectively. Mint Ore sold at 30 for a gain of three points. McIntyre registered a decline of 40 at 26.00 and Teck Hughes was five cents lower at 915.

All Grains Surpass Season's High Prices

Chicago, April 26. Canadian Press. —Wheat, rye, corn and oats to-day all surpassed the season's previous top prices, which were yet hardly 24 hours old. Rapidly advancing quotations at Liverpool together with critical wheat crop conditions, especially in Western Nebraska and in Northwestern Kansas, were leading bullish factors. Opening 7-8 to 2¼c higher, Chicago wheat later fluctuted near to the initial range. Corn started ⅛ to 1 -8c up and subsequently reacted somewhat with oats following. Provisions, like grain, tended upward.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 161¾, July 160 7-8; corn 108 5-8; July 111½; oats May 65 3-8; July 57¾.

COMMANDER SAYS OPPOSITION STRONG

wounded. It was their own fault, as they disobeyed orders and went out looking to see what they could find west of the canal

Private Roy Russell, of Cobourg, a member of B Company of the R.C.R., was one of the bombers who were sent into Mons late in the night of the 10th. He told of seeing two Germans who were killed either by one of the bombs or a German shrapnel shell which exploded near the bombing party.

General Clark.

Brig. Gen. John Arthur Clark, M.P., D.S.O., C.M.G., commander of the Seventh Canadian Infantry Brigade, which included the R.C.R., Princess Pats, 42nd and 49th Battalions, declared there were no casualties in his brigade on November 11. As commander of the units that entered Mons, Brig. General Clark was able to give to His Lordship and jury a most complete account of the movements of the units under his command.

On November 6th the Seventh Brigade went through the Eighth Canadan Brigade with the Princess Pats and the 49th Battalion in the line and the R.C.R. and 42nd being held in reserve, said witness.

"On taking over the line, I immediately had a conference with my battalion commanders, the situation at that time was very vague to us and we decided to carry on the advance by scouts, advancing mainly by night. If they encountered an enemy stronghold, they were to remove the opposition with the least possible loss. These orders were carried out in a remarkable degree with marvellous success.

"On Nov. 7th the Princess Pats entered the line and made a long march, surprising the enemy rear guards at night and as a result very little opposition was encountered. On the 10th the advance had reached beyond Jemappes and within 1700 yards of Mons. Our front widened on the night of the ninth and the R.C.R. was put into line also north of the Mons canal this being the boundary between the two units. That night I issued orders setting out the objective for the night of the ninth and tenth, as the road leading from K14 to Q4 lying east of Mons, but this city was never mentioned in any order of mine.

During the ninth and tenth the Princess Pats encountered opposition near Mons and the 42nd Battalion was sent in to relieve them.

"The orders to the 42nd were to move when the moving was good, always taking care of the lives of the men."

Mr. Tilley asked the witness about the advisability of taking Mons by an enflanking movement.

"It had been proven most clearly that the troops on either flank were suffering more heavily than those in front of Mons and hence it was advisable to enter Mons as my officers had told me only the bridge-heads to the entry of the city were being defended by the enemy," declared witness.

Q.—When did you hear of the armistice?

A.—I am not sure, but it was between 6.45 and 7.00 o'clock on November 11.

Q.—When was your objective contained in the order of the ninth reached?

A.—Early in the morning of the 11th.

Q.—What did you do then?

A.—I took the map and established a further line and sent the 5th Lancers through the infantry to take this line, which was done by eleven o'clock.

During the morning of the ninth the Canadian Brigade was ordered to go through the Seventh Brigade and take up this established armistice line, said General Clark.

Q.—Were there any casualties reported to you?

A.—There were not.

Mr. Regan commenced his cross-examination, and his first question was about casualties, and he referred to Pte. Price.

"I said there were no casualties. As regards Pte. Price, I know nothing of him. He was not in my brigade," was the witness's answer.

The examination of Brig.-Gen. Clark was resumed after the recess.

Witness stated that the orders were issued by men who wished to avoid casualties, since all commanders had such a natural desire.

Mr. Regan—"Did you get any orders between 6.00 o'clock and midnight on the 9th respecting the operations of your brigade?

"I don't know."

Regarding the 2nd Brigade, witness did not know what their orders were but was "cognizant" of their movements. Brigade commanders exchanged copies of operation orders, which would effect them. He had no knowledge of an order to Gen. Burstall and the authority for same, he said.

Q.—Is it true or is it not true that you got an order on the night of the ninth to advance to the high ground east of your position?

A.—I don't know. Show me the orders from division.

The original was produced and witness agreed that it indicated to him the advance was to be carried out according to his own judgment. His troops were not north of Mons. It was his flank.

Q.—Do you not assume that it was proper for you to go south of Mons father than north of Mons?

A.: It wasn't for me to assume anything. It was my job to do it. Gen. Clark further stated he had reconnitered Mons and believed there was an enemy force in the town. It was "defended." How strong the defence was, he could not say.

"One man may use certain words while another might describe it differently," General Clark said. "It was impossible for me to tell how large a force was defending the town. There were some machine guns," Gen. Clark spoke with reference to the night of November 9 to 10.

Two priniples of military strategy were read from The Army Handbook, and Gen. Clark agreed were sound military principles.

"These are all sound military regulations, Mr. Regan, or they would not be in the Field Service book."

No Assault on Mons

Gen. Clark stated there was no assault on Mons, but an entry in a war diary shown him by Mr. Regan was a good account of the operations. To a certain extent there was some justification for the terms used by whoever wrote the account of the Third Division. No commander allowed his troops to go forward till all was done that could be done to ascertain the strength of the enemy.

Asked if the Germans stuck to their machine guns till all were either killed or captured, Gen. Clark replied, "Well, if they were like our men, they would have."

Regarding the accuracy of reports of operations, Gen. Clark stated definitely that the troops were never late in advancing, but the reports of advances were sometimes late in being written up. He would not take the matter of a few hours as serious in a report.

"Neither would we if it wasn't for this law suit."

Mr. Regan's attempt to submit a picture of a picture in the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa was objected to.

"I would like to see it this afternoon," witness replied with a smile, indicating that he would not be in the witness stand.

There was no fighting in Mons, he declared.

Mr. Regan asked the witness how these numerous machine guns in Mons could be captured and gunners killed if there was no fighting.

"Now I had a corporal at Passchendaele," began the General.

Mr. Regan: "I don't want to know about Passchendaele. His Lordship has already ruled it out."

"You asked me how it could be done and I was going to tell you," Gen. Clark replied.

He admitted that at one stage of the operations some hand grenades had been thrown.

Q.: And you wouldn't call this fighting?"

A.: Yes, it might be so termed; My idea of fighting is——

Mr. Regan: "I want the Irish definition of fighting."

Witness: "Hand to hand? There was none."

Asked regarding orders received on Nov. 10th, witness said they would be among the records.

He got word of the armistice about 7.00 a.m., Nov. 11th, but would not be any more definite.

Mr. Regan: "Hostilities will cease at 11.00 a.m."

A.—Means just what it says.

Q.—That the war would be over at eleven o'clock.

A.—No ,and it's unfair to interpret only that part of the order.

Mr. Regan, continuing to read—"Defensive precautions will be taken."

This justified the taking of defensive precautions witness said.

Mr. Regan—"Don't you think you would have been justified in disobeying an order at this late date, when casualties might have occurred.

A.—"Treason is never justified." This reply by General Clark, in a clear, strong voice, caused considerable argument as to treason and and of what it is constituted. Mr. Regan stated he would press for an answer to a question which His Lordship had defined as hypothetical and finally ruled out of court.

In General Clark's opinion, the advance on Mons was justified since he was so ordered to do. That his troops would be on high ground, would have Mons as a billeting area, and would be in a position to protect the thickly populated centre from enemy shell fire, were some of the reasons given by the witness.

Q.—To press up to the last moment?

A.—My orders were perfectly clear and I carried them out to the best of my ability.

Reading from an article written by an official war correspondent, Mr. Regan siad an officer of the 5th Lancers had been killed an hour and a half before the armistice and asked if this were true.

"I tell you, Mr. Regan, I had only one squadron of the 5th Lancers attached to me. My reports show that there were no casualties in that detachment. I know nothing of the remainder of the unit," witness replied.

Asked concerning what Sir Arthur Currie should have done, General Clark said he could only speak for himself. He further stated that he was justified in advancing.

The message says: Hostilities will cease at eleven o'clock. It might just as well have said, hostilities will continue till eleven o'clock.

With this interpretation, Mr. Regan disagreed and he stated that he had several authorities at hand on the matter. Witness justified his advance five miles east of Mons by his desire to have his men's billets out of range of shell fire.

General Sir Henry Rawlinson, G.O.C. 4th Army, went over the ground personally and was highly pleased with every detail of the operation.

Held Parade.

"You had a parade on the morning of the 11th in Mons, did you not?" was the first question asked General Clark by Frank Regan when the Court re-assembled at 2.10 p.m. to-day.

Witness agreed that he had, and stated that he had not been present at a parade held later in the day by Sir Arthur Currie. That it was a great day and a great honor, General Clark agreed. He had taken no oath to capture the city.

"We had no time to think. We were working," said the general.

Asked if a certain casualty reported wounded fifteen minutes before the Armistice was signed belonged to his brigade, witness said he had not or he would have heard of it. He had checked his reports and knew them to be authentic. They showed no such entry.

Mr. Regan referred to the evidence given by a Red Cross man, who had said he attended the casualty in question on the morning of November 11, and who had stated that two men were brought in, one of whom died. The other lost a leg. General Clark would not deny the evidence, only in so far as his own brigade was concerned.

He signed the Gold Book at the request of the Burgomaster. It was a great honor in his opinion. General Clark further stated that he was at a military funeral in Mons on November 13th, but he could not say how many dead Canadians were buried there on that date.

General Currie Arrives.

General Currie was not present at the counsel table this morning, but arrived in Court two minutes after the opening afternoon.

W. T. R. Preston, one of the defendants, took the opportunity to cross-examine General Clark. He asked him about the Armistice order and why he considered it an operation order. Witness was of the opinion he had already answered the question.

General Clark then stepped aside and Col. Armstrong took the box and was asked about certain confidential despatches sent between the War Office and General Turner, head of supplies in England. Col. Armstrong produced two letters, one from General Turner, saying he was not sending any more troops to France after the Armistice, and the War Secretary's reply that the sending of troops to France must not be discontinued.

When Col. Armstrong had been permitted to step out of the box, Gen. Clark was recalled, and Mr. Preston continued to question him regarding army operation orders and the clause "No further operation order will be issued."

General Clark considered this was quite clear. The orders as issued the previous day would still be in force and thus the objective would remain unchanged, he thought.

Regarding the message mentioned by Lingard, a former witness, General Clark did not believe it had ever been sent. He characterized it as "ridiculous."

No Limit of Armistice.

Witness first heard of the Armistice about 7 a.m., November 11. He had not heard even a shadow of a hint of the Armistice before that.

"Not even gossip?" asked Mr. Preston.

"Oh, well, gossip," replied the General. "I may have heard some gossip, but had my work to do and had no time to waste on gossip."

At the request of Mr. Tilley, counsel for General Currie, General Clark explained the details of the orders which gave the objectives. Defensive precautions were defined as taking up positions at various points along the line reached at 11 a.m.

In response to a further request General Clark explained how the parade in Mons consisted of representatives from each unit. General Currie and General Loomis were present in the afternoon. The day was a gala day in Mons. After the parade General Currie was General Clark's guest for tea before returning to his own headquarters.

After asking permission of His Lordship, Mr. Regan asked the witness if the relief of his troops took place before 11 a.m. Witness attempted to say how the relief was carried out.

Mr. Regan—"Yes or no."

Witness: I can't answer you that way.

To further questions, General Clark explained that his troops continued to advance till 11.00 a.m. To Mr. Tilley, General Clark explained that the mounted troops were in advance of the infantry, who came up with as much despatch as could be expected of foot soldiers.

General Loomis

Major General Sir Frederick Loomis, commander of the 3rd Canadian Division, under whose command the Seventh Brigade was acting, was then called as a witness.

"What were your instructions to your commanders?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"Go ahead and follow the enemy, but do not put men in any undue position that might involve large loss of lives."

"The troops were to press forward and to attack the enemy, but if they met any opposition they were not to risk lives without referring to higher authorities."

"There was to be no shelling of Mons," was the only order concerning that city, said the witness. Question about the parades the Major General said: "I believed there should be a parade, especially in the morning, although General Clark did not want to. I think I urged him to, but did not order him to. The same was true in the afternoon when General Currie arrived. A parade is an essential thing, especially on an occasion such as that was.

General Loomis declared Mons should have been attacked the way it was, as there was a very small loss of life.

No More Boils or Skin Blemishes

Boils and carbuncles usually appear in series—one is followed by two, three, often by eight or ten.

If, when the first painful boil appears, you take Buckley's TRU-BLOOD and apply Buckley's OINTMENT, complete eradication will follow. You will have no more boils.

TRU-BLOOD acts directly on the blood and drives out all poisons—the underlying cause of carbuncles, boils, pimples, rashes, scalp diseases and other skin disorders. Vibrant health and a clear complexion follow the use of TRU-BLOOD. Buckley's OINTMENT, used for external healing, "acts like magic" and makes the skin smooth and soft.

"Since taking your TRU-BLOOD for the eczema from which I suffer, it is working marvels with me," writes a grateful man, in ordering another bottle of TRU-BLOOD and a box of Buckley's OINTMENT.

You can get both these proven Buckley products at any good drug store.

LOOKING AT THE OTHER FELLOW.

Headed by Hon. Chas. Stewart, Minister of the Interior, 38 members of the House of Commons from the Prairie Provinces are to pay a week-end visit to Windsor and other border municipalities.

Edmond G. Odette, M.P. for Essex East, arranged the trip, out of which should come some worth-while results.

Nothing will tend to develop a broad national spirit more quickly than such opportunities as this, affording as they do a chance to obtain first-hand information as to conditions in other parts of the country than our own, and to study the problems that our fellow-Canadians have to solve.

Our country is wide-flung, and this circumstance is responsible for a parochial attitude on the part of many of our members of Parliament that makes it difficult for legislation that is of Dominion-wide importance to be dealt with in terms of the whole country.

Western members, whose interest lies chiefly in the problem pertaining to agriculture, will learn something during their Windsor visit of the difficulties and vexations peculiar to the realm of industry, and thus the jaunt to the border will be of general service.

MUST KEEP ON GUARD.

It is satisfactory to learn during this Save-the-Forest Week that Canada's losses from forest fires last year were the lowest since records have been kept of the economic waste represented by such fires.

The announcement is encouraging, but it should not be regarded as a justification for relaxing our vigilance or abandoning our efforts to protect Canada's forest wealth from destruction.

There is a good deal of luck about fire records.

A community can run along through three or four years of comparatively small fire loss—the average number of alarms perhaps, but no great damage—and then comes one big fire, and the total for that particular year is out of all proportion to the records of the years immediately preceding it.

So it is with forest fires.

One year may be marked by light losses; the next will see a sharp upward jump in the figures.

The Canadian people must continue the campaign to save the forest, for that source of revenue ranks next to agriculture in providing national income.

The conservation of this country's forest resources is in the interest of all Canadians, and all Canadians should co-operate in the work.

A BRAVE MAN GONE.

The fact that Floyd Bennett, one of the most famous of the world's airmen, has died while on a rescue mission on Canadian soil inspires in the people of this country the same sense of grief and shock that were caused when one of Col. Lindbergh's aerial escort was killed in landing at Ottawa during the Diamond Jubilee celebration.

The latter met death during a mission of good-will and friendliness, while Bennett's life has been snuffed out as he was bringing help to fellow-airmen in difficulties.

Bennett's record as a skilful and courageous airman was a matter of world knowledge, the crowning achievement in his career being his flight over the North Pole with Commander Byrd, with whom he shared the honor of being the first to see the Pole from the air.

He was one of Byrd's most trusted lieutenants, and had already been elected as a member of the party whom the commander hopes to lead to the South Pole.

Less than a week ago Bennett soared triumphantly over Peterborough in the big rescue monoplane on its flight to Murray Bay and Greenely Island; to-day the death of the brave flyer is being mourned by thousands who only knew of him because of the newspaper stories of his exploits.

BETTER WATCH THE TREASURY.

If there is any foundation for the report from Ottawa that some members of Parliament are agitating for an increase in their sessional indemnities from $4,000 to $6,000 a year, the movement should be nipped in the bud.

There is every reason to believe that the people of this country are satisfied that their representatives in Parliament are well paid at $4,000 per session.

In fact, it would not be difficult, The Examiner fancies, to discover a strong current of public opinion veering toward the belief that the majority of M.P.'s are overpaid at that figure.

The public reaction toward a proposal to increase the members' indemnities to $6,000, adding over $600,000 a year to the cost of running Parliament, would be violent.

The members behind the agitation should receive no support from the Government, or from the leader of the Opposition for that matter.

They should be led to one side while it is gently explained to them that what they are suggesting is impossible, and we are sure that Hon. James Robb can be counted upon to see that this is done.

But the watchdog of the treasury must be on the alert—raids of this kind have been known to succeed despite vigorous protests from the people who have to foot the bills.

IGNORING THE RADIO LISTENER.

In the infancy of radio a mere squeak from out of the air was marvelous. Fans sat up late "fishing" and were elated if they could get enough sound to distinguish a far-away broadcasting station. But radio is out of its rompers now; the novelty has worn off. Listeners-in want excellence of reception and tone quality; and they want educational programs and entertainment of the best. To clear up the air and provide better reception, a federal radio commission was appointed. Yet congress continues to pass legislation which creates confusion in the air.

The present congress has made the worst blunder in radio legislation of them all. Under the hammering of a minority of small, wildcat stations, championed by southern congressmen, the radio law has been amended to provide for a division of stations, power, and wave lengths equally among five zones. This is to make sure that the south shall have the same broadcasting facilities as the north, east, and west; and that any Tom, Dick or Harry who may have a notion that he would like to play phonograph records or make speeches may go on the air and set up a squeal.

For this absurd portioning out of wave lengths and stations, the argument was advanced that farmers of the south must not be discriminated against in favor of farmers of the north. And it carried, despite the fact that comparatively few farmers of the south have receiving sets. Radio figures show that in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee, fewer than five in a hundred have receiving sets. In Nebraska, 53 per cent. of the farmers have sets, in Kansas, 32 per cent, and in New Jersey, 52 per cent.

Nevertheless, the more heavily populated sections of listeners-in are to be deprived of adequate service. The great cities of the north, where the country's talent gathers and is available for broadcasting, are hamstrung to provide stations, now or at some indefinite day in the future, where there are few listeners-in and there is no talent available that the majority of set owners care to listen to. Isn't it about time that the army of radio set owners impressed upon congress that they are entitled to some consideration?—Milwaukee Journal.

AN AMERICAN VIEW.

(From The Chicago Daily News.)

Publication of the diplomatic correspondence between Washington and Ottawa on the St. Lawrence seaway project, as well as the notes bearing specifically upon the water diversion at Chicago, discloses that the Canadian Government is not ready to proceed with the great improvement which it has approved in principle.

The seaway is declared feasible and desirable, and upon most of the points involved agreement has been reached. But Ottawa raises a number of minor questions and manifestly seeks delay. Its caution and conservatism may be due in a measure to the opposition of the Province of Quebec, and especially of its chief city, Montreal, to the whole seaway project, but there are other and more obscure factors in the situation.

Thus the Dominion Government intimates that the tariff policy of the United States has prevented crystallization of Canadian opinion in favor of the seaway. There is no explicit request for reciprocity or lower duties, but the hint is not without significance. Again, the Dominion Government is not prepared to discuss the question of compensating works designed to counteract the effect of water abstraction which tends to lower the level of the Great Lakes. It says it cannot take any step that would recognize the legitimacy of the diversion of water at Chicago as a permanent policy. It admits with charming frankness that it is more interested in power development than in navigation. And it looks longingly to the water going down the Chicago drainage canal and reflects on the amount of power thus diverted. Secretary Kellogg kindly and pertinently endeavors to ease Canada's pain by pointing out that Canada has been handsomely compensated for that loss through the grant of 36,000 second feet of water at Niagara against 20,000 second feet taken on the American side for power purposes.

The Ottawa Government says that it must consult Ontario and Quebec Provinces on certain matters at issue, that it must await a decision of the Dominion Supreme Court on "the relation between navigation and power," and that it is not in a position to assume heavy obligations in connection with the St. Lawrence project. In short, having gone out to find a set of excuses, it returns triumphantly with a fair supply.

Secretary Kellogg has suggested that in order to save time certain unsettled engineering questions might be taken up concurrently with the diplomatic exchanges looking toward a treaty for joint construction of the seaway, but the Ottawa Government as yet has not signified its desire to avoid needless delays. It may have to reckon with political difficulties, and, if so, naturally it cannot enumerate them candidly. There is, it seems, a movement for an "all-Canadian seaway," as there is—or was—an equally irrational demand for an all-American route to the ocean.

Progress toward a treaty and an order to begin work on the great project is to be slower than friends of the seaway expected. Washington, however, is handling the matter with a thorough grasp of the facts and seems determined to press it to a definite conclusion.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 26 (Canadian Press).—The demand from United Kingdom and Continental buyers for Canadian grain here yesterday was quiet. The only business reported was a sale of a few loads of wheat for May-June shipment.

Owing to the further advance in prices for oat futures and in the spreads for the cash grain the spot market for car lots of Canadian Western oats was strong and prices were advanced one to two cents per bushel. The market for Argentine corn was also strong and two cents per bushel higher at $1.20 per bushel, ex-store in car lots.

The undertone to the market for Spring wheat flour was stronger but there was no further change in prices. The local and export demand was quiet. Winter wheat flour was quiet and firm.

The millfeed trade was moderately active and prices were unchanged. There was no change in standard grades of rolled oats for which the demand was quiet.

There was practically no change in the condition of the local egg market Sunday. The undertone being about steady, but the volume of business showed no marked improvement owing to the fact that dealers in most cases are not disposed to pay present prices for storing purposes, and in consequence only odd cars are being placed. The receipts were 1,637 cases.

The trade in imported beans was quiet owing to the small supplies available on spot, but now that navigation is open for the season 1928 and ocean vessels are commencing to arrive, the prospects are that they will be more plentiful in the near future, when it is expected that prices will ease off some. Car lots of choice white hand-picked beans were quoted at $4.20 per bushel, ex-track, and smaller quantities at $4.50 per bushel, ex-store.

The demand for potatoes was fair and prices were unchanged.

The firmness that developed in the butter market on Tuesday was again in evidence yesterday and prices scored another advance of ¼c per pound.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 26 (Canadian Press).—Big general buying hoisted all grain yesterday to new high price records for the season, with wheat overtopping the best levels for two years past. Bullish domestic wheat crop reports and increasing premiums paid here to obtain wheat available for immediate use were largely responsible. Predictions were current that monthly wheat crop figures for May will make an unfavorable showing as compared with April.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 2¾ cents to 4 cents net higher, with rye 2 cents to 4¼ cents up, corn at ¼ cent to 1⅝ cent advance; oats showing ¾ cent to 1¼ cents gain, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Despite a world of selling to realize profits, highest prices of the day in the wheat market were reached shortly before the close. Late reports of high winds in Kansas added to the stimulus given by word of continued drought southwest and west as well as to the effect of multiplying of adverse field news from states east of the Mississippi. The trend of the advices from soft wheat territory was that estimates on abandoned acreage would apparently have to be raised and condition percentages be lowered.

In many quarters, it was deemed especially significant that the May delivery here was leading the wheat market advance. Purchases of No. 2 red winter wheat for shipment out of Chicago were at 50 cents a bushel premium compared with May, and No. 1 Northern commanded 5 cents over May, the highest premiums yet on the crop. Toward the end of the day, too, particular notice was taken of a statement from a leading private authority that not only is winter killing of winter wheat the heaviest on record, but is now known to be greater than has been previously suggested, with areas in the territory from Ohio to Missouri where the loss is about complete.

Enlarged Eastern shipping demand for corn did much to strengthen the corn market as a whole, besides, weather over the corn belt was too cool for planting operations. Oats were especially affected by an official weekly report showing notable adverse conditions for the new oats crop in Iowa. Sales of seed oats here were made at 74 to 74½ cents, the top price since 1920.

Provisions were firm owing to the upward trend of grain and of hog values as well.

GOD'S MINUTE

If thou seek Him He will be found of thee.—1 Chr. 28: 9.

O Thou Who art Infinite Wisdom, we, Thy short-sighted children desire Thy guidance throughout this day.

We know not what of joy or sorrow it may hold for us, but we believe Thy grace to be sufficient for its needs, and so we pray that we may appreciate and appropriate that grace so freely given. If sorrow be our lot, let that grace comfort us and make us strong to bear it. If joy be ours, let that grace keep us in humbleness and dependence upon Thee.

In the midst of the uncertainties among which we must make our way, hold us by the hand and keep up in Thy paths. Help us to put down that desire we so frequently find taking possession of us, to make explorations here and there, beyond the boundaries Thou hast marked off, and to be content to follow Thee in paths that are safe.

We are depending upon Thee. Thou hast never failed us in the past, and we trust Thee for this day. Guide us safely, through Him Who has loved us and given Himself for us. Amen.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

The reader can scarcely imagine my feelings when I read the message that each one of these tags contained: "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." This was proof that Sir John Moore's family was exterminated. It was not that I am opposed to the Indians getting the geese; no, no. It was only the thought of my special pets all being killed. As for the Indians and Esquimaux getting these birds, I believe all honest, conscientious, thinking men will agree with me that there are no people in America who are more justified in shooting them than these natives up at Icicle Junction with their backs to the wall trying to exist. Personally I feel that the best missionary work I have ever done in my life is the thousands of geese I have attended up and permitted to go back to that isolated country where they were hatched.

Although these tags were mailed from Fort George, Hudson Bay, these Indians may have brought them for three or even five hundred miles, Fort George being their trading post.

Now I have given you quite a collection of rough, unadulterated and unpolished facts about the ways of our lovely Canada geese. And when I call them lovely remember I do not mean because they are so uniform in color; nor is it because they are mostly all Canadian born. Not at all. It is on account of their winning ways and I really want to say Godly principles that in many respects could point the finger of shame at us human beings. This is why I call him "our beautiful Canada goose," and if five per cent. of us Canadians really knew him, the other ninety-five per cent. could not, or would not try to, keep him off one corner of our Union Jack.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Career of Jack Johnson.

In the spring of 1907, after I had had these seven wing-tipped geese three years, this old gander and his sweetheart started housekeeping near the west bank of the north pond, about two hundred feet north of the north door in our factory. The nest was built on the bare ground near the remnant of an old rail fence, giving me a good, clear view of it from the door of the factory at an elevation of about seven feet. It was evident she was an old goose, for she laid six eggs. And many an interesting hour I put in watching this pair of birds, as I could keep one eye on the machinery at the same time.

As this old gander would scrap any approaching enemy we called him Jack Johnson. He would stand about a rod from her, with his long, black, snake-like neck and head straight up for hours at a time; one would hardly notice a move; he looked more like a fixture than a living object. If a hawk or a crow was sighted, he would walk up, right to her nest; but if a dog went galloping over the fields, he would be lying flat, and any creature would almost touch him before it would see what it was up against.

Remember, he sees everything before it sees him; and only those who have seen one do it will believe how they can draw themselves down on the ground without being detected. When in the water it can bury its body under, leaving just the head and neck out and a few of the feathers along the back, and with the neck slightly curved one couldn't believe it anything but a long, wicked-looking snake. I never knew a creature that could put on a wickeder or more poisonous look than these Canada geese can.

One day as I was standing in the factory door with an eye turned towards the goose nest, I saw the old cart-horse, Charley, grazing closer and closer to the nest, and a shudder came over me, fearing he might put a clumsy foot in it. But where is Jack Johnson, the fellow who is always watching; now an enemy is approaching and he is gone! The goose is lying flat on the nest and I can see plainly her black neck stretched out on the ground, and her head curved towards this big horse that weighs over sixteen hundred pounds, and feet on him like pancake griddles. All at once the sight grows doubly interesting, for here is Jack Johnson stretched out flat, and pushing himself along with both hind feet until he is within four feet of Charley's heels. Charley is apparently unconscious of having an enemy on earth as he is quietly grazing closer and closer to the nest, his big knees bending forward for fully a second before he makes steps.

Finally when he gets within three feet of Mrs. Goose she slowly rises up, spreading her wings at him. His big ears go forward at once, and he gives a slight flinch backwards, with both eyes rivetted on the goose. That instant Jack Johnson grabs him on the heels with his beak, and strikes him with both wings at once, while both geese seem to honk at the same time. Really I never saw a horse so nearly scared into fits as he was. His tail went into the air as he uttered a combination of loud snorts, and, with his four feet almost jarring the earth, he ran because he could not fly. Judging from his actions he did not know which end he got bit from, for he first jumped sidewise away from the nest. When he got about a hundred and fifty feet away he halted, and with his head erect and his tail bowed up, it added fully one hundred dollars to his appearance. But when he saw the geese flapping and rejoicing over their victory he started again, and if it had not been for the barn-yard fence possibly he would have been going yet.

As the nest had no protection, the old goose of course had to set in the sun, and she finally took sick and left the eggs. I believe she was sunstruck. At any rate she nearly died. So one day we men went and fought old Jack away and took the six eggs. I put them in warm water and found each contained life, so I made a nest in an old washtub and a Plymouth Rock hen volunteered to act as stepmother. In four or five days all six of the eggs hatched, and I removed the cover and let the light in, and the hen showed no signs of pecking them, but on the contrary started to teach them some chicken language. The next day we removed them in a pen near our back door where there was a nice growth of young clover and so forth. We fed them just a little custard as a coaxer, and these goslings were really tamer than their stepmother. And how they did grow! The rapid way in which young Canada goslings grow is almost beyond human belief. At three days of age I have seen them run through two-inch-mesh poultry netting, and at six or seven weeks they are full grown and only experienced eyes will detect the young from the old at one hundred feet distance.

Now this family of goslings never went five rods from our back door, but were continually gorging themselves on this clover. And of all the big babies I ever saw, young wild geese are the limit. After they were larger than their stepmother, I have often seen them huddle around her, putting their heads under her wings, each raising her a little higher until she would be completely off the ground, making herself into a portable home for the heads of these six goslings.

But the sad thing was to see this old gander, and to hear him continually giving those three searching, sad honks. We put blocks of wood and pieces of fence-rail in the nest, but this broken-hearted old fellow rolled them away. The sick goose stayed in the pond near by the nest, but he strayed all about the premises, constantly hunting for the six eggs or the goslings that he evidently knew were in them, returning every few minutes to his sick sweetheart. He would bow and talk to her and nip a few blades of grass; then off again on the same beat, honking, east, west, north and south. I never saw anything to equal it. If his honking was heard by the six goslings it was of course all Latin to them, as they knew no other parent but this old hen.

Well, the novelty of having these pets near the back door soon grew a little unsanitary; and we found they were a week bigger every seven days; and my brother-in-law's oldest sister gave me to kindly understand, in as pleasant a manner as the English language can possibly be rubbed in, that our back doorstep was not a wild goose roost, and that these geese had to be removed immediately if not a little sooner. So I concluded to take her word for it. But at that time I had only the one big field away from the house. So one bright morning in June, as the sun was just high enough to be sparkling on the dewdrops that were apparently hanging on every blade of grass, I started from the house as usual to build a fire under the boiler at the factory. I called to the goose family, and all followed me through the gate, really quieter than domestic fowls. As I passed through the barnyard I kept on dropping a little feed, and they kept right after me until they came to nice, clean, dewy grass. There I left them and started on. But I hadn't got five rods away before my whole body and nerves were all shaking at seeing and hearing old Jack Johnson coming from the north pond, flapping and honking like a creature that had gone completely mad.

I turned and ran back, fearing he would kill every one. But he beat me there, and thank God he did. For instead of killing them as I feared he might, when he got within about six feet of them he stopped, and with his head and neck straight in the air, his beautiful chest just heaved, and I am not exaggerating in the least when I say that his honks could easily have been heard for a mile and a half. What he said I don't know, but each gosling lay flat on the ground and he put his head on each, apparently caressing and loving them. In turn each got up nd flapped its baby wings.

Just then I cast one eye to the north and here was the old, sick mother coming, falling down with weakness every rod she came. This was the first time I had seen her over the bank of the pond since she left the nest, and the young were now over five weeks old. Old Jack looked and saw her, and ran up and apparently told her all, for she tried in her weak way to come faster. But this dear old father really made several trips back and forth to the young before she got there.

Now comes something worth while for me, and I don't want any reader to ask how it was that this old pair of beauties knew their young. I only know they did know them, that is all. There I stood, bare-headed and bare-footed at the most beautiful time of the day. The whole earth seemed to be transformed into a rainbow of God's pure love, with both ends pouring out upon this one spot; for to see this dear old, broken-hearted father and their sick mother united and knowing their six loved ones which they had never seen; or, in other words, standing and witnessing the reunion of this broken family, caused my brain to fairly whirl in thought, until I melted down, like a little child.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., April 26. — Canadian Press. — Ice chains which have bound twenty-two grain-laden steamers to the St. Mary's River throughout the winter, have been partially broken. The tug favorite late yesterday afternoon reached the steamer Eads, twelve miles below the Sault and towed it through to Detour.

Before the other vessels may move down the river, however, tugs must open a way through the ice to the point where the Eads was wintered. The warm weather may open the way before the end of the week. The ice is still solid above the locks, around Whitefish Point and steamer passage is not expected to be effected until next week.

CHURCHILL BUDGET IS HOTLY ATTACKED

Former Chancellor's Criticize Various Clauses To Taxation Proposals.

LONDON, April 26. — Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill's Budget came under the combined and withering fire of two former Chancellors in the House of Commons yesterday.

It is already obvious that former Chancellor Philip Snowden's statement that it "will arolse the greatest controversy of its kind since the Lloyd-George Budget of 1909" will be fulfilled.

Snowden, who served in the Labor Cabinet, called Churchill's proposal to reduce all local taxation on productive industry by three-quarters "a monstrosity." He added that the plan to abolish all taxes on hundreds of thousands of acres of land now used for agriculture, but increasing in value as town spread is "perfectly outrageous."

Lloyd-George declared the scheme of dealing with taxation in favor of certain basic industries is "thoroughly vicious."

The Chancellor was restive and made frequent interruptions during the attacks upon him. Last night he made a new departure in English politics by speaking over the radio for twenty minutes in favor of the Budget. It is the first time the Government controlled wireless has been used for political speeches except during the general strike.

Churchill's tax of fourpence a gallon on gasoline aroused less immediate opposition than expected. It is already in effect, and the price to the consumer has gone up fourpence and a farthing.

The Daily Herald, Labor's organ, is commencing a campaign against the tax of fourpence a gallon on paraffin, which affects the poor. Labor will apparently concentrate the fight in Parliament against this and against what Snowden calls "the dole to the landlords."

NEW BRITISH SHIP HAS MANY SECRETS

Parts of Cruiser Suffolk Not Shown Even To Members of Cabinet.

LONDON, April 26.—The greatest precautions were taken yesterday to prevent any leak of secrets when three members of the Cabinet, a Lord of the Treasury and 150 members of Parliament inspected the new "hush hush" ship of the British navy, the cruiser Suffolk.

There were three civilians allowed aboard and two admiralty secret service men watched them. The wireless room and torpedo and gun control stations were locked, and the instrument controls covered over.

But an expert told the correspondent that from what he saw, the Suffolk will be at least 13,000 tons when on service, although she will come within the 10,000 ton limit of the Washington treaty when empty of stores, water, oil, ammunition, etc.

Methods of saving weight have been carried to lengths hitherto unknown. There is no brass on board, aluminum being used. Most of the partitions which on other ships are built of steel, are made of three-ply wood.

However, the Suffolk's catapult for launching seaplanes will not be placed on board for a year, although the ship will sail soon for China, where she will be Admiral Tyrwhitt's flagship.

NOTED FRENCH LADY SUBJECT OF PAPER

Vigie Le Brun Was Favorite Portrait Painted in 18th Century.

The story of the life of Vigee LeBrun, noted French artist, was outlined for the members of the Art Study Club at their last meeting, by Mrs. L. J. Pettit, who commenced her talk with the words:

"Like an enchanted fairy tale reads the story of the artistic career of Vigee LeBrun, the French woman portrait painter of the 18th century. Born into the ranks of the middle class of her country, her rise to court favor and close friendship with the Queen would be most remarkable under any circumstances. But when we consider that these honors were showered upon a naively simple and natural girl in her 'teens, the tribute to her singular talent and charm is most extraordinary."

The little Elizabeth Louise was a despair to her teachers, on account of her indifference to grammar and history and fondness for drawing portrait heads in the margins of her text books. This liking, however, was a joy to her father, himself an artist. When he died, the young girl found relief and solace in painting. She derived consolation from her talent throughout her lifetime. "To paint and to live are the same words to me", she was wont to say.

A miserly step-father treated the talented girl in a cruel manner, but she bore her trials in silence and, through her beauty, charming personality and devotion to her art, gradually became a favorite with the wealthy people of the day, who flocked to her studio, while she was yet only fifteen years of age, to have their portraits painted.

A deeply religious nature kept her from perusal of novels and left her in ignorance of love and romance. Therefore, when, at the age of twenty, Jean Baptiste Pierre LeBrun, a noted picture dealer of the day, proposed marriage to her, she had no proper knowledge of the meaning of life. She had no love for him, but her mother counselled acceptance of the proposal and the daughter finally consented. The marriage proved unfortunate, as her husband turned out to be a thoroughly dissolute and unscrupulous rogue.

Vigee LeBrun formed a warm friendship with Queen Marie Antoinette and painted thirty pictures of the ill-fated sovereign. So close was the friendship between them that, at the time of the Revolution and downfall of the Monarchy, she was forced, rather than share a like fate, to fly from Paris, from which she was absent for the next twelve years. But her fame preceded her to Italy and Russia, and she prospered in both countries. However, in Russia she met with a great disappointment with her only daughter, who had accompanied her from France, married a Russian who later turned out to be a very unsatisfactory husband. She returned to France and then went to England for several years, returning once more to France, to there pass the last period of her long life of eighty-seven years.

An interesting outline of the artistic life of the famous painter concluded Mrs. Pettit's paper.

FEW JUSTICES NOW APPOINTED

Ontario Government Centralizes Judicial Authority Among Competent Men.

MAGISTRATES DO WORK.

TORONTO, April 26.—The number of Justices of the Peace in Ontario is gradually decreasing, through the simple process of making few new appointments. The policy of the Government, which in fact was also that of Hon. W. E. Raney when Attorney-General, has been to centralize magisterial duties in the hands of competent men in one or more of the larger centres of a county. These go on circuit when necessary, and while the services of a J.P. are sometimes convenient for the issuing of a summons or warrant, these are usually made returnable at the office of the active magistrate.

These facts are confirmed by Hon. W. H. Price, in comment upon remarks of E. K. Williams, K.C., of Winnipeg ,at the Bar Association dinner. Mr .Williams urged that Government should play fair with the profession, and protect the younger lawyers and their investment, by eliminating unqualified conveyances, J.P.'s and magistrates, who do work which junior members of the bar in rural centres ought to have.

There was a time when the list of J.P.'s in Ontario was very long, and constatnly being added to. Many citizens felt the title and the powers an honor ,and there were occasional instances of the rural "squire" taking an active and useful part in administration of justice. Such a one was the late William Chittick, of Middlesex, who at London for many years conducted court on county cases. Now the whole policy is toward centralization, and many capable urban magistrates have been given wider jurisdiction. The trend is indicated by the fact that a comparatively small number of copies of the Revised Statutes have been sent this year to J.P.'s, the recipients being only those recognized as to some extent actually engaged in judicial work.

MILITARY HONOR FOR DEAD FLIER

Floyd Bennett Will Be Buried in Arlington Cemetery at Washington.

HONORS FROM CANADA.

WASHINGTON, April 26. — All that is mortal of Floyd Bennett, intrepid naval flier, who gave his life in an effort to carry aid to the crew of the German trans-Atlantic airplane Bremen, stranded on Greenely Island, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery on Friday afternoon, with full military honors.

The body of the man who piloted the plane of Commander Richard E. Byrd on the first flight to the North Pole, and was to have been his chief lieutenant on the forthcoming aerial excursion into the Antarctic, will rest near the tomb of the late Admiral Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole.

Aircraft will circle over Arlington as the services are held. High officials of the Government, officers of the army and navy, and all naval fliers on duty here will be numbered among the guests.

Plans approved by Mrs. Bennett and Commander Byrd provide for the departure of the funeral party from Quebec at 1.30 o'clock this afternoon, arriving in New York at 7 a.m. on Friday. The party will be given police escort across New York to the Pennsylvania Station, boarding the Pennsylvania scheduled to leave at 10 o'clock for Washington. Arriving here at three o'clock on Friday afternoon, the body will be taken directly to Arlington.

These plans were worked out at the Navy Department yesterday, and communicated to Commander Byrd on the long distance telephone by T. Douglas Robinson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Commander Byrd conferred with Mrs. Bennett, and then announced approval of the plans.

CANADA ALSO MOURNS.

QUEBEC, April 26 (Canadian Press). — When Floyd Bennett's body starts for its final resting place in Arlington Cemetery, Washington, Canada will mourn with her sister nation over the passing of one of the world's famous airmen—a man who participated in the first flight over the North Pole and who lost his life in an effort to aid others.

The 22nd Regiment of Quebec City will participate in paying Canada's last respects to Bennett. The body will be taken from the hospital and carried through the streets of Quebec on a gun carriage. A firing squad from the regiment under Captain R. Dupuis will fire a volley, and the Last Post will be sounded by the regimental buglers.

Preceding the military ceremonies a service will be held in the hospital attended by the American Consul in Quebec, E. H. Dennison, and at which the American colony here will be well represented. A representative of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province will also attend.

CALLING NEW LAWYER THREATENED BY JUDGE

eon Mr. Regan continued his cross examination of Col. Little. He inquired about how the wounded were looked after. "We had a medical officer attached to our Battalion and stretcher bearers, attached to each company." Col. Little replied, "And if a man were seriously wounded on the field he would first be attended by stretcher bearers and then carried to the regimental aid post, where he would receive his first medical attention, then he would be taken to the field casualty station."

Mr. Regan inquired where the regimental aid post was for the Princess Pats when the unit was before Mons. Witness said, at Jemappes and that he considered it in an adequate position to look after the wounded of his Battalion.

Asked about the Armistice Col. Little said he first heard about it 7.30 a. m. on November 11.

Q.—Did you get a message to let envoys through the front lines?

A.—I did.

Mr. Regan, angrily — "Then you a Lieutenant Colonel in the Canadian army, stand in the witness box and say you knew nothing of the Armistice. Col. Little, raising his voice, "I knew nothing of an Armistice."

Corporal Symons

Corporal Richard Symons, of the Princess Pats, when called to tell of the fighting he did on November nine and tenth said that on the evening of the ninth he and two men went out from Jemappes to scout the territory surrounding Mons. As they were going into a house in the suburbs the enemy opened fire with a machine gun on them but did not get any casualties. Witness and his two scouts returned to headquarters and got bombs and came back and bombed Germans out of their homes.

During the night a group of Germans commenced to argue under a light post, but witness said he and his men were tired and did not want to start any scrap.

Q.—When did you hear of an Armistice?

A.—Not until pretty near dinner time. When the others went to bed that night, I thought the Belgians when they got up in the morning would be glad to see us and start a celebration so I stayed up and did not report early in the morning.

Speaking of the retreat, witness said, "We had put up with a lot of misery to get him on the run and we wanted to keep him at it."

Q.—I suppose you were surprised to hear about an Armistice?

Sore at Armistice

A.—Yes, and I was a little sore, too. We did have an Armistice two years before on Christmas morning in 1916. The Boche and Princess Pats stood in no-man's land for one hour. I suppose it was Christmas and we were feeling good. An Ottawa boy was shot in the shoulder as he got out of the trenches and the Boche officer apologized and said it was a shell-shocked German who did it.

Questioned by Mr. Regan about passing German envoys through the lines, witness said he never heard of it, but on the 11th, after the Armistice, a German car went through Mons, carrying officers. The car carried what witness thought was a white bed sheet.

British Officer on Stand

Capt. Robert A. Steele, a staff officer of 188th British brigade of the first army, traced the movements of his brigade, which was immediately south of the 2nd Canadian division during November 10 and 11. According to the witness' best recollections he said, he heard the Armistice was signed at 8 a. m. on November 11, but that the troops continued their march until eleven o'clock. Asked about casualties, witness said he would not say how many casualties his brigade had on the last two days of the war. Witness said they were numerous.

In cross examination, Mr. Regan questioned Capt. Steele as to whether he had been pumped, drilled, or schooled at the Dunham House before giving his evidence but witness denied any such occurrences.

Major Harold M. Savage, Officer Command the 24th Battery, told of commanding the 24th Battery, told of the afternoon of ninth, the last during the war.

In answer to Mr. Regan's questions, witness said he was the manager of a lumber company in Montreal and previously to taking command of 24th Battery, he was with the 8th Brigade.

Q—"When did you hear about the armistice?"

A—"About eight o'clock."

Mr. Regan: "Are you sure it was not before eight o'clock."

Witness: "I am not going to be pinned down to any set hour ten years after the war. I see no necessity for it."

The Military College.

Witness presented a very hostile attitude to Mr. Regan's further questions which resulted in Mr. Regan getting very little information.

"You have not been through the course at the Military College at the Dunham House?" asked Mr. Regan.

Witness: "I know nothing about any Military College in Canada except the Royal Military College at Kingston. I did not know there was such a college at the Dunham House. I only spoke to Mr. Tilley once about my evidence."

Lt. F. Gregg, V.C., of the R.C.R. was the next witness called and as he commenced to answer his questions Mr. Regan objected to having witnesses put in box and recite a story which they received at the Dunham House.

His Lordship: "Mr. Regan, if you persist in such statements I think I will have to ask one of the other counsels for the defence to conduct the case."

On the afternoon of the tenth the Germans shelled his unit, which was before Mons, with shrapnel and gas shells. Lt. Gregg said he was acting as Adjutant and knew the orders given to the R.C.R. Witness told Mr. Regan that he went over the evidence he was to give with the plaintiff's counsel once and with no one else. "Our orders were to continue the advance towards Nimy and the suburbs of Nimy which were north of Mons. During the night of the ninth a company was detached from us to be held as a reserve to work under orders from the brigadier. Later it entered Mons from the south. B Company entered Mons and the other companies reached their objective at Nimy.

Mr. Regan wanted to know why B Company went from its course to enter Mons but witness could not answer.

Q—Did they have any casualties?

A—Two wounded.

Q—Were there any killed?

A—No.

Q—When did you hear of the Armistice?

A—Between 7.45 and 8.15 on November 11.

Heard of an Armistice.

Q—Is that the first you heard of an armistice.

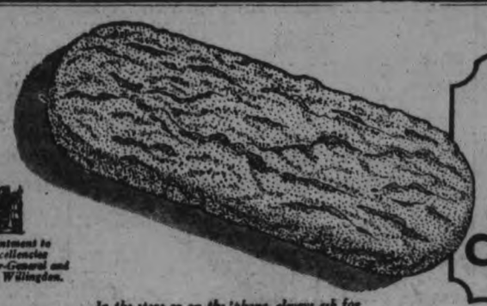
A—No.

Mr. Regan: "Well we are thankful we got one witness for the plaintiff to say he heard of an armistice."

Witness: "I said an armistice, not the armistice. We had no reason to feel that it meant anything definite and I would say there was no serious talk about an armistice. First gossip I heard was 48 hours previous to the signing of the armistice. The company commander after being notified of the armistice would not know they had the discretion of going on with further fighting but at 10 o'clock they were ordered to report for billets in Mons", said Lieut. Gregg.

Mr. Parmenter rose to question the witness about Mr. Regan's remarks about a military college.

"I have been in Cobourg for several days and talked pro and con about the war with many of my old friends, but as to the movements of the R.C.R. three nights ago I told Mr. Tilley what I knew without any interruptions," he replied.



By appointment to their Excellencies the Governor-General and Viscountess Willingdon.

JUDGE HUYCKE PRESENTS CASE

First Witness Before Commissoin Investigating Judges' Request For Higher Salaries.

MUST KEEP UP POSITION.

OTTAWA, April 25. — (Canadian Press.)—Judge Huycke, of Peterborough, president of the Ontario County Judges' Association, was the first witness to-day before the Special Commons Commission on Judges' salaries. The request of the county court Judges was in brief for a minimum annual salary of $9,000 or at least three-quarters of whatever salaries were granted to Judges in higher courts.

Judge Huycke emphasized the importance of the work of the County Court judges who lived among the people to whom they administered justice and equity. These men were looked up to by the community and their positions must be maintained.

There were two cases within the past few days of judges resigning from the bench to accept positions with higher salaries.

OWNERSHIP OF OUR FORESTS

The people of Canada still own outright about fifty per cent of the total standing timber in the Dominion; this, however, consists of the less valuable stands. The more valuable and accessible timber in the public forests, amounting to about forty per cent. is under license to operators.

MAY ATTEMPT HOP IN MAY

Lieutenant Paris After Final Tests, Plans Two Hops.

MOTORS EXCEED ESTIMATES

PARIS, April 26.—From the wide stretches of the Seine at Sartrouville, near Paris, France's first seaplane designed for a transatlantic trip, made a successful flight yesterday, the last of a series to determine the worthiness of the craft for the transoceanic adventure. After coming ashore, Lieutenant Paris, the young naval officer who will pilot the plane in its attempt to cross the Atlantic, said he was convinced that the ship can reach New York in two hops instead of three as originally announced.

Another four weeks will be consumed in careful checking of the two 500-horsepower Hispano-Suiza motors and then Lieutenant Paris with a mechanic and a wireless expert will take off for the Azores There a brief halt will be made, just long enough to examine and refuel, and then, weather permitting, the Statue of Liberty will start a few hours later.

"I do not like to fix a date," said Lieutenant Paris yesterday but I am sure we will be on our way before the end of May. The French navy is backing our undertaking to the fullest extent and I am confident of being the first to cross in a hydroplane."

The ship, which has not yet been named rose gracefully and without apparent effort yesterday, and large crowds watched from the shore of the river. Among those who were anxiously awaiting the outcome of the test were officials of the French marine and a number of brother officers of Lieutenant Paris.

Can Cruise 2,500 Miles.

After circling the Seine the ship took off cross country and in fifteen minutes returned to its base. The engines developed 1,200 horsepower in the tests.

The cruising radius of the ship is more than 2,500 miles and the speed exceeds 125 miles an hour. The machine is a biplane and one of the engines is a tractor ,while the other is a pusher.

An almost complete wireless apparatus with a 600-mile radius will permit the ship to keep in close touch with transatlantic shipping, the route of careful study, and Lieutenant Paris follow as closely as possible. The problem of a forced descent upon the rough Atlantitc has been the subject of careful study and Lieutenant Paris believes he and his aides have perfected a watertight cabin into which the crew can retire for an almost indefinite period should the ship be forced down.

Navy Backs Two Ventures.

With its special construction Lieutenant Paris believes the plane can ride all but the most tempestuous waves. The end of May is usually the calmest time on the Atlantic and with any kind of luck at all the naval officer feels that he and his crew would be comparatively safe until their wireless brought the nearest ship to their aid.

Lieutenant Hurel, who will go as navigator and mechanic is engaged in an intensive study of Atlantic currents. He formerly was a navigator in the French navy and is familiar with the Atlantic.

The French navy is putting great faith in the Paris expedition, having advanced a large sum of money for the consruction of the plane.

Experts say that it is the finest flying boat ever built on the Continent.

Another French navy transatlantic expedition headed by Captain Guilbaud will be prepared to start almost immediately after that of Lieutenant Paris. If for any reason Lieutenant Paris fails to reach New York Captain Guilbaud will fly over the same route but if Lieutenant Paris is successful Captain Guilbaud's expedition will attempt to fly from Paris to Buenos Aires or Rio de Janeiro.

TIPSTAFF ENJOYS UNIQUE PRIVILEGE

He Alone May Arrest Persons Charged With Contempt of Court.

LONDON, April 26.—(By the Canadian Press).—Why was it that a court tipstaff arrested a boy, Henry Eustace, recently for contempt of court instead of a policeman making the arrest? What is a tipstaff? The office of tipstaff has existed for centuries. The tipstaff is an official of the High Court appointed by the Lord Chancellor, and it is his duty to arrest and to convey to jail any person guilty of contempt in the precincts of the Law Courts. He carries as part of his official paraphernalia a small ebony staff about 18 inches long, similar to a round ruler, and tipped with a golden crown — hence the name tipstaff.

Ordinarily it is not possible to distinguish the tipstaff from the busy crowds that throng the grey cloisters of the Law Courts. His staff, if he carries it at all, may be concealed in his pocket. But on ceremonial occasions he appears in full regalia. You may see him at the Lord Mayor's Show, or on the 12th of October (the day when the legal year commences and the Courts are opened), marching at the head of the judges' procession, brilliantly decked in gold lace and carrying before him the tipstaff with its head of shining metal.

The tipstaff is a unique official in the English Judiciary, and it is he alone who has the power to arrest one who is guilty of contempt of the High Court. He may, in the execution of his duties, and in pursuit of the offender, travel all over the country. The exact origin of his staff is unknown, but it probably owes its use to the fact that fear of the rod, or staff, is inherent in human nature.

Lockhart's Car Hurtles Into Air After Tire Blowout—Driver Killed.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 26.—(Canadian Press).—Frank Lockhart, youthful racing driver, was catapulted to his death yesterday when a tire blew out while his automobile was speeding 200 miles an hour in an attempt to set a new record for land travel over the sands of Daytona Beach.

The accident occurred as Lockhart approached the grandstand. His Black Hawk Special swerved back and forth, rolled out of control 350 feet and left the ground.

Two photographers and a newspaperman narrowly missed injury as the car hurtled over their heads to land again and bounce sidewise 550 feet before taking another 300-foot jump and hurling Lockhart to the sands.

Pitched from the driver's seat, Lockhart was flung 30 feet. Spectators found him stretched out, face downwards, bleeding from nose and mouth and breathing heavily. He died before a hospital was reached.

Missed Death by Inches.

Notis Porter, official timer of the American Automobile Association, described how the two photographers and T. R. Gill, Associated Press correspondent, missed death by inches.

"While the car was in the air on its mad leap, it hit one of the photographers. The other photographer ran, leaving his machine. Gill was close to this man, and the automobile passed over his head, not above 18 inches. I do not know how he escaped injury."

Hans Orte, Daytona Beach, was the photographer struck. He suffered bruises.

Many of the spectators believed Lockhart might have broken the record had he not met with the accident.

Ridges in the beach were blamed in part for the disaster. The beach was said to have been in the worst condition of the past week, with parallel ridges left by adverse wind conditions.

Lockhart was driving the same automobile in which he narrowly escaped death February 22 last when it went out of control and dashed into the ocean.

Witnesses Husband's Death.

Mrs. Lockhart witnessed her husband's death. The Lockharts lived at Indianapolis. They had no children.

Lockhart, who was said to have held all the American records from one to a hundred miles on circular courses, had his heart set on winning the world mark for the mile straightaway record on racing tracks, being unknown until he won the speedway races at Indianapolis in 1925.

THREE SPEAKERS TO ATTEND BANQUET

Messrs. Dollar, Birks and Clarke Will All Be Present.

William Birks, head of the firm of Henry Birks and Sons, Ltd., Montreal, who, it was felt, on account of the death of his father, would be prevented from attending the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce, to be held in the Empress Hotel to-night at 6.30, has again signified his intention of coming, along with A. M. Dollar, President and W. M. L. Clarke, secretary of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

These gentlemen are attending a noon luncheon of the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce and will motor to Peterborough during the afternoon. They will remain in Peterborough overnight and proceed to Toronto Friday morning.

Mr. Birks is chairman of the executive of the Canadian Chamber, and has for many years been actively engaged in Chamber of Commerce work in Montreal.

Mr. Dollar, in addition to Chamber of Commerce work, has extensive private interests being President of the Canadian-American Shipping Company whose head office is at Vancouver and which has agencies in various parts of the world.

Mr. Dollar is also a past president of the Vancouver Board of Trade which position he occupied in the year 1924.

In a letter to the secretary of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, dated April 22nd, sent from Saint John, N.B., where Mr. Dollar and Mr. Clarke have been making a short tour of the Maritimes, Mr. Clarke writes on behalf of Mr. Dollar, in part as follows:

"Mr. Dollar and myself will be proceeding to Peterborough on Thursday, 26th of April, from Oshawa, where a luncheon is being arranged for our present. May I say how much Mr. Dollar is looking forward to meeting the members of your own organization, and how greatly he appreciates the courtesy of your Chamber in arranging the evening dinner."

BIG BROTHER PLAN PROVING SUCCESS

Large Percentage of Boys Helped in Australia Staying on Land.

LONDON, April 26.—(By the Canadian Press).—Richard Linton, a retired merchant of Melbourne, Australia, who with his wife arrived in London recently, is the founder of "The Big Brother Movement" in Australia. The movement is now on a firm footing and has proved the value of after-care of boy immigrants.

Ninety-eight percent of the lads who have settled down under the care of the Big Brothers are enthusiastic as to their future careers on the land and are determined to stick to it, Mr. Linton says. During his stay here he is conferring with the London committee of the movement on future developments. Since 1925 more than 1,300 boys have been sent to Australia and these have been met and looked after by the Big Brothers drawn from the Commonwealth's leading citizens.

Mr. Linton says: "There are now settled 499 boys in Victoria, 467 in New South Wales, and 100 in South Australia. Since they arrived they have filled out tremendously. They are young men already in size and weight and sense. The ambition of most of them is to establish a home for their parents and to get land for themselves."

Instancing the thrift of the boys Mr. Linton says that 246 boys in Victoria had saved during six months an average of £14 2 shillings, and 114 boys during 12 months an average of £22 10 shillings. One boy, who went out in December, 1925, had £156 in the bank and has insured his life for £500. In some cases the boys sent their savings to their parents.

"The Big Brothers have stood up to all their promises, and they often travel hundreds of miles to see their charges. I am looking forward to meeting many of the parents during my stay. I am satisfied that the British boy, who likes adventure, has the same spirit as Australia's pioneers; it only wants developing," Mr. Linton says.

Mr. Linton is a member of the Victoria State parliament.

Sensational revelations of a new principle in the science of thermodynamics have just been made in Paris by Prof. Raoul Pictet, the veterans scientist. In the course of a lecture he showed that it is possible to construct a motor which will utilize the entire quantity of heat available from any given source, whereas the most efficient steam engine at present cannot utilize more than 20 percent.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 27, 1928.

Favorable aspects rule today, according to astrologers who advise activity in all worth while enterprises.

Land deals and whatever concerns real estate are subject to the best planetary influences while this configuration prevails.

All forms of industry appear to be under a sway stimulating and profitable. Prosperity is to be great in the United States.

Farmers certainly should benefit in the coming summer, for all the aspects are read as favorable to them.

The seers foretell co-operatoin on a large scale and close association in interest with government experts.

There is a sign favorable to all the business affairs of women and those past middle age are supposed to be especially benefitted by today's aspects.

It is believed to be lucky to deal with women under this rule which makes for profit.

This should be an auspicious wedding day since the stars appear to promise progress and prosperity.

Men may be foolishly susceptible to romance at this time and the wise will refrain from impulsive wooing.

This is a good day for physical exercise and women who desire to be sylphlike will do well to train while the stars are posited as they are in this configuration.

This evening will be favorable for the opening of new plays and the introduction of new players.

Training for the drama is to be of wide interest and astrologers predict artists in the future who represent many-sided gifts.

Persons whose birthdate it is have before them a year in which friendships will count for much.

Children born on this day may have the power of interesting older persons in their careers. They usually are assured of success.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE WANT TO SUCCEED

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Success is one of the greatest motives in human life. We all want to succeed. Success is like happiness. Everybody knows what it is. We all want it, yet no two of us want the same kind.

We will understand why everyone is in love with success if we remember that, success is nothing more or less than simply getting what you are after. If we undertake anything we like to carry the thing through to its logical conclusion. This reacts favorably upon ourself esteem and we are elated. Success in any enterprise affords satisfaction.

The instinctive drivers behind success are the social impulse and the self-regarding instincts and sentiments. We crave the plaudits of the crowd.

There are other reasons why we like to succeed. The cheers of the crowd mean less than the satisfaction a man derives in mastering a situation by overcoming opposition and difficulties.

Take the instances of breaking a colt, inventing a new type of flying machine, learning a foreign language, becoming an expert swimmer or boxer. There are a thousand activities that we engage in for the sheer joy of mastery. Once we start in we hate to give up and acknowledge defeat. It is a challenge to carry on until we master the situation.

We want to succeed because success stands for the uninterrupted and smooth ongoing of our impulses in the realization of specific ends. Opposition constitutes a challenge which arouses the fighting instinct and enlists every resource in the service of our objective. And the greater the difficulties overcome and the more we have to show for our efforts, the sweeter will be the satisfaction we derive from success.

On Receipt of a Boquet of Flowers From St. John's Chancel Guild

Welcome, as spring time returning again
The dawning of morn, or sunshine, after rain.
Welcome as friends whom the bosom holds dear
Sweet flowers you came, with your message of cheer
For the warm breath of friendship, in fragrance distills
From these lovely tulips and gay daffodills.

Each petal I prize, as the symbol, and sign,
Of the loving living remembrance, that ever is mine,
And these pure floral gems, through loves clear lens seen
Have brightened a day, that else, darksome, had been
And cold must the heart be, all feeling beyond,
To their gentle appealing, that would not respond.

Sole relics of Eden, untouched, by sin's blight,
To the eyes, and the heart, both, a Joy and Delight
They whisper of peace, and glad days yet to be
When Hope's rainbow shall shine, over sorrow's dark sea
And to kind, thoughtful friends, and these beautious flowers
I owe, the unalloyed pleasure of many bright hours.

ROBINS TAKE THIRD STRAIGHT

Henline's Pinch-Hitting in Ninth Breaks Up Pitchers' Battle.

DEFEAT PHILLIES 3-2

NEW YORK, April 26.—(Canadian Press).—Butch Henline's pinch triple with two out in the ninth broke up a tight pitchers' battle in the home team's favor at Brooklyn yesterday, and gave the Robins their third straight victory over the Phillies. Henline hit Sweetland's first offering to centre field, scoring Statz from third and Bancroft from first with the runs which gave Brooklyn a 3 to 2 edge.

Ehrhardt held the Phillies to five hits, while Sweetland was giving the Robins eight safeties—and seven bases on balls. Tyson hit a homer in the fifth.

Reds Defeated Cardinals.

Red Lucas went the full route to pitch the Reds to a 5 to 4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in seventeen innings at Cincinnati yesterday, the longest National League game this season.

Reinhart, the third Cardinal pitcher to see service, kept the Reds' batters in hand from the eighth inning until a double by Picinich with Dressen on second ended the game with two out when the winning run was scored. The rest took three runs from four bunched hits off Frankhouse in the fifth and scored another on two hits in the sixth.

Bottomley drove a home run into the right field bleachers to score himself and High, after Douthit had scored on Frisch's fly. St. Louis had scored in the third and the rally tied the score.

Pirates Even Series.

The Cubs' offense and defense fell to pieces and the Pirates evened the four-game series at Chicago by scoring a ten to nothing win.

Grimes held the Cubs to six scattered hits, while Pittsburgh banged out twelve. Every Pirate got at least one hit. Charlie Root started out for Chicago, but was driven from the mound by a shower of hits and his mates' errors. It was Root's third defeat of the season.

Teams In Battle For League Lead

LONDON, England, April 26 (Canadian Press Cable). — Huddersfield Town is in a real battle now with Everton for the leadership of the English League, First Division. While Huddersfield Town were playing in the cup final last Saturday, Everton stole ahead. Huddersfield had a chance yesterday to reduce Everton's lead, amounting to three points, but could not take it. They were beaten by Burnley by one goal to nil on their own grounds. They have still two games in hand over Everton. Manchester United, in grave danger of relegation to the Second Division, imprpoved their position by a win over Sunderland. Manchester City drew up level on points with Leeds United for supremacy in the Second Division by beating them yesterday. The United are ahead on goal average.

LEAFS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

Toronto Club Takes First 9-2 —Skeeters Capture Night-cap 11-5.

READING WINS 8-7.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., April 26. — (Canadian Press).—Toronto and Jersey City split a double-header here yesterday afternoon, the Leafs taking the first game by a score of 9 to 2 and the Skeeters capturing the night-cap, which went seven innings, by agreement, 11 to 5.

The Leafs finished out the second game under protest. Jacobson juggled a fly in centre in the fourth inning, and Umpire Fyfe ruled it a muff. Toronto insisted he held the ball long enough to score the put-out, however.

The first game had been lost, Manager Gilhooley of the Jerseys switched his entire lineup and immediately got results.

Take Final Game.

A five-run rally in the eighth inning, topped by Bill Conroy's two-bagger that cleared the filled bases, gave Reading an 8 to 7 victory over Buffalo in the final game of the series here yesterday. Buffalo outhit the Keys, 16 to 7, but the Bison pitchers were very erratic. George Quellich hit a home run with Hawks on first base in the third inning.

Rochester Defeated.

NEWARK, N. J., April 26.—(Canadian Press).—Jacques Fournier's home run drive into the right field bleachers in the ninth inning with one on enabled the Bears to defeat Rochester here yesterday 3 to 1.

Two were out when Fournier clouted Halsmith's twister into the empty seats in the outer garden.

Zubris pitched great ball for the Bruins, allowing but three scattered hits. Grabowski started for Rochester, but when he showed signs of wildness in the seventh was yanked in favor of Smith. Kingdon led the attack for the Bruins with three hits. Lutzke played a spectacular game at third.

Break Even.

BALTIMORE, April 26.—(Canadian Press). — Montreal and Baltimore broke even in a double-header here yesterday, giving Montreal a 2 to 1 lead on the series. The Royals won the first of the day's game with a 5 to 2 score, but the Orioles came back in the second to win 4 to 2. The errors were the deciding factor in both games. An error by both Archdeacon and Brower enabled the visitors to garner on the first game and in turn Fewster's error in the second gave the victory to the Royals.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

The Lock Works Hardball Intershop League will get under way about May 24. A double schedule is being used and the winners of each half will play off for the Chicettie Cup. Three teams have entered and will be managed by G. Connors, J. Burke, and F. De Carlo.

The Midgets of St. Peter's will hold a practice at the Sacred Heart grounds, if the weather permits on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. The Juveniles will practise at 3.45 p.m.

Bill Prindible will be at the helm of the City League this year. For the past few seasons he has been working in every capacity but did not hold the official title of president. Five teams have decided to enter, but a strong effort will be made to increase the number to twelve before the league meets again. City Lague games have drawn some large crowds in the past and as Alex. Kay says: "It has had its ups and downs but it is now on the eve of a great revival," and by working in co-operation with the league officials, eeryone can do their share to boost the league. With men such as Alex. Kay and Jack Deannard backing the league to their utmost and who have been intimately connected with this brand of sport for some years, the association cannot but succeed in their work. Doctor Craig has been a capable president for the past three years and is greatly interested in the boys' sport, but being already burdened with so many other offices which require considerable time, he found it impossible to accept the nomination again. However, fans can be assured that he still retains a strong interest in the league.

The 5-mile walking race, in connection with the 24th of May meet in Lindsay, under the auspices of the Monarch Club, will take the course which the local club has used before—starting at the Armouries, down Kent, along Lindsay to Durham, West on Durham to Angeline, back to Kent and down Kent street. This course will be travelled twice, so the competitors will be in town throughout their 5-mile race.

This race has caused great excitement and interest wherever it has been staged, and for Lindsay it will be a novelty. The Central Y.M.C.A. Walkers' Club, the largest of its kind in Canada, has promised full support and with West End "Y" Club will furnish most of the competition. Such sterling performers as "Hank" Cleman, "Reggie" Howell, "Charlie" Barnes, "Ron" Hayson and Joe Mahon will be up among the leaders all the way. All of the above men are old-timers at Ontario and Canadian Championships and if the "walk" was an Olympic test this year would certainly furnish a team to pick from. One of the judges for this event is "Jake" Freeman who represented Canada at the 1924 Olympics.—Lindsay Daily Post.

Oshawa's prospects in the Central Ontario Baseball League also appear bright, and the latest good news to come over the wire is that F. McCallum, the star Goodyear player, has had his transfer ratified by the special committee to which his and other cases were referred. In Stan Burgoyne, the locals have acquired one of the best coaches in Canada, being equally as well known in hockey and baseball. He has coached some of the best amateur teams in Canada. Walter Schultz, the newly appointed manager of the team, has also had valuable experience in his position, and with the many players who are now in Oshawa, this should also be an Oshawa year in baseball. Kingston have been made jubilant by the announcement that Bus Britton will again line up with the "Ponies." Britton is considered one of the best players in the circuit. Both the lacrosse and baseball teams will soon be out to practise, the lacrosse team hoping to indulge in their first work-out within a few days. The weather has been anything but productive of enthusiasm for summer sports.—Oshawa Daily Times.

YANKEES WIN FROM SENATORS

Champions Hit Hard Behind Pipgrass to Win 12-4 Victory.

TAKE EARLY LEAD

NEW YORK, April 26.—(Canadian Press).—The New York Yankees hit hard behind Pipgrass' good pitching yesterday, and again defeated the Washington Senators, the score being 12 to 4.

The Yankees knocked out Firpo Marberry in three innings, scoring three runs in the first and four more in the third. They continued to hit Van Alstyne freely, Durst Koenig and Lazzeri leading the charge.

In the sixth inning, Goslin stole second while Rice occupied the bag, but got away with it when Grabowski hit Rice with the ball as Sam tried to make third. It was scored as a double steal.

Detroit Wins From Chicago.

An error by Marty McManus in the 7th inning robbed Earl Whitehill, Tiger southpaw, of a shutout in the fourth game of the series with the Chicago White Sox at Detroit, the Tigers winning 3 to 2. McManus fumbled Barrett's grounder, which started a Chicago rally, ending after two runs had been scored.

With the score tied in the eighth inning, Heilmann scored on Hargrave's single with the winning run. Grady Adkins, White Sox recruit pitcher, performed well, allowing seven hits to Detroit's nine.

Cleveland Evens Series.

Cleveland evened the series with the Browns at St. Louis by a 7 to 3 score. A collection of runs in the first and fifth off Stewart and Crowder gave the Indians a commanding lead which the Browns were unable to overcome.

While winning, the Indians slipped into second place in the standings when the Yankees also won. President E. S. Bernard of the American League witnessed the game.

BELANGER IN GREAT SHAPE

"Frenchy" Impresses in His Training Work for Durand Bout.

TORONTO, April 26.—Frenchy Belanger has not only sharpened up his boxing skill but his hitting ability as well, according to the experts who have seen the sensational youngster working out at the Union Jack Club. He is delivering his punches with much more precision than ever before and apparently has profited to the ... by his trip to Jack Britton's camp. In his present form he would undoubtedly make Frankie Genaro or anyone else step to town to take his measure, and his handlers, including Dave Garrity, are as confident as they can possibly be that he will whip Clovis Durand, the Canadian champion by courtesy, when they clash on Friday night at the Arena Gardens. Whether he boxes up to the expectations of his immediate following or not it is on the cards that it will be a bout worth while. Durand is a most capable performer, an experienced ringster, and the possessor of a somnolent punch. He has shown that he can hold his own in any company, and his records speaks for itself.

There is every indication that the attendance on Friday will be as large, if not larger, than that which marked Belanger's bout with Ernie Jarvis or Genaro. The demand for accommodation has been an eye-opener to Promoter Playfair Brown of the Shamrock Club. Durand is due to arrive today from Montreal. Reports from his manager, Raoul Gadbout, are to the effect that the French-Canadian was never in better shape.

The whole card promises action, with Dug Lewis meeting a first-class welter in Ruby Cedar from Pittsburg, who is a cut above the opponents that the dusky battle has been called upon to meet of late. Steve Rocco is also tackling a tougher proposition than he has had to encounter in Kid Vick, the smart flyweight from Buffalo. George Barber takes on Ozzy Bodkin of Detroit and Harry Hennings backs into Jack Golden. With the exception of the main bout, which is 10 rounds, the other contests will be limited to six rounds or less.

Gavuzzi Again Leading Derby

SULLIVAN, Mo., April 26. — Peter Gavuzzi of Southampton, England, yesterday wrested leadership in the transcontinental foot race from Andrew Payne, the youthful Claremore, Okla., runner.

Gavuzzi finished second yesterday, traversing the 42.9 miles from Rolla, in 6:00:13. Payne was fourth, reaching the control point in 7:09:04. Gavuzzi with elapsed time of 337:08: 55 for 2012.2 miles, now has a lead of 32 minutes and 42 seconds over Payne.

Philip Granville, Hamilton, Ont., finished first yesterday in 5:45:29.

Four Straight for Athletics.

The Athletics found the Boston Red Sox sterner opposition at Philadelphia, but registered their fourth straight victory by a score of 3 runs to 2. Ty Cobb scored the winning run in the sixth inning by hitting a double, advancing on an infield out and tallying on Cochrane's sacrifice fly to centre. Lefty Grove fanned seven of the Red Sox in turning in his second triumph of the season.

PRIORY PARK WINS.

J. B. Joel's Horse Winner of City and Suburban Handicap.

EPSOM, Eng., April 26 (Canadian Press).—J. B. Joel's Priory Park, by Roch Savage out of Chatham Second, won the City and Suburban Handicap yesterday.

Sol Joel's Fohaunan was second and Capt. Hutchinson's The Mohawk third. Priory Park won by a neck and there was a length between the second and third horses. Eighteen ran. The betting was twenty to one, and one hundred to six. The race was over a mile and a quarter and had a value of two thousand pounds.

More than $100,000,000 is the vast sum which Great Britian spends on golf each year.

Judge Orders Decision in Favor of Former Heavyweight Champion.

APPEAL ANNOUNCED.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Federal Judge John C. Knox of the United States District Court last night ordered a verdict in favor of Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, on all counts in the suit brought by Jack Kearns, once his manager, charging breach of contract.

Judge Knox ordered the verdict for the defendant when the jury, after four hours and 22 minutes, determined that a valid contract existed between Kearns and the former heavyweight champion between 1923 and 1926, but had been invalidated in July of 1925 when the parties severed business relations and settled their joint affairs. These two questions alone were submitted to the jury by the court.

On the motion of Arthur F. Driscoll, attorney for Dempsey, Judge Knox promptly directed the jury to render a verdict for the defendant on four of the five causes of action in Kearns's suit. The first cause of action relating to a match between Dempsey and Harry Wills, which never took place, was ruled out by the court two days ago. Causes 2, 3 and 4 represented moneys Kearns alleged were due him from Dempsey's share of the proceeds of the former champion's losing battle with Gene Tunney in 1926. The fifth cause embodied Kearns's demand for a share in the proceeds in an exhibition tour Dempsey made in 1924 and 1925. The Judge had ruled that the two questions placed before the jury were the only ones of fact in the case and the remainder were only of law and for him to decide.

Arthur N. Sager, head of Kearns's legal array, announced an appeal will be taken to a higher court on the ground that the jury had recognized the validity of Kearns's three-year contract with Dempsey. An action similar to this one now pending in Philadelphia will be dropped immediately, he said.

Following the verdict Dempsey held an impromptu reception in the courtroom, shaking hands with the jurors and a host of friends who had waited through the evening for the verdict. Kearns stopped in the back of the courtroom a moment and then left the room alone.

The case is expected to go to the jury to-day.

Rickard, promoter of the Dempsey-Tunney bout at Philadelphia on September 13 1926, identified a contract signed by himself and Kearns for a Dempsey-Tunney match. This contract was dated August 18, 1925, but Rickard testified it was signed "in the first part of April, 1926" after Rickard and Dempsey had agreed by telegraph on a match with Tunney.

These exchanges of telegrams which included two bearing the name of Kearns and sent to Rickard early in April, 1926, asking for a Dempsey-Tunney match, threw a new light on the promotion of the Dempsey-Tunney match and the suspension of the efforts to promote the Dempsey-Harry Wills match.

The telegrams were introduced by the defense to show that the contract executed by Dempsey and Kearns for three years after August 3, 1923, was not valid and that Dempsey did not recognize Kearns as his manager.

Rickard will be summoned before the state athletic commission as soon as the Dempsey-Kearns trial is completed, to explain a telegram admitted into evidence in which Rickard wired Dempsey, "you would have no trouble choosing your own judges and referee in New Work State to insure against any favoritism."

"There is no individual, other than the three members of the commission who has anything whatever to do with the selection of referees and judges for boxing bouts in this state" said Chairman James A. Farley. "Nor does any man but Commissioners Muldoon,Brower and myself know of the assignments of referees and judges until these officials take their places in or at the ring the night of the bout. To say that any man could influence a selection is ridiculous."

MONTE BLUE SCORES AS "ONE ROUND HOGAN"

For the second time in his screen career Monte Blue appears as a professional fighter. "Hogan's Alley" brought him high acclaim from film fans and fight fans everywhere, and in the part of "One Round Hogan" he wins new laurels. "One Round Hogan," besides being a fight story is a love story, which may be much the same thing.

He is cast as the son of a one-time champion heavyweight played by Jim Jeffries. Young Hogan's best pal is Ed Davis, touted by "Big Joe" Morgan, his manager, as the greatest of white hopes. Hogan, emulating his friend, trains for the ring secretly and one day meets Davis's sister Helen, who detests the ring and pleads with Hogan to urge her brother to give up fighting. This he promises to do. "Big Joe" Morgan puts up One Round Hogan against Herman Lecky, a promising comer. Before the fight the latter is drugged by Big Joe's orders. The crowd yells for Hogan and Joe insists that he fight with Davis. Upon securing Davis's promise that he will give up the pugilistic game, if he does not last more than one round, Hogan consents to fight. He knocks Davis out, and Joe, in turn ,deals the loser a blow under the heart, which kills him. Hogan is tried for manslaughter, and though acquitted, Davis's sister still thinks him guilty. Hogan himself believes that he caused Davis's death ,and in spite of his father's pleading refuses to fight again. A disgruntled follower of Big Joe divulges the truth about Davis's death. This gives new courage to young Hogan. Helen urges him on to avenge her brother's death, and, in a fight with Big Joe, he smashes a terrific uppercut to the bully's jaw, which drops him. All ends as things should end! "One Round Hogan" is a rousing drama, and it is cuean and big and human. Don't miss seeing it. Monte Blue at his hard-hitting best!

AT THE CAPITOL.

HAROLD LLOYD IN "SPEEDY."

A box office line up, a row of cars that extended for a couple of blocks, and a packed house at the Capitol Theatre last night, all attested to the popularity of Harold Lloyd the bright young man of the movies, whose ingenuous type of acting makes him a laugh getter par excellence.

"Speedy" lives up to its name in an odd fashion. It isn't a motor car or an airplane that forms the main vehicle for swift motion this time. It is a pair of white horses and an old-time horse car that goes careering madly through New York's streets. The thrills are only pictured ones, but the manner in which Harold Lloyd guides the onrush of the galloping steeds is enough to bring the perspiration to any brow.

And he takes Babe Ruth for a taxi cab ride that causes the enormous "Babe" to lose several pounds of flesh.

The whole picture is filmed in the manner habitual to Harold Lloyd — happy-go-lucky, feckless and inconsiderate of consequences. This type of acting makes for an atmosphere of reality that brings an added charm to the hilarious sections and an added thrill to the speedy ones. Harold ("Speedy") Swift is a soda-water jerker who loses his job in a manner all his own. Undaunted he buys a new suit and takes his girl, Jane Dillon (Ann Christy) to Cooney Island, where they have the time of their lives. This section makes a splendid presentation of the fun at Luna Park with a close up view of the various complications that beset the addle-headed star and his sweetie. Various adventures befall them and they emerge broke in pocket but cheerful in spirits. A passing friend with a moving van gives them a lift back home which "Speedy" takes advantage of in characteristic fashion.

A complication which involves Jane's dad, old "Pop" Dillon, in a conflict with big interests, who are striving to get control of his little one-horse car track, leads "Speedy" into a series of dangerous adventures, in which a group of gangsters, an Airedale dog and a pair of galloping white horses, play the stellar role. True to form every time, Harold emerges victorious, after a gang of old time fighters of civil war vintage, rally to his rescue. The fight between these aged veterans, who use anything from rolling pins to hot flatirons as weapons of offense and the pistol-armed gangsters, is ludicrous and heated.

Although the picture contains only two or three really whirlwind laughs, it abounds in plenty of comical and giggly situations.

The accompanying short reels are excellent, as usual. With Baby Gloria Rock as the main actor, the little comedy that precedes the feature has a cute baby, a cute dog and a lot of cute little chicks as essential bits of attraction. —Jeanette.

ALWAYS EASTER FOR CANADIANS

Annual Per Capita Consumption of Eggs is 360, Says J. B. Nelson.

GIVES TALK AT ST. PAUL'S

At a meeting of the Young People's Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church on Monday evening, J. B. Nelson, the local representative of the Department of Agriculture, gave a very interesting address on eggs). Since the year 1922 Canadians methods of handling.

During the course of his remarks Mr. Nelson pointed out that Canadians were the champion egg eaters of the world, averaging a whole case of eggs a year in some form or other each. (A case contains thirty dozen eggs). Since the year 1922, Canadains have almost doubled their consumption of eggs due to several reasons. At that time, grading was actively begun and they are now divided into specials, extras, firsts and seconds. Also since that date methods of production have been improved until to-day egg plants produce with the same precision and regularity as any modern factory. At the present time the methods of inspecting, collecting, storing and handling eggs are such that one no longer needs to be wary when tackling a boiled egg.

At this meeting plans were outlined for a "Poverty Social" which is to be held on Monday evening, April 30th. On this occasion everyone is to appear dressed in old clothes. A fee of ten cents is to be charged for admission and anyone coming to the affair "all dolled up" will be fined five cents for every good article of clothing worn. This has all the earmarks

What CAN a Man Believe?

By BRUCE BARTON

Author of "The Book Nobody Knows," "The Man Nobody Knows"

XXXIV—Christianity Shown to Be the Most Optimistic

FEW will deny that in the face which it turns toward the future Christianity is markedly superior to the other three faiths. And there are three other points of definite superiority.

Jesus gave God a nobler character than any of the other teachers. Buddha rather left his followers in doubt as to whether there is a God, and subsequently was deified himself. Confucius speaks sometimes of the "Supreme Ruler," sometimes of "Heaven," but without giving personality to the divine being, certainly without inspiring love. Mohammed's God hardly rises to the height of Jehovah of the Old Testament, a jealous sovereign who fights vigorously on the side of the faithful but decrees merciless deaths to infidels—a very human God, enjoying the pleasures of appetite and bribing His followers to courage by the promise of fleshly rewards. Only Jesus spoke of God as a Father, loving all of His children alike, rejoicing in their happiness, sharing their sorrows, seeking patiently and helpfully to redeem them from their sins and prepare them for eternal happiness by the transformation of their spirits into His own perfect character.

Jesus alone spoke of Himself as the Son of God, and acted throughout as one who has direct and uninterrupted communication with the Eternal. Neither Confucius nor Buddha talked of God nor evidenced any sense of dependence upon Him. Mohammed's Allah is a decidedly partisan and imperfect Being, short tempered and bitter toward adversaries, but ready at any moment to render a special revelation for the convenience of the prophet in preserving peace in his harem. Even to the gaze of the most critical the life of Jesus is flawless. He lived and talked and died as one conscious at every moment of a divine commission. The soul of man in looking toward Him finds its deepest longings satisfied. If this kindly, happy, friendly man be the son of God; if God, in His character and actions, is like this, then indeed may one live courageously in the present and hopefully for the future.

Christianity alone teaches that the process of creation is not finished, that God is not a Creator who, having completed the world, has withdrawn into a secure and distant Heaven, but that He is still immanent, still at work, still available for direct help to all who call on His name. This "Holly Spirit," as Jesus described it, is the divine purpose running through all creation, a "power not ourselves working for righteousness," a force like gravity operating constantly to reenforce all worthy effort and oppose all that makes for wrong. The God of other religions is far off and untroubled by human affairs. The God of Jesus is Father, ever present, ever working, conscious of the fall of a single sparrow, numbering the very hairs of his children's heads, loving them with a love that surpasses human understanding, helping them always to be and do their best.

Thus Christianity is the most optimistic and achieving of all the religions. To what extent the nations that acknowledge it have been made progressive by its spirit and to what degree their own high spirits have entered into it, is a question beyond the depth of this present volume.

The United States is Christian and progressive; Mexico is Christian and unprogressive. If Christianity is to have the credit in one instance it cannot escape responsibility across the border. The truth is, of course, that many factors besides religion—climate, blood diet, inheritance—help to form national character. We are not made by faith alone.

Christianity Hopeful

Yet Confucianism, with its calm acceptance of things as they are, its lack of interest in the future, has molded China. Buddhism, with its attitude of sad renunciation, is not a faith to spur the spirit. Christianity, whatever its shortcomings, does say constantly to man, "You can do better. The whole world can do better. You can be perfect even as your Father."

Of all the founders of great religions, Jesus alone died young. Confucius passed out in old age, sick and disappointed and broken man. Buddha died old, of indigestion. Mohammed passed away in the arms of his favorite wife, old in spirit if not in years.

Jesus was cut off in the flower of His youth. He wanted to live. He cried out in agony that the cup of death should be allowed to pass from His lips. He loved life and could look far down the years, seeing many pleasures to enjoy, so much work yet to do.

No Disillusionment

He spoke with the freshness of firm muscles, sound sleep, low blood pressure, gay sunrises, and deep strong lungs. There was about Him none of the hesitation of middle life, none of the disillusionment and weakness of age. The lame could walk, the blind could see, the very dead could rise, if only they believed as He believed.

What middle age and old age might have done to Him we do not know. Fortunately, we do not need even to guess. Those who cut Him off in the full flush of His youth did us an unwitting kindness. They preserved Him for us ever young, full of optimism for the future, full of dissatisfaction with the past. A vigorous, vibrant, joyous Leader crying: "What I am you can be. What I do you can do, and even greater works. Where I go you can come. All things are possible."

Tomorrow—Child Faith in God.

LADY BOWLERS PRESENT PRIZES

Banquet Marks Conclusion of Successful Season on Alleys.

-- WINNERS HONORED. --

A number of teams of lady alley bowlers concluded the second schedule of their winter's sport by a banquet in the grill room of the Empress Hotel at 6.30 p.m. last evening, to which a number of their friends were invited.

Mrs. W. A. Greenslade acted as toast mistress and proposed a toast to "The King," which was responded to by singing "God Save the King." A toast to "Our Visitors" was ably proposed by Mrs. R. J. Martin and responded to on behalf of the visitors by Mrs. W. L. Ferguson in a very pleasing manner.

A toast to "Our Club" was proposed very appropriately by Mrs. N. Henry and responded to by Mrs. F. Miller, who spoke of the splendid Winter's sport and emphasized the motto for the year.

The prizes for the bowling were then presented: the first going to Mrs. W. A. Greenslade (captain), Mrs. R. J. Martin, Mrs. D. Eldred, Mrs. W. Hutchinson. Second prizes were won by Mrs. F. Miller (captain), Mrs. Harvey Staunton, Mrs. G. Coleman, Mrs. N. Henry. The prize for three high consecutive games, donated by Mrs. W. Greenslade, was won by Mrs. G. A. Borland. High single prize, donated by Mrs. H. Henry was won by Mrs. H. Staunton.

The prize for high average was won by Miss Vera Foster

A beautiful bouquet of Darwin tulips was presented to Mrs. N. Henry by Miss Muriel Birchard. Mrs. C. Wright ,on behalf of the club, spoke a few words of appreciation for the way Mrs. Henry had kept the records of the bowling.

Mrs. Henry, although taken completely by surprise, thanked the ladies for their kind words and token.

Following the sumptuous banquet an evening of progressive bridge was enjoyed. The first prize, which was donated by Mrs. W. L. Ferguson, was won by Mrs. H. Staunton, and the second prize, donated by Mrs. E. J. Ruiter, was won by Mrs. F. Miller, while the consolation prize went to Mrs. W. H. Andrews. A number of other prizes for other achievements during the evening were drawn for and created no end of merriment. The lucky ones were Mrs. M. Bredin, Mrs. E. E. Holmes, Mrs. Whatley, Mrs. G. A. Borland, Mrs. B. MacLean, Mrs. T. Skinner, Mrs. H. Graham, Mrs. W. L. Ferguson, Mrs. W. H. Andrews.

Among those present were: Mesdames C. Graham, F. Watley, E. J. Ruiter, J. Baird, F. Mowry, W. L. Ferguson, W. H. Metcalfe, H. H. Graham, B. MacLean, M. Bredin, H. McCannon, E. E. Holmes, Stevens, W. K. McGee, W. A. Greenslade, R. J. Martin, D. Eldred, W. Hutchinson, F. Miller, H. Staunton, N. Henry, J. Asquith, T. Skinner, C. Wright, G. A. Borland, W. H. Andrews. Misses Kathleen Vincent, Vera Foster, Muriel Birchard, Grose.

IN POLICE COURT

Appearing for sentence on a charge of non-support, a local young man, still in his teens, appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning. Hon. G. N. Gordon, speaking in his behalf, dealt with the circumstances of the case and suggested that rather than placing the young husband in jail, he be remanded until an agreement might be drawn up to be signed by the young couple and their parents. Accordingly, the magistrate granted a remand until Friday morning, April 27.

An Otonabee young man was allowed to go on suspended sentence and bond of two relatives when he appeared on a charge of theft from a farm house in that township. He had previously pleaded guilty to the offence.

The theft of a pipe and some jewellery from the local branch of the F. W. Woolworth Company led to the arrest of John Elliott and his arraignment this morning before Magstrate O. A. Langley on the resultant charge of theft. He was fined $10.00 and costs and in default of payment, one month of imprisonment.

Behind closed doors the case of a young girl charged with vagrancy, was disposed of, she being ordered to report at regular intervals to the police matron.

ITCHY PIMPLES AFFECTED FACE

Also On Neck and Body. Healed by Cuticura.

"Eczema broke out in pimples and affected my face, neck and body. It itched and burned so that I was all the time scratching. My face was disfigured, and my clothing used to rub against the breaking out on my body and aggravate it. I could not get any sleep on account of it. The trouble lasted a couple of months.

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they afforded relief in about a week. I continued using them and in three weeks I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Rosie Whitman, Beaver Harbor, N. S.

Wedding Bells

GROOMBRIDGE—BURROWS.

News was received yesterday of the wedding of Mr. Sydney T. Groombridge, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Groombridge, of this city, to Miss Lillian E. M. Burrows, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Burrows. The wedding took place on Easter Monday at St. George's Church, Ramsgate, Kent, England. Rev. A. Lane Davies officiated. Mr. Stanley J. Burrows, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

The bride wore a dress of white silk with pearl trimmings and silver shoulder flower, a veil with coronet of orange blossoms, and silver brocade shoes and nude silk stockings. She carried a sheaf of arum lilies and smilax. She was given away by her father.

The bridesmaids and attendants were Miss Ivy Tozer, Ramsgate, Miss Helena Bonner, London (cousin of the bride), Miss Peggy Bassett, London (niece of the bridegroom), Miss Marjory Ansell, Ramsgate, accompanied by Sea Scouts Sydney and Ernie Ansell and Sea Cadet Reginald Burrows.

The chief bridesmaid wore a pretty dress of apricot silk, with roses on shoulders and waist, a coronet headdress, shoes and stockings to match her gown, and carried a bouquet of carnations and smilax. The small attendants were attired in costumes of powder blue silk with short puffed sleeves trimmed with bebe ribbon and silver, and silver lace bonnets. They carried ribboned and beflowered silvered crooks.

The bridegroom made gifts of a gold brooch to the bridesmaids and pari necklaces to the attendants.

A reception was held at the residence of the parents of the bride and was largely attended. There were over fifty presents, including cheques from parents of the bride and bridegroom. At the close of the ceremony a peal of bells was rung at the church.

FITZGERALD—McCLIGGOTT.

A pretty wedding took place at St. Peter's Cathedral on Tuesday morning, when Mary Madeline McCliggott, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael McCliggott, became the bride of John Edward Fitzgerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Fitzgerald of Otonabee. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. Costello. The wedding music was played by Miss Mary Reynolds and the High School girls sang during the progress of the Nuptial Mass.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Thomas McMurray, was dressed in white georgette, with white hat, white shoes and stockings and white fox fur neckpiece. She wore the gift of the bridegroom, a string of pearls and carried a shower bouquet of pale pink roses and white spirea.

The bridesmaid, Miss Olive Pleurd, of Detroit, was in orchid georgette with hat to match and carried a bouquet of tulips and mignonette.

Mr. Leo Fitzgerald acted as best man for his brother.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. Thomas McMurray, King street. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and Detroit, the bride travelling in a gown of cocoa brown georgette, with matching coat and hat. On their return, they will reside in Otonabee.

PLAINTIFF ENTERS WITNESS BOX SURPRISING DEFENCE COUNSEL; UNDERGOES LONG EXAMINATION

Sir Arthur Currie Expresses Pride in Men Who Served Under Him.

REGRETTED CASUALTIES.

Obeyed Orders From His Superiors At All Times—Had Enemy On Run.

(By Staff Reporters)

COBOURG, April 27 (Special to The Examiner).—Sir Arthur Currie, K.C.M.G., K.C.B., Commander of the Canadian Corps and plaintiff in the $50,000 libel suit brought against F. W. Wilson and W. T. R. Preston, took the witness box this morning.

This move of W. N. Tilley, K.C., his counsel, was contrary to all expectation and completely took Frank Regan, defense counsel, by surprise. Mr. Tilley occupied only a few moments examining his witness, and then Mr. Regan took up the examination and for three hours subjected Sir Arthur to a barrage of questions.

Sir Arthur's attitude in the box was one of pride in the men who had fought so gallantly under him and for the Empire. Stopping before Mons would have been disobeying orders. The Canadians would not have been faithful to the other corps and would have been guilty of treason. Such things his men as Canadians would never be guilty of and they were not the kind of men that would lie down during the last two days of the war, declared Sir Arthur.

They had the Germans on the run and they wanted to keep them from establishing a line beyond the Meuse which would be a most strategic point and difficult to capture.

"I was proud of the troops as they marched past me that day in Mons," he said, when Mr. Regan asked him about the parade.

Speaking of casualties appeared to touch a tender spot in the heart of the leader and he declared that no man wanted to protect and save life any more than he did. The Canadian troops always went where they were sent. He took his orders from the army commanders and it was no action on his part that transferred his corps to several armies during the period of the war.

All hope of the lawyers completing their plea to the jury to-night faded when Sir Arthur entered the witness box and Mr. Regan commenced a long, drawn-out cross examination.

The court room was filled to capacity by spectators during the morning session, and the evidence of General Currie was followed very closely.

General Currie Called.

General Sir Arthur Currie, K.C.B., G.C.M.G., Commander in Chief of the Canadian Corps and plaintiff in the libel suit against F. W. Wilson and W. T. R. Preston, was called by his counsel. General Currie was asked to verify many of the exhibits put in by both plaintiff and defendant.

He was asked about his orders from the First Army in the general advance on the last days of the war. "The order of the ninth of November told me to advance to the high ground east of Mons, sending mounted troops out to keep in touch with enemy after the objective had been reached," he said.

Witness then told of the position of the Canadians. In the First Army there were three corps, with the Canadians in the centre position, the 22nd on the right and the 8th on the left.

"After receiving this order from the First Army I issued an operation order to the Second and Third Divisions, which were in line, ordering these to take the objective and the mounted troops to push forward east of the objective in order to keep in touch with the enemy as instructed by the commander of the First Army. On the 10th I received an order from the First Army ordering us to follow the orders of the ninth and proceed towards our objective. These were the army instructions to me and were not issued after consultation with me.

"On the tenth I issued orders to the divisions telling my divisions the objective was the same as sent out on the ninth and no further orders would be issued that night. On the eleventh I received from Army 'Hostilities will cease at 11 o'clock on the eleventh. Troops will stand fast on the line reached at that hour, which will be reported to Army. Defensive precautions will be maintained. There will be no intercourse of any description with the enemy.'

"When I received this message it was immediately sent out to the Division commanders." Questioned by Mr. Tilley, if he did anything further in issuing other orders after the armistice order was sent out, witness replied in the negative.

Mr. Tilley—"Why did you not issue any further orders?"

Sir Arthur — "These were clear enough. To me it meant the advance would be continued until 11 o'clock and then had to stop."

Mr. Tilley— "Did you know anything of terms?"

Sir Arthur—"No."

Legal Debate Ensues.

Mr. Regan objected to Mr. Tilley asking leading questions.

Mr. Tilley (annoyed)—"My Lord, are these leading questions?"

His Lordship—"I suggested to Mr. Regan the other day that he look up the definition of such a question."

Mr. Regan—"He should have asked him what he knew."

Mr. Tilley—"Is that the way you practise?"

Mr. Regan, jumping to his feet—"I have been having these little side remarks ever since I came here. Let me say before I came to Cobourg, I consulted some of the leading lawyers in Toronto including D. L. McCarthy—"

His Lordship—"Mr. Regan, please confine yourself to the question at issue and the things that are relevent to the case."

Mr. Tilley—"Did you know envoys had gone through?"

Sir Arthur—"Yes."

Mr. Tilley—"Was any communication sent to you as to what was done by these envoys who had gone through?"

Sir Arthur—"No."

Sir Arthur further stated that after he knew the envoys had gone through he received instructions to advance.

Army Fixed Objectives.

Mr. Tilley—"Who fixes the lines of advance and boundaries?"

A.—The army. I have no control over them.

Q.—Was there any line in the rear of the German front line that could have been used by them?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What was that?

A.—We knew it as the line of the Meuse.

Regarding the speed of the advance, Sir Arthur said that each day's advance was different. Some days it was four or five miles, others 1,800 yards, but the enemy was never allowed to get away. Asked if he agreed with the suggestion made in court that other tactics could have been used in the Mons sector, Sir Arthur said that he did not.

Mr. Tilley—"Why?"

Gen. Currie—"Well, the proof of the pudding is in the eating."

Once more General Currie became the leader of a corps of troops, as he explained how the troops to the north and south had met heavier opposition than the Canadians. It was the proper tactics to pierce a line at the weakest point. This point was the railway station in Mons, and Sir Arthur pointed out that the troops had entered there.

Orders Obeyed.

In reply to a series of definite questions, Sir Arthur stated that there had been no definite orders to capture Mons, except as it lay in the path of their objective. He obeyed the orders he received, and the orders he issued were in turn obeyed. They were not added to or subtracted from

Laborer Held For Attempted Murder

REGINA, Sask., April 27. Canadian Press. — Tony Yost, a 21 year old farm laborer, is being sought by the provincial police on a charge of having wounded three members of the Martin Kaufmann family, near Pangman, Sask. He is alleged to have slashed the father with a short dagger, wounded Annie Kauffmann in the chest and through the neck and jaw. A farm hand who is reported to have intervened, was also wounded.

Yost, it is alleged, became furious when Miss Kauffmann shunned his attentions. After the attack, Yost escaped into the woods and has not been seen since.

Accuses Premier Baldwin of Inflicting Grave Losses On the Rubber Industry

LONDON, April 27 (Canadian Press).—Ramsay MacDonald last night again raised the rubber question in the House of Commons, and accused Premier Baldwin of inflicting grave losses on the rubber industry by his maladroit handling of the removal of the restrictions.

Mr. MacDonald had the support not only of Opposition speakers, but also of some members of the Government side. Lieut.-Col. Amery, Secretary for the Colonies, replying for the Government, made it clear that there would be no change in the decision of the Government to continue the scheme of restriction until November.

He disclosed that it was urging from the Colonial Office toward the end of 1927 and not from outside quarters, as had been suggested by the Opposition, that first induced the Government to decide on an independent inquiry into the working of the Stevenson scheme.

Regarding the alleged improper leakage in New York of the decision to eventually abandon the scheme, he took the line that thre were no great dealings that day in New York, and that the losses which were sustained were inevitable owing to the thoroughly unhealthy condition of the rubber industry.

but were carried out strictly on their merits.

Mr. Preston arose to cross-examine witness, but His Lordship interrupted to say he thought Mr. Regan should go first, as Mr. Wilson's name stands first in the suit.

Mr. Tilley objected to the procedure saying he believed as the defence was one, only one lawyer should cross-examine and address the jury, but he knew His Lordship could allow this other procedure.

His Lordship—"There cannot be two cross-examinations on the same question. But I will allow two cross-examinations if they obey this rule."

"Do you think, Sir Arthur, that the story you told in the past five or ten minutes is a complete story of all that took place?" was the first question put by Mr. Regan as he opened his cross-examination following the argument between counsel.

Sir Arthur thought it was a full story when added to all the evidence heard. The reply brought forth an argument between the witness and Mr. Regan, which ended in the judge requesting the examination to proceed.

Further questioned, Sir Arthur said he was Principal of McGill University. He had, he said, given an interview to the Toronto Star after the writ had been issued. He did not think it was an improper thing since it was not the first story he had given to The Star. Had he considered it improper he would not have done so. It was given without the faintest intention of doing wrong. He knew it would be published since he knew he was being interviewed. Asked by Mr. Regan if he had made certain statements credited to him by the account of the interview, Sir Arthur admitted

VISION OF MORE UNITED CANADA THROUGH EFFORTS OF CHAMBERS PRESENTED AT ANNUAL BANQUET

Peteborough Chamber of Commerce Favored By Presence of Dominion Officers.

INSPIRING ADDRESSES.

Visiting and Local Speakers Stress Great Possibilities of City and Dominion.

Graced by the presence of the president, chairman of the executive, and secretary of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, as well as civic officials, officers, and ex-officers, the annual banquet of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce was held last evening in the Empress Hotel, some one hundred and twenty-five persons, including delegates from Oshawa Hastings, and Lakefield filing into and taxing to capacity, the large front dining-room of the hotel. Round the head table gathered such men as A. M. Dollar, of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Chamber, William Birks, of Montreal, chairman of the executive of the same body, W. McL. Clarke, secretary of the Canadian Chamber, James Dutton, president of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, George A. Gillespie, immediate past president and chairman of the evening, Joseph J. Duffus, past president of Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, His Worship Mayor Roland Denne, Leon Frazer, secretary of the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce, and formerly secretary of the Peterborough Chamber, M. Storey, president of Oshawa Rotary Club, A. J. Reynolds, vice-president of the Peterborough Chamber, C. S. Cummer, treasurer, Rev. J. D. Paterson, E. R. Armstrong, city clerk, F. D. Kerr, K.C., hon. vice-president of the Trent Waterway Development Association, W. M. Fowlds, president of the T. W.D.A., W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., E. B. Fowler, chairman of the Board of Education, and Frank G. Stinson, energetic secretary of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, to whom was due credit for his large part in making the banquet the success it promised and later proved to be.

A. M. Dollar.

The 1928 banquet not only equalled but far surpassed those of former years. The attendance was much larger (including many of the new members gained by the recent campaign). Addresses from such men as Messrs. Dollar, Birks, and Clarke as well as President James Dutton, carried with them the vision of a more united Canada through a Canadian Chamber in which the Peterborough body will prove an active link. Throughout, there was a note of healthy optimism, as Chairman Gillespie later expressed it, "served to dispel all blues regarding Canada and the Empire."

The presence of the Male Voice Choir Quartette, comprising Messrs. Lee, Wood, Crowe, and Fleming, with Martin Chenhall, A.R.C.O., pianist, and the temporary installation of a large new electrola by Heintzman Hall, added just the desired musical flavoring, while community singing brought back the charms of "Peggy O'Neill" and "Sweet Adeline."

The Chairman.

Past President G. A. Gillespie proved an ideal master of ceremonies, and his welcome to the visitors was as sincere as it was well expressed. He it was who introduced W. M. Fowlds of Hastings, who in turn introduced his colleagues, Dr. McDonald, C. A. Coughlin, and J. S. McCarthy; Reeve Tanner of Lakefield introduced Councillors Lillicrap and Harrison, and Mr. Storey of Oshawa introduced one who needed no introduction, namely Leon Frazer, formerly of Peterborough.

Chairman Gillespie then proceeded with the program proper.

Mayor Denne

His Worship congratulated "Jim" Dutton on his fine executive, and the executive and chamber on having a president like "Jim." He predicted a successful year for the Chamber of Commerce, and went on to extend a welcome to the visitors to "the best city in Canada."

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

Taken by surprise, W. H. Bradburn said he was happy to be present as a member of the Chamber of Commerce which has done and is continuing to do so much for the city of Peterborough. He spoke of the city's possibilities for enlargement making complimentary reference to Mayor Denne, the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Bradburn recalled a visit to Northern Ontario in company with the Hon. William Finlayson and gave some interesting figures on power development in their section of the province.

MILITARY FUNERAL.

Will Form Guard of Honor From Military Units of State.

NEW YORK, April 27.—(Canadian Press.)—On a day which had been set aside for celebration, New York to-day will pay its last tribute to its hero son—Floyd Bennett.

With welcoming ceremonies for the crew of the trans-Atlantic plane Bremen deferred until next week, arrangements were completed yesterday for civic honor to the pilot who died while attempting to aid his comrades of the air, when his body arrives here from Montreal this morning.

The body will be met at Grand Central Terminal at 7.30 o'clock and under the escort of naval and special police detachments will be taken on a gun carriage to the 71st Regiment Armory in Park avenue, where it will lie in state for one hour before continuing its journey to Washington for burial in Arlington cemetery this afternoon.

Body Lies In State.

The body will lie in state in the private reception room of Colonel Walter A. Delamater, commander of the regiment, and the public will be permitted to view it from eight to nine o'clock. After a private service, the body will be taken to Pennsylvania Station and placed aboard a special car for the journey to Washington at 10.10 o'clock.

A guard of 86 patrolmen, four guards from the 71st Regiment, details from the 16th United States' Infantry at Governor's Island, and the Brooklyn Navy Yard, will stand over the body in the armory. Six navy warrant officers will form a guard of honor and eight seamen will act as bearers.

Bennett's widow, his mother, Mrs. Henrietta Bennett, and his half-brother, B. T. Patrick, with Commander Richard E. Byrd and Mrs. Byrd will go to the Hotel Biltmore on the arrival here after which they will attend the services at the armory.

Around the City

Grass fires about the city have been the cause of several alarms being sent in to the Fire Hall during the past few days, though in the majority of cases the fires have been extinguished without resorting to the use of hose lines.

At 5.34 p.m. on Thursday there was one at the rear of 182 Hazlett Street, and again at 12.48 to-day the firemen made a run to the corner of George and Romaine Streets. The last of a trio was a run to 539 Albert Street at 1.40 this afternoon.

Attacks Government On Emigrant Question

LIVERPOOL April 27.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—Speaking at a luncheon held during an inspection of the Laurentic here to-day, General Manager Couty, of the White Star Line, said that the shipping people were disappointed whith the flow of emigrants from Great Britain and suggested that the Canadian authorities simplify arrangements for prospective emigrants.

When Bruce Walker, director of European immigration for the Canadian government rose to speak there were cries of "red tape," and "you don't want emigrants." Mr. Walker said that he knew there was opposition to the medical examination of prospective emigrants, but it was "arrant nonsense" to suggest that Canada did not want settlers from Great Britain. Canadian public institutions for the insane, he asserted, had been filled in recent years chiefly with newcomers who were not natives of Canada. There was no hope of the medical examination being abolished, but Canada hoped in a short time to deal with the matter in such a way that its critics would most loudly proclaim it.

Says Women of Canada Are To-Day Organized For All Kinds of Service

OTTAWA, Ont., April 27 (Canadian Press). — The women of Canada are to-day organized for all kinds of service, and as many opportunities have been given to them, much is expected of them, Honorable Mary Ellen Smith, M.L.A., of Vancouver, told a large gathering of members of the Ottawa Women's Club yesterday. "I have no fear as to the outcome of the part women are taking in the business world," the speaker said.

Mrs. Smith urged her audience to do their part in creating a spirit of neighborliness and friendliness between all parts of Canada and in making people from other lands who come to live here feel that they are really Canadians. Both parties are willing to co-operate in bringing immigrants to the vast empty spaces of this land, she said. The only question is to have the right kind of settlers. "We in turn must stretch out the right hand of fellowship to these people," Mrs. Smith said. "We must make the best use of the human element as well as of the many gifts nature has given us." Mrs. Smith referred to the fine work which is being done in the West by the Women's Institutes among the incoming settlers and also to the patriotic work of the Daughters of the Empire.

COUNSEL HOPED TO PRESENT CASE TO JURY BEFORE THIS EVENING LEAVING SATURDAY FOR VERDICT

GIVING EVIDENCE.

GEN. SIR ARTHUR CURRIE,

Called to the witness box to-day in his libel suit against F. W. Wilson and W. T. R. Preston.

Witnesses Tell of Second Division Meeting Heavy Resistance.

MORE CASUALTIES.

19th and 20th Battalions Lost Heavily Nov. 9 and 10—W. T. R. Preston Questions Clarke.

(By Staff Reporters)

COBOURG, April 27.—Second Canadian Division operations came into the limelight in the Sir Arthur Currie-Wilson-Preston $50,000 libel suit before Hon. Mr. Justice Rose yesterday afternoon. Officers in 19th and 20th Battalions, which formed the front line of that division in the last three days of the war, gave their evidence in support of their corps commander, Sir Arthur Currie. They told of the movement of their troops, the difficulties encountered, and the casualties suffered.

Before adjournment last evening W. N. Tilley, K.C., chief counsel for the plaintiff, intimated to His Lordship that he would complete his case this morning and after conversing with Frank Regan, counsel for the defendant, they decided they would have their case presented to the jury this evening and Saturday morning would be left for the Judge to charge the jury and then the jury would have the rest of the day to come to a decision.

Major General McBrien, former chief of the Canadian staff, was expected to be called first thing in the morning.

From casualty reports given yesterday, it appears that the Second Canadian Division, which was fighting immediately south of the Third Division, which occupied Mons, suffered heavier in the fighting during the last three days of the Great War.

The 20th Battalion, according to Bertram O. Hooper, commanding officer, lost one officer, two N.C.O.'s and nine men and had two officers and thirty-three men wounded on the 10th of November. The 19th, according to Lieut. Joseph O'Neil, fared worse, and lost four officers and eleven men and had thirty-eight others wounded. The officers killed were Robertson, Roberts, McFaul and Copeland.

These two battalions encountered very severe opposition around Hyon and on the Mons-Maubege Road. Hyon was used as an enemy machine gun training school during the war and had guns set in strategic positions.

Col. Hooper, when asked what was his first opinion of the armistice, said his first thoughts were that it was a dodge of the Germans to enable them to shorten their lines and put up a stronger opposition than they had since the breaking of the Hindenburg line.

Major General Loomis was the final witness called to tell of the operations of the 3rd Division, which he commanded. He told of the orders he had sent out and which had been told and retold by previous witnesses. Although their witnesses of the 3rd Division had said there was an assault on Mons, Major General Loomis interpreted the action as an attack but not in the general sense of the word. The soldiers entered in battle array but there was no fighting, as the enemy had fled.

The corridors and seats in the court room were taxed to capacity yesterday. Women were much in evidence and many stayed in their seats during the luncheon adjournment at one o'clock.

Both counsels made a real effort to bring about the completion of the trial. Mr. Parmenter, who conducted the case for the plaintiff cut his examinations short and Mr. Regan also did not waste any time cross-examining.

W. T. R. Preston, cross-examined Brig. General Clark, the first witness he has really examined in the whole case.

Division Commander.

"You commanded the division that captured Mons, General Loomis?" was Regan's first question, when Sir Frederick took the stand.

A—Yes.

Q—And it was an occasion for celebrating, your recapture of Mons?"

A.—Our successful capture of Mons.

Replying to further questions, General Loomis said it was ridiculous to say the walk through Mons was without any opposition. There was no walking through Mons without an attack and fighting. Witness stated later he would not say the hour and minute the fighting stopped. He did not think it had any bearing on the case. After entering Mons he sent a wire to General Sir Arthur Currie thanking him for congratulations received from the corps commander.

General Loomis agreed that he

GREAT PYRAMID TELLS HISTORY

R. J. Bolton Tells Kiwanians of Mysteries of Ancient Structure.

INTERESTING ADDRESS.

The great pyramid at Gizeh, on the Nile, its mysteries and the strange significance of the thousands of findings which may be made by the mathematician who studies its dimensions and measurements, proved the subject of a most interesting, if unusual, address delivered by R. J. Bolton, of King Edward School, at the Peterborough Kiwanis Club luncheon in the Empress Hotel to-day. The members were out in goodly numbers and the meeting was quite as lively as usual. The introduction of guests and of a new member, announcement of an executive meeting this evening, and the drawing of Dr. Jack Craig's booster prizes also took place during the meeting, the new member being James Geraghty, who was welcomed to the club by Past President I. P. McNabb.

President Joe John regretted to announce that through pressure of business, Secretary John R. Heron had seen fit to resign from that office, but was pleased that his counsel would still be available to the club. He stated that Herb. Gilgour would succeed Mr. Heron, and bespoke for him the support of the club generally.

Mr. Bolton was introduced by Kiwanian Doug. Paterson. In his opening remarks, he told of the immense size of the great pyramid and of the problem which modern science would face in attempting to duplicate it, for it is five hundred feet high, covers an area of thirteen acres, its four sides face exactly the cardinal points of the compass, and in it are ninety million cubic feet of granite and limestone, sufficient to build a sidewalk around the world at the equator.

In the various measurements which may be made of its features, and, indeed, in its internal design, there may be found in figures facts which correspond with the history of civilization, coincident or purposeful.

At the conclusion of the address, the vote of appreciation of the club was voiced by Herb. McCannan, after which the meeting closed with singing of "O Canada."

The Peterborough Senior baseball team will practice to-morrow at 2 p.m. at King Edward School Grounds. Manager Tommy Holyman expects a full turnout of old and new players.

GHOST SEEN AT LAKEFIELD

White Figure Seen on the Streets Causes Flurry in Village.

WHAT IS IT?

LAKEFIELD, April 27. — Lakefield has a ghost which has caused more or less of a sensation in the village. It is really a community ghost as it does not limit its activities to one particular area but has been seen in various parts of the village, and has roused various emotions in the breasts of the villagers. "It" has been seen on the corner of Regent and Albert streets, Knox church hill and in the neighborhood of Charlton's grain elevator. One intrepid citizen pursued it with a pitchfork, but did not catch up with the white figure. What is it? Who is it? These questions are on everyone's lips, and the general impression is that some one with a distorted sense of humor is playing a practical joke.

Girls' Auxiliary.

The Girls' Auxiliary of St. John's church held an afternoon tea and a sale of home cooking and candy in the Sunday school on Saturday afternoon last and were successful in every respect. Almost twenty one dollars was realized and the affair marked the closing of a very profitable season.

Mrs. Creighton and Mrs. Marling were in charge of the tea room and Mrs. S. E. White was in charge of the fish pond with Miss Aileen Peacock as her assistant. Miss Lilian Stuart and Coleen Junkin were in charge of the candy table; Misses Barbara Dench and Mary Webdale were at the cooking table, while Misses Lilian Mason Alice Dench, Muriel Strickland, Kathleen Wanan-

DAMAGE WROUGHT BY WIND STORMS

Property Loss Heavy in Bridgenorth District—Boathouse Blown Down.

The severe wind has done a great deal of damage around the district of Bridgenorth. The Chemong Bridge is worse this year than ever experienced before. Mr. Highland's boathouse was lifted and completely shattered, also breaking his large launch. Several fences and window panes are also suffering from the severe wind.

Mrs. James Young gave an interesting talk on "Our Cups" at the regular meeting of the Mission Band of Gilmour Memorial Church, held on Sunday afternoon. The Rev. W. S. Edgar also spoke on Missions. In the absence of the president, Miss Betty Edgar, Miss Margaret Mann presided at the meeting. A trio was given by three junior members, Lillian McGregor, Eunice Hammond, and Marion Blewett. The Easter egg collection amounted to about nine dollars.

Rutherford is Northumberland County's only Victoria Cross holder, and is a farmer near Colborne.

Expresses Thanks To Quebec Authorities

QUEBEC, Que., April 27.—(Canadian Press.)— Commander Byrd, before leaving Quebec requested press representatives to convey a message of thanks from himself and Mrs. Floyd Bennett to the Provincial Government authorities, the Mayor and Aldermen, the military and other authorities and the public in general for their profound sympathy over the tragic death of Floyd Bennett.

"Their kindness and courtesy was remarkable," the commander said. "The funeral ceremony was one of the most impressive and beautiful I have ever seen. Even if it had taken place at home in the United States nothing more touching or impressive could have been witnessed."

PRESENT SYSTEM IS DETRIMENTAL

Canon Burd Expresses Alarm Over Preponderance of Europeans Entering Canada.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 27 (Canadian Press).—Canon Burd of Saskatchewan, quoting immigration statistics yesterday before the Commons Committee on Immigration, expressed his "very deep alarm over the preponderance of Europeans entering Canada. Last year, the increase over 1926 had been 1,088 British, 3,982 from the United States, and 2,536 European. In March, 3,150 British people came to the Dominion and 9132 non-British.

"This is to show that the present system is detrimental to those of us living in the West," said the Canon.

The census of Saskatchewan showed that in 1916 the proportion of British residents in the province were 54.5, in 1921 52.8, and in 1926 50.7.

"Would you have the development of the West arrested until we can get British immigrants who seem reluctant to come?" asked C. H. Cahan (Conservative, St. Lawrence - St. George).

There was no desire to exclude foreign immigration, but it should be kept in proper ration to the British. Prince Albert City last year took 964 immigrants, of whom 147 were British, 40 Scandinavian and the rest Europeans who had spent hungry weeks in the immigration hall at Prince Albert.

A letter was read from a rural dean of the Peace River, who stated that every train into that country was bringing in foreign born but no British. The foreigners, he said, would never become Canadians.

"It is a libel on my district to say that foreign born are not becoming good Canadians," said George McPhee (Liberal, Yorkton).

"I do not say that is true of every district, but where foreigners are in blocks it is correct," replied the Canon.

The British Government had voted £18,800,000 to spend in emigration. They had been able to spend only three and a half million. If it was made clear to the British Government that Canada wanted settlers it would go deep in its pocket for overseas settlement. The Canon would apply a quota law at once against less desirable foreigners.

C. McIntosh was "not afraid of the future of Saskatchewan," so far as immigration was concerned.

PLAY PRESENTED AT STEWART'S HALL

"The Dust of the Earth" Staged by Young People of District.

STEWART'S HALL, April 27.—"The Dust of the Earth," an exceptionally good amateur play was presented by the young people of Stewart's Hall on Friday evening.

The story of the play centres around a young girl who has been cast upon the mercy of her relatives from childhood. Her uncle always treated her well, but her aunt and cousins get a great dislike for her and make up their minds that she must leave the place. They accuse her of theft knowing quite well that she is innocent, then they take advantage of the uncle's absence and abuse her and cast insults on the memory of her mother until in desperation she leaves the house vowing never to return. She is dressed in her mother's wedding gown and seeks shelter for the night with an old man and his servant whom she has befriended many times. This old man is suffering from loss of memory, but seeing this child in her mother's wedding gown, he recognizes the likeness of his wife, whom he has not known anything of for years. He regains his memory and finds that this girl is his daughter, and that he is the rightful owner of a large estate.

The cast of characters were: David Moore, Will Dawson; Susan Moore, his wife, Grace Stewart; Elizabeth Moore, their daughter Marjorie Collins; Jerry Moore, their son, Herbie Cardwell; Nell, the Dust of the Earth, Helen Throop; Anabella, an old gossip, Edith Thorne; John Rider, in love with Nell, Richard Stewart; Wandering Tom, Lynn Stewart; Old Mose, colored servant, William Hutchison.

As the caisson rolled down the avenue, to the slow, measured tread of the escort, heads were bared and there was a hush in the activities of the normally busy thoroughfare.

Urges Adoption Of Prayer Book Measure

LONDON April 27. — Urging adoption of the measure as a means of checking abuses within the church, the Archbishop of Canterbury yesterday formally proposed approval of the revised prayer book of the Church of England to the Church Assembly. For a brief period of further discussion in the three houses—House of Bishops, House of Clergy and House of Laity—a vote of final approval was adjourned until to-day.

At yesterday's special session of the Assembly which was regarded as the final struggle over the revised prayer book measure before it goes back to the House of Commons for acceptance or rejection, opponents of the revision repeated their objections to reservation of the Sacramental Elements. They predicted that because of this factor, the House of Commons would again reject the measure.

THREATENING COLD ENDED QUICK WAY

Relieved in Few Hours When Doctors Advised Home Use of Pleasant Method

In one's own home it is now possible to get quick relief—often in a few hours—from a stuffy head cold, cough or chest cold. For doctors who realize the danger of neglecting colds during changeable spring weather are recommending for home use a hospital certified remedy that has brought sure relief to vast numbers of Peterborough people, yet is inexpensive and pleasant to take.

Miss Marie Dixon, for example, caught a severe head cold which she neglected for several days. It was mild at first, but grew worse, spreading to her chest. Fearing more serious complications then, her father called the doctor, who prescribed double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a concentrated mixture of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients which hospitals have found to be the most effective to end colds.

Relief began almost immediately! In a few hours the "feverish", grippy feeling was gone and after a good night's sleep her head and chest had cleared up almost entirely. In another day or so, her doctor reports, she was as well as ever, with no trace left of the cold.

Note: See other cases reported daily—all certified to this paper by the attending physician.

Doctors recommend Cherry Pectoral because it not only stops coughing spells but penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the breathing passages. Absorbed by the system the medication quickly removes phlegm, helps reduce the "feverish", grippy feeling and drives out the cold from nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a spoonful of Cherry Pectoral today and you will feel like a different person tomorrow.

WEDDING BELLS

DOUGLAS—SHARPE

HASTINGS, April 27. — A pretty wedding took place at eleven o'clock on Wednesday, April 25th, at the home of Mrs. Florence Sharpe, Victoria street, Hastings, when her daughter, Mary Lillian, became the bride of Clarence Henry Douglas, second son of Mrs. Margaret Douglas of Westwood. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. A. Carmon Hie.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of Rose of Sharon Barnett satin, overdraped with gold lace, with shoes and hose to match. She carried a bouquet of carnations, antirhinums and Easter lilies.

Miss Iva Douglas, sister of the groom, made a very pretty bridesmaid, attired in a gown of radio blue Barnett satin, overdraped with silver lace, with shoes and hose to match.

George Sharpe, brother of the bride, acted as best man. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace; to the bridesmaid, a goal bar pin, and to the groomsman, gold cuff links.

Following the ceremony, a dainty luncheon was served. The bride and groom left town amid showers of confetti and good wishes, going via C.P.R. at Norwood to Toronto and Western points, the bride travelling in a coral crepe dress and coat of embroidered black satin, with hat, shoes and hose to match. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Douglas will reside at Westwood.

JUNKERS CREW LEAVE TO-DAY FOR WASHINGTON

Members of Gallant Triumvirate To Lay Wreath On Bennett's Grave.

USE FORD RELIEF PLANE.

LAKE STE. AGNES, Que., April 27 (Canadian Press). — Bound on an errand of sorrow, rather than to the acclaim to which they were to have gone, the crew of the German trans-Atlantic monoplane Bremen left at six o'clock this morning for Washington.

Baron von Huenefeld, Captain Hermann Koehl, German members of the Bremen crew, and Major James Fitzmaurice, the Irish member of the gallant triumvirate, who flew the Atlantic from East to West for the first time, will go to Washington to lay a wreath on the grave of Floyd Bennett, American flying hero, who died on Wednesday in Quebec. Bennett died from pneumonia, contracted when he took charge of a relief expedition from Detroit to aid the Bremen crew at Greenely Island, where they were marooned for many days after their landing.

The Bremen crew will fly to Washington in the tri-motored Ford plane which Bennett ppiloted to Lake Ste. Agnes on the first stage of their journey to Greenely. The plane was piloted to Greenely by Bernt Balchen, co-pilot with Bennett, and Balchen will be at the controls to-day.

Abandon Bremen.

The crew of the Bremen arrived here yesterday afternoon after an uneventful trip in the relief plane from Greenely Island. They made the trip when it was found impossible to put the Bremen into condition to resume its flight to New York. The Bremen has been temporarily abandoned, but it will not be flown to New York later as has been suggested. The members of the crew, after a conference with officials of the Junkers Company, builders of the plane, decided that the plane would be left at lonely Greenely Island until it could be carried from there by steamer.

Long exposure to the cold had rendered the engine unfit for use, it was explained. The plan now is to have the Bremen shipped to New York, where the valves can be re-ground and other repairs made.

FRIDAY, APRIL 27, 1928.

THE FLOOD MENACE.

In view of the fact that the greater part of James Stevenson Park is submerged at the present time, an Examiner reader raises the point as to the advisability of the City Council spending a great deal of money in improving and beautifying a property that runs the risk of being similarly inundated every spring.

It is true, of course, that some years see the spring freshet disappear without the park being flooded, but it has been under water often enough in the past few years to make this citizen's point of considerable interest, and one that the City Council will have to consider in laying out a program in connection with the beautification of the grounds.

Just how far should be gone in the direction of making large expenditures on property that may be flooded for weeks is a matter that should give members of the Council something about which to think.

James Stevenson Park is unfortunately situated in this one respect at least, and the flood menace may be a serious obstacle in the way of any ambitious scheme to improve the park.

BE CAREFUL ABOUT CAMPFIRES.

It is worthy of note that Arthur Blade, Sr., one of Peterborough's veterans in the matter of fishing and hunting expeditions, is of the opinion that many forest fires are caused by the carelessness of campers and hunters.

Just there is where the average citizen is brought closely into connection with the Save-the-Forest campaign, and where he can be of the greatest assistance.

Many of our citizens each year spend some time in the timbered country of the north, and they have a heavy responsibility in regard to their camp fires.

They should take a pride in being careful in this respect, for "tenderfeet" in the woods betray themselves by building fires that are too large or that are not safely located, and many of them do not take the precaution of seeing that their fire is extinguished when they are leaving camp.

The experienced camper or hunter, if for no other reason than he does not want to be regarded by others as a novice, will be careful to see that he observes safety first rules in building his camp-fire, and in making sure that it is completely out before he leaves.

THE REVOLVER AGAIN.

The story of the latest bank robbery in Toronto serves again to call attention to the fact that the present laxity in regard to the sale of revolvers always works out to the advantage of the law-breaker.

It has been argued that citizens should be enabled to purchase and have revolvers for their protection against crooks.

Almost always, however, the weapon proves useless to the honest citizens.

In yesterday's robbery the staff of the bank were surprised before they could get possession of their firearms, and thus, although the manager and teller had revolvers in the office, they were of no use in protecting the bank's property.

The man who wants a firearm for use in an unlawful expedition has no more trouble in securing one than he would have in buying a gallon of gasoline or a pound of butter.

No wonder there are many individuals and many newspapers who are calling for more drastic regulations in regard to the sale of revolvers, and that some people go so far as to demand that the manufacture of these weapons should be made illegal.

SENSATIONALISM.

An American novelist rose on his hind legs a few weeks ago to declare that the "unreserved sensationalism" of the "yellow press" is sapping the intellectual vitality of the American people and is developing in the big cities an ignorant, prejudicial type similar to the backwoods poor white. This sensational journalism, he complains, is being made a substitute for thought, reading and sounding information and that in the life of the readers emotions are substituted for intellectual activity. It is not a new criticism. The same thing has been said of the radio and the movies. The radio, we are told has debauched musical taste and the movies have replaced sound theatrical fare with sex thrillers. Mr. Wisheart, the author to whom we have referred, is partly right, we think, and also partly wrong. Yellow journalism began in the late 90's and the readers that it gained were not weaned away from sober, conservative dailies. They were, in the main, people who previously had read nothing at all. It is the same with the radio. Countless thousands of people who now listen in nightly to jazz bands never heard music worthy of the name before at all. The music that comes over the air may sometimes be banal and cheap, but it is not displacing anything. It is something new to many radio fans. The movies, too, are in the same class. The amount of really worth-while drama they have displaced could be engraved on a pin-head and acted by a troupe of deaf mutes. They represent a new form of entertainment and fill a vacancy that had always existed. We talk sometimes as if all ages but our own had been characterized by widespread education, good taste, tolerance and deeply-rooted culture. But that is not so. This is no brief for sensational journalism. The "tab" sheets are anathema in the mouths of the majority of those of the newspaper profession, the black sheep of the newspaper family. They do not fill a need, but neither do they displace anything. The only useful purpose they serve, we think, is to reveal the number of people whose education has been neglected.—Hamilton Spectator.

HISTORY AS AN ASSET.

The landmarks of Canada's history are not all to be found in Quebec, but there are so many in that Province, and they are so well marked and so well advertised, that the other Provinces seem poor by comparison. A "historical reminder" from the pen of J. Camille Pouliot, a judge of the Superior Court, recently distributed from the office of Hon. J. L. Perron, Quebec Minister of Highways, indicates the wealth of tradition that enwraps the city of Quebec and the Isle of Orleans. The association of the Department of Highways with a book devoted to description of places of historic interest reveals the purpose of the publication, but it is far more exhaustive and attractive than the ordinary guide-book, and is worthy, in fact, of a place on the library shelf.

Judge Pouliot points out that Quebec is the fourth oldest city north of the Gulf of Mexico, but its record of growth and struggle through more than three centuries shows it to be far richer in interest than its predecessors, St. Augustine, Port Royal and Jamestown. The whole city appears as a museum of historic importance, with monuments, fortifications, convents and chapels all linked with names of heroic men and women, law-makers, teachers and churchmen. From the Wolfe-Montcalm monument and the Champlain statue down to the Indian chapel at Lorette and the Quebec Bridge, all these landmarks are illustrated and described accurately and attractively. So held up to notice, they cannot fail to catch and retain the attention and admiration of tourists.

A natural feeling of envy toward the lower Province is somewhat dissipated upon reflection. Ontario is a century or so younger, in a sense, than Quebec. Places with historical associations are not yet hallowed by time to the extent that they are there. Nevertheless Ontario has its points of great interest, some of them already marked with statues or monuments, and many more that will be set apart as shrines in years to come. The fortifications at Malden or Niagara, the battlefields of Queenston or Moraviantown, the sites of the early French missions, the homes of the earliest white families, structures like the old Indian church in the Mohawk Valley, the last resting-places of picturesque colonizers like "Tiger" Dunlop and Colonel Talbot, and the surviving traces of the earthworks and villages of the warring Indians—all these have an appeal that could be magnified if proper care were taken to mark and preserve them. As time goes on these historic places through the Province can be organized and built up until they tell the full story of our own history, just as the sites and shrines of old Quebec together represent three centuries of conflict and progress in an older area. Historians and antiquarians will not long be allowed to monopolize the enjoyment of the tradition which attaches to the landmarks, when it is seen that they can be capitalized as provincial and national assets. Quebec has set an admirable example.—London Advertiser.

OUT OF HAND.

Canadians, as they read newspaper accounts of the activities of American gangsters, are amazed that the authorities across the line should have allowed conditions to reach their present state. Hold-up men, burglars, safe-crackers, murderers are plying their trade on every hand and, in thousands of cases, "getting away with it." One of the outstanding features of the situation is found in the organizations maintained by the underworld. The whole thing has been reduced to a fine system. Business men find themselves in the clutches of organized gangs who extract weekly or monthly tribute on threat of death for non-payment. And when, occasionally, some of the guilty ones are brought into court, snappy lawyers find ways and means of staving off the law's penalties, getting light sentences, upsetting decisions on technical grounds, and otherwise defeating the purpose of the law that is supposed to be for the protection of society.

The great weakness of the American system of punishment for criminals seems to be the assumption that points of law are for the benefit of the criminal rather than the public. A gunman shoots an innocent citizen. The criminal is arrested. A few weeks pass by and the excitement has subsided. Then begins the long tussle to defeat the ends of justice. One legal point after another is raised. The "sob sisters" are called into action, if necessary. Petitions are circulated. Everything possible is done to save the criminal from the punishment to which he is richly entitled. The poor victim is forgotten entirely. And yet some persons wonder why crime is so rampant in the United States, why human life is held so lightly, why so many men who are a continual menace to society, are at liberty to repeat their wrong-doing. The only way to protect the public lies in dealing harshly with the criminal element. Namby-pamby methods, sickening sentiment, bail for men arrested on serious charges—all these things work against the proper administration of the law. Gunmen will flourish and good citizens will perish as long as the underworld is allowed to remain as brazen and as bold as one finds it in the United States to-day.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Empire buyers are Empire builders.

Some people think their full duty in regard to conserving Canada's forest resources is done if they refrain from taking a handful of toothpicks in the hotel dining-room.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, April 27 (Canadian Press). — The foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday showed some improvement and a moderate amount of business was worked with United Kingdom buyers in wheat and oats.

Outside of an odd sale of a round lot of oats trading in cash grain was quiet, but the undertone was firm and prices showed no change.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat flour were firmly maintained under an inactive demand.

The undertone to market for millfeed remained firm with a good demand for local and country account and for shipment to the United States. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and prices were steady.

A feature of the egg trade was the increased demand from packers and dealers and sales of car lots of British Columbia extras were made at 28½ cents per dozen, and first at 26½ cents per dozen f.o.b. Vancouver. There was also a little more activity in the jobbing trade and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 3,597 cases.

The demand for potatoes was confined to odd cars to meet immediate wants, but the undertone was steady.

A moderate demand was in evidence for imported beans and values were unchanged.

The butter trade continued quiet, but the tone of the market was steady and prices unchanged. The receipts were 870 packages.

An easier feeling prevailed in the cheese market, but there was no actual change in prices. The demand was dull. The receipts were 611 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 27 (Canadian Press).—Heavy selling of wheat on the part of leading holders developed yesterday after all grain had outdone high price records that were only attained Wednesday. Reports of rain southwest gave impetus to the wheat selling, which, however, appeared to be largely to realize profits.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at the same as Wednesday's finish to 1 cent lower, with corn 1 cent to 1¾ cents down; oats varying from ¾ cent decline to ¾ cent advance, and privisions 2 cents off to 20 cents up.

Except for suggestions that rains in the southwest might extend to territory which has been suffering from drought, most of the news yesterday affecting wheat was of a decidedly bullish sort. The developments included surprising strength of wheat quotations at Liverpool, together with increasingly pessimistic crop advices from many parts of the United States Winter wheat belt, Western Nebraska and Northwestern Kansas in particular. Authoritative dispatches from the two sections specified said that unless moisture came soon the wheat throughout that region would be a complete loss.

Going hand-in-hand with the fresh advances in price scored by wheat yesterday were dispatches from Buenos Aires saying that Argentine stocks of wheat are decreasing rapidly, and that by the end of May, Argentine would have only 37,000,000 bushels available for export. Meanwhile, European demand yesterday for wheat from North America was on a broad scale, purchases for prompt shipment being estimated at 1,300,000 bushels at one time. Liverpool wheat yesterday was 2¾ to 3¾ cents higher, with the close at 1¾ to 2¾ cents net advance.

For the most part, the price changes in corn and oats reflected the action of the wheat market. Meanwhile, country offerings of corn to arrive were larger. On the other hand, weather was too cool for corn planting.

Provisions averaged firmer, sympathizing with grain.

VISION OF MORE UNITED CANADA

of the speakers at the banquet. He told of the success of the Association's exhibit at the National Motor Boat Show in New York last February; of the work on the Trent Canal and of the necessity for the early completion of it which will result in increased tourist traffic.

Mr. Fowlds mentioned the proposed exhibit at the second annual Sportsmen's Exposition at Cleveland, May 17 to 23, with its possibilities. He was pleased to announce that the exhibit would be carried out and hoped for the co-operation of Peterborough's Council and Chamber of Commerce.

He concluded by congratulating President-elect James Dutton of the Chamber of Commerce.

Leon Frazer

Leon Frazer, secretary of the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce, expressed his pleasure on returning to Peterborough even for a short visit, and bespoke great growth for his adopted city—Oshawa. Mr. Frazer stressed the importance of co-operation among the Chambers of Commerce. In his work, he wished to co-operate with Peterborough and hoped that the two cities might work together on their common problem —the power question.

President James Dutton, introduced by Chairman G. A. Gillespie (himself a past president of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce), was greeted with the singing of "See Him Smiling."

He said: "What we do in the Chamber of Commerce is for the good of the city. I recall my arrival here seventeen years ago, a lonely stranger, but since that day I have always felt at home in Peterborough. I was determined to demonstrate that there were some good Englishmen—to maintain the best traditions of Old England.

"I am ready to serve in any capacity—if there is any work to do, I am willing to do it for the city of Peterborough.

"Referring to the Chamber of Commerce, I have a feeling that much of the criticism levelled at that body in the past was unfair and that if the critics had been closely in touch with it, that criticism would have been constructive rather than destructive."

The president paid tribute to the work of such men as J. J. Turner, J. J. Duffus and others and challenged every man present to give active, sympathetic co-operation to the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, which has set before itself a program, including various phases of community work. The chairman, to look after each phase of the work, must have assistance in the formation of their committees. The questionnaire sent out recently is to be made use of.

Re Industrial Commissioner.

"How to bring in more industries is a vital question peculiarly related to the Chamber of Commerce, but if industries are to be brought in, we must get down to the task and spare neither time nor money," Mr. Dutton continued.

"We must have a specially trained man to go out after them. If we are to have industries we must be prepared to spend money along this line for it is not fair to ask a civic official to do the work." The speaker here paid tribute to City Clerk Armstrong for his work in this connection.

"I like to see a full time city commissioner, whose salary would be paid jointly by the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce.

"We must have closer co-operation between Council, Chamber, service clubs and the like, doing team work on the task.

"We should seek to know our city better. In travelling I have seen no place better than Peterborough and have found that people outside are more appreciative of our resources and opportunities than we are ourselves.

"We must have a larger vision for our city in order that we may extend ours bounds and make Peterborough a city that is worth while!"

A. M. Dollar Introduced

To J. J. Duffus fell the honor of introducing the chief speaker of the evening, A. M. Dollar, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, whose visit to Peterborough was, he believed, of great importance and benefit to the city. Mr. Duffus mentioned some of the high places of responsibility held by the distinguished visitor and concluded by extending to him a hearty welcome.

"I bring you greetings from the Canadian Chamber of Commerce," were the opening words of Mr. Dollar as he arose, to be greeted in turn by a round of welcoming applause. He lost but little time in coming to the subject of which he is so proud

"The Canadian Chamber of Commerce"

"The vision of some such Dominion body was first caught by men in Toronto—it took early form in a constitution drawn up three years ago at a conference of representatives from the various Boards of Trade, who gathered from all points in the Dominion in the city of Winnipeg—and it crystallized one year later in St. John, New Brunswick, when its first executive was elected with Mr. Gundy as president," said Mr. Dollar.

"The next meeting was held in Vancouver and at it, my election to the presidency took place, though my work, I feel, is much easier because the ball had been set in motion by my predecssors. Interesting are the figures which show that the Canadian Chamber's membership has grown from 78 Boards of Trade at the first of 1927 to 124 on November 1, and 155 at the present time. In other words, the membership has increased at the rate of from four to five a month or one each week.

Organization Takes Time

"What have we been doing during the last couple of years?" is the question which may be asked by the Board of Trade or the individual since we may have seemed slow in accomplishing anything apparent. The answer is, that since the membership and prospective membership in the Canadian Chamber of Commerce is scattered throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion the work so far has been largely that of organization, for we must learn to creep before we can walk.

In our constitution, we are bound to deal with matters of Dominion concern and to avoid matters of provincial or municipal interest. Accordingly, we may ask the various Boards of Trad or Chambers of Commerce to decide on a question from which the executive may form a statement of its findings showing why a matter to be placed before the Dominion government we are in a position to say what the various Boards of Trade or Chamber of Com- be available to the government a clear, concise cross-section view of the Dominion which has never before been available.

"In the choice of Quebec city as the location for the 1928 Convention, the object has been, as in the past, to have the representatives visit a different part of the Dominion, thus gaining from an exchange of views an education not likely to be gained in any other way.

"The Canadian Chamber can also be of assistance to the municipal Board of Trade or Chamber of Com- which has been backward, for it can provide programs and suggestions for re-organization and new phases of community work—truly, there is a real place for a board of trade or similar body in every municipality. There is also the "Monthy Bulletin, our publication which is sent to councils and governing bodies of Chambers of Commerce."

In conclusion, Mr. Dollar extended an invitation to Peterborough representatives to attend the annual convention being held in Quebec City June 8-10 and to take in the trip up the Saguenay river which will precede the convention. He expressed on behalf of himself and the other officials appreciation of the kind hospitality for which Peterborough is famous and of the inspiration which the meeting had been to them.

While introducing William Birks, of Montreal, F. D. Kerr, K.C., added his words of welcome to the visitors and in humorous vein went on to reveal a certain reciprocation of sympathies between the St. Lawrence port city and the city of Peterborough. He congratulated Chairman Gillespie, President-elect James Dutton and the Chamber officers of the local chamber on the splendid attendance at the meeting.

William Birks.

fro mthe Motherland. He is head of executive of the Canadian Chamber, and who has but recently returned from his 88th crossing of the Atlantic, Mr. Birks brought to the meeting a note of optimism regarding trade in the Motherland. His observations of progress, rapid or gradual, his references to the Romance of Canadian Trade and his views on the Dominion body with which he is closely associated, constituted an address that was accorded rapt attention.

'Mr. Kerr's reference to the visit of Champlain to Peterborough on leaving Montreal, brings to my mind the thought of a phase in Canadian history not often stressed, namely, the romance of Canadian trade," he began. "At one time there were two thousand or more French, Indian and half-breed canoemen from the St. Lawrence to the head of the lakes and with them was closely associated the story of how the fur trade began. A passing thought of great significance in our day is the appoint recently of Sir William Clark as High Commissioner to Canada from the Motherlyand. He is head of the Overseas Trade Department in London. His appointment indicates a stressing of the high position which trade, commerce and finance holds in the life of the British Empire.

"Within the last three weeks I have returned from England and the continent and am pleased to asy that my impressions are not similar to those of pessimists who do not know the situation. England has not fallen into a state of decay and her best days are by no means past! There is more employment than before the war and in shipping and foreign exchange there is evidence of satisfactory progress.

"In France one does not note quite as much indication of progress but Germany is worth watching for she is rebuilding wonderfully; Italy is on tip toes, for though there is not a man in this gathering to-night who would stand for Mussolini for five minutes, the Italian says he needs Il Duce.

'As for Canada, there is a need for close loyalty to the Motherland. The "Canada First" idea is not a necessary or sensible one for a man may be loyal Canadian and be British to the core!

"Regarding a Canadian Chamber of Commerce, it is a fact that Canada has been the last of all the countries to have such a Federal Chamber as all the countries in Europe have long since had such an organization. It is a means toward formulating a general view on various matters which otherwise would trouble our government, and it provides an education for the representatives. What is good for business is good for Canada."

The speaker went on to point out that the really great business problems are not municipal but national instancing Immigration, Natural resources, Empire trade, a national highway and others. Canada's location geographically places her in the centre of the world's trade; she possesses mineral wealth of greater value than all her wheatfields, and it is up to Canada to decide whether she will be a backyard to the United States or a competitor. "Come with us in a spirit of co-operation to build up Canada within the Empire and there are great things ahead," said Mr. Birks in conclusion.

Secretary Speaks.

W. M. Clarke, secretary of the Executive of the Dominion Chamber was the third speaker to speak, he being introduced by President Dutton, who paid tribute to his value as one of the permanent officials of the Dominion organization. Mr. Clarke said that he had watched with interest the reorganizatiom of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce. Particularly pleasing, he felt, was the splendid support accorded the organizers by The Examiner through its news columns, but more especially through its editorials, which he had carefully clipped.

The speaker went on to emphasize the necessity for every member to take an active interest in the local Chamber of Commerce, and pointed out the significance of the Jubilee celebration.

He believed that a lively Federal Chamber should be a contributing factor toward the unification of Canada—that it is impossible for us to retire into an economic shell and yet progress. The Dominion body would be a clearing house between business and industry, what with its main committees on Immigraton, Interprovincial trade and its advisory council. Mr. Clarke quoted Kipling as a closing challenge to those present to get behind the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, and to work together in harmony.

The vote of thanks to the various speakers and to those taking part on the program was ably moved by E. B. Fowler, who had been a delegate from this city to the convention in Winnipeg, three years ago. Mr. Fowler told of the splendid spirit which had been so evident at that time, and compared it with that of this evening, at the start of another year's work by the local Chamber of Commerce. The meeting closed with the singing of O, Canada."

The reason truth is stronger than fiction is because it is so much more uncommon.

PLAINTIFF ENTERS CASE AS WITNESS

having said some and to others he replied that might have been the sense of something he said some time.

Sir Arthur said Cambrai was when the first thought came to him that the Allies would defeat Germany. Cambrai was considered one of the most brilliant operations of the war.

No More Barrages.

Sir Arthur admitted further that he had told Col. MacNaughton, G.O.C., Canadian Artillery, that the barrage he was asking him to fire would probably be the last in the war that he would ask him to fire.

Mr. Regan—"How do you stand there and say that when earlier in the day you told this Court that you had no knowledge that the war would be over till 6.45 on the morning of November 11, and that the Germans might establish themselves on the line of the Meuse?"

General Currie—"There is no inconsistency. We had him on the run. We didn't disengage. We weren't going to let him stop at the line of the Meuse."

We were not going to let them get away from us so to disengage and take up a position behind the Meuse, a most difficult line for us to attack.

Mr. Regan took up Mr. Vining's article and for half an hour he asked witness if statements in it were true.

"In your Corps report, you say on the night of the tenth the 3rd Division had reached Mons. What did you mean by that?" asked Mr. Regan.

"They reached the railway station" was the answer.

Sir Sam Hughes' statement in the House of Commons, where he criticied the conduct of Sir Arthur Currie in taking Mons was read by Mr. Regan.

Sir Arthur replied that it was one of the many statements made about him since war closed.

Asked what resistance must be encountered to stay the Canadians, Sir Arthur mentioned machine gun and shell fire. When the troops encountered this they stopped. When they entered the town at the railway station there was no opposition. The enemy retired, vacating the city of his own accord, thought Sir Arthur. He said he could account for the dead German soldier in a number of ways.

Returning to the writ issued which brought about the present action, Sir Arthur stated the article in The Guide was incorrect by an hour. The main body of German troops had left town. Even the rearguard had evacuated, he claimed, and only a few stragglers were left behind. These were picked up in the cellars, but there was no resistance offered. At Mr. Regan's request, Sir Arthur indicated the general line on which the troops stopped.

Mr. Regan: Then they had passed their objective.

Gen. Currie: No, they were on the general line. Any one who understands a military order knows that."

No Entry as Conqueror

Asked of his entry into Mons, Sir Arthur Currie said he did not ride into Mons as its conqueror, but as the general officer commanding the Canadian Corps.

Regarding the so-called ride into Mons through the dead, killed on the last day of the war, Sir Arthur declared he had seen none, but two dead Germans. Until a month ago he had believed that there was absolutely no Canadians killed on the eleventh of November, 1918.

"I now believe that there was no Canadian killed that morning with the exception of one, poor Price," said Sir Arthur.

Major-General Morrison's report of his entry to Mons on the morning of November 11 when he wrote of seeing dead in the gutter along the road was, referred to Sir Arthur, who replied he had no proof of what the late Major-General wrote.

"Do you agree with this?" asked Mr. Regan. "You entered Mons preceded by a troop of mounted men and followed by your battle standard."

"I agree that I had mounted troops and was followed by my mounted orderly carrying his staff on which he had mounted a small Canadian flag, which I was not ashamed of."

Mr. Regan: Why did you add that about the flag? Do you mean to refer there is a member in this court that is ashamed of the flag?

"I hope not," said Sir Arthur.

"Well, refrain such remarks," said Mr. Regan

The defence lawyer again referred to Mr. Vining's article and read of General Currie telling Mr. Vining that he was in his bath when the word of the armistice came to him.

Mr. Regan: "Did you finish your bath?"

Sir Arthur: "I don't know, but I guess I did for I am not in it now. I don't remember any incident of the men rejoicing. It was too deep a feeling. I cannot describe it. I remember quite well being with the First Brigade on that morning and how they felt about it," said Sir Arthur speaking on the feeling of the troops on the event of the armistice.

Asked by Mr. Regan why he had not procured certain papers when ordered to do so Sir Arthur stated that he had been ordered to bring with him everything relating to the case, and he had brought everything.

Mr. Regan at once began to search for a copy of this order sent to Sir Arthur and then read this and others in court. After some minutes of this had passed Mr. Tilley rose to object to the procedure in dealing with a witness and Mr. Regan said Mr. Tilley was unfair in this action, and expressed surprise at him doing such a thing. Finally in order to save time and straighten out the matter His Lordship examined the papers, explained the legal procedure to the counsel, and then Mr. Regan continued to question Sir Arthur.

No Celebration.

General Currie, replying to him, maintained his belief that there was no celebration in Mons. He saw the parade, he admitted; the previous day he had arranged to inspect the First Brigade on November 11 at Valenciennes and when they were in Mons he went there. He had nothing to do up at the front. By going there he could not speed up the word that had already been despatched along the usual channels, and by the usual machinery.

Regarding a statement allegedly made by him at Mons which ended with "God, I'd like to see them at the Boche again," General Currie said he did not recall having made it. He claimed that any general would feel proud when he saw the spirit with which his men marched off at parade.

Mr. Regan: "With over a quarter of a million casualties in your corps, you were not satisfied?"

Gen. Currie: "Yes, I was satisfied."

Q: "You wanted another fight?"

A.—"No, I did not."

Then Sir Arthur appeared to lose patience and the feeling which he had for his men rushed to the surface and he spoke unsolicited on the matter.

"I know more about the casualties than you do, Mr. Regan. I was there all through the months of the war," he began and continued to speak feelingly on the pride which he had in his corps and its men and said that no one regretted the casualties any more than he did.

"Why did you not mention casualties in the official report you made to the Government?" roared Mr. Regan.

"I did," replied Sir Arthur. "You accused me of cowardice."

"I did not," replied Mr. Regan. "Don't try to add any solo to this case. The newspapers have done enough already when they come out and say this libel suit is a fight between civilians and soldiers."

Casualties were then referred to and comparisons made with other corps. Witness claimed the Canadians' casualties were comparatively light.

Mr. Regan—"I put it this way, that 60 per cent. of the casualties in the First Army on some of the last days of the war were Canadian."

Witness emphatically denied Mr. Regan's statement.

Officers Applaud.

The record of the last 100 days was read by Mr. Regan and then he asked witness if he might not have spared his men a little more.

"No," declared Sir Arthur. "You would have them disobey orders, lie down on the last few days, be guilty of treason, be not faithful to their commanders, disobey Marshal Foch. Those were not the kind of men that would do such a thing." Officers in the court stamped their feet slightly to General Currie's remarks about his men. His Lordship turned and shook his head but uttered not a word in disapproval of the act of the soldiers who had fought under Sir Arthur and had come to testify in his behalf.

Mr. Regan—"You say they would be guilty of treason if they disobeyed an order?"

Sir Arthur—"Yes, if they disobeyed those orders."

Mr. Regan—"Let's see how close you came."

Reading then from an account of the Canadians at the Somme Mr. Regan asked Mr. Currie how he came to change his tactics there. In reply the General said he had used his own judgment and considered it better to stand fast at where they were. He could not say that the same tactics could be applied to Mons. After reading from an account of the Canadian Corps written by an official government correspondent, Mr. Regan put the question—"How many armies did you manage to get the corps in?" Sir Arthur protested that the question was not fairly put, but replied that the corps had been in the 1st, 2nd and 4th armies. He could not place it in any army he chose. He had never been insubordinate. After asking permission of His Lordship to speak, Sir Arthur said "the Canadian corps was part of the British Army and it only went to such places as it was assigned."

The map above shows the railway extensions for the north which have just been sanctioned by the House of Commons. The C. P. R. through the Interprovincial and James Bay railway plan an extension from Ville Marie northward on the east side of Lake Temiskaming. Another line goes from Angliers in the northeasterly direction at or near Rouyn and north of the Transcontinental to the head waters of the Nottaway river. The Nipissing Central, tributary of the T. and N. O. Railway, have had renewed the original charter of 1907 which authorized lines, as indicated on the map, from Latchford and New Liskard, northeasterly and north-westerly to the Transcontinental.

The nearest approach to the completely driverless car has been achieved in Sao Paulo, Brazil where engineers of a big water power project have found it possible to start their Studebaker Dictators with set throttle and let the cars run without attention.

The trick lies in the highway, however. The cars when so "driven" are used for inspection trips through the huge pipelines. The sides of the big concrete pipe effectively do the steering, and there are neither crossroads nor other cars to halt progress.

Nine Studebaker Dictators were purchased for the use of government engineers in charge of the construction of a new water system to supply the city of Sao Paulo.

Almost as famous as the Bremen, whom are in the U. S. at present, east-to-west transatlantic aeroplane flight in history, is the monocle which was worn by, and has been the inseparable companion of the expitition's financial backer, Baron Ehrenfried Gunther von Huenefeld. Even when Captain Herman Koehl brought the big metal bird down on Greenly Island and when it pitched forward in the ice, gashing Koehl's forehead and injuring Huenefeld's wrist, the monocle never left the baron's eye. Through it he has gazed philosophically and imperturbably at both perils and success. He wears it not from affectation but on account of poor sight in one eye. The above close-up of the German baron shows him blissfully puffing away at the first tailor-made Canadian cigarette to come between his lips following his arrival on Greenly Island.

Since December, 1925, Captain George Hubert Wilkins, Australian aviator and explorer, has been devoting all his energies to completing an aerial trip across the top of the world from Alaska to Spitsbergen. Attempted flights in 1926 and 1927 came to grief, but finally the Svalbard radio station in Spitsbergen flashed out word that Wilkins and his pilot, Lieut. Carl Ben Eielson, had reached Green Harbor. The monoplane Vega had apparently made a non-stop flight of about 2,200 miles across the polar area. It was, however, forced down at Dauholmen on Doedmansoetra (Dead Man Island), an uninhabited bit of land about 25 miles from Spitsbergen. Here it was weatherbound for five days before being able to continue to its original objective. Wilkins' hope of locating land on the trans-polar flight was not realized. Flying time for the complete trip was twenty an d a half hours. In the illustration: (1) Is a full-length picture of Eielson, who is a North Dakotan and former Alaska air mail pilot. He was at the controls in the trans-polar trip. (2) Is a close-up of Wilkins, who acted as observer on the flight, while (3) is a close-up of Eielson. In (4) Wilkins is seen in fur-parka and with rifle ready for an Arctic hunt.

(1) Dr. Saunders is shortly leaving Ottawa to take up his residence in Toronto. In addition Mr. Fosbery exhibits copy of his bust of Sir Robert Borden (3), exhibited at the Royal Academy and a recently completed statuette of the late Earl Haig (2) the British generalissimo in the great war.

Harold Eustace Key, musical director of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has just spent some weeks in the West preparing for the Winnipeg New-Canadian music and handicraft festival to be held next June, and for the Vancouver sea festival which will be held in September. Miss Grela M. Ferris, a New Brunswick nurse now stationed at the Grenfell mission in Blanc Sablon, was one of the first outsiders to greet the three transatlantic Bremen fliers after their landing in Canada, she having mushed over to Greenely Island by dog team to offer medical aid and the hospitality of the mission. Neither however, was required by Baron von Huenefeld, Herman Koehl or Major James Fitzmaurice who were comfortably settled as guests of lighthouse-keeper C. Templier. The illustration shows Miss Ferris and Sir Wilfred Grenfell, noted missionary and medical worker, to whose mission she is attached.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

A Republication of the Book by Permission of the Author, Jack Miner of Kingsville, Ont.

Finally the eight of them all started for the north pond. But Jack looked and saw the hen following; so he just stepped back and gave her one blow with his stub wing which sent her moulting and screaming with terror towards the chicken house. But in about fifteen minutes when I returned from the factory the goslings came back after their step-mother, Jack following them. I succeeded in coaxing her out and he saw her family salute and caress her, as they uttered volumes of baby talk, apparently expressing their sympathy. This old gander never touched her afterwards, and the hen lived out at the pond with the eight geese until the snow drove her in. No other fowl on the premises dared venture near her, for the gander guarded her as one of his family from then on.

The old mother goose got a little better towards fall, but when winter set in she took a change for the worse and one day in January I went back and picked her up and decided to bring her to the house and doctor her up. When I got to the cow-stable I turned the cow out, leaving the goose there while I went to the house for dope. When the cow passed out the door, old Jack Johnson, who was right on my heels ever since I picked up his mate, flew into the cow like a bull-dog and gave her a real trimming. On returning from the house I found he had driven her around the corner, but was still fighting and honking at this innocent old beast.

When I opened the cow-stable door I found the old goose's struggle was over. She was dead. And while her faithful old mate was around out of sight, still busily engaged with the cow, I took the goose out and buried her; therefore he never saw her afterwards.

To be brief, he fought the cow, on and off, for two or three weeks. Then he seemed to content himself by watching her. And for two and a half years he kept constant guard over her, and never was seen to be over three rods away from her head. On several occasions she broke out, but he followed and was seen over a mile from home. In fact she needed no bell to be located, as his honking answered the purpose. During the summer months he slept at her head in the pasture field, but when winter came and the cow was stabled, he always slept on the doorstep. One morning in March I snapped him there.

He apparently blamed her for his trouble, and paid no attention whatever to any other goose, not even his own family. His sad honking, however, became so dreadfully mournful to one and all that I finally got rid of him.

On another occasion I kept a widowed goose for four years and she still honked for her old love. Now, if anything happens to one of a pair around here, I will give you the other, as I cannot stand to hear their deep, mournful cries, that to me make the whole place gloomy.

I have heard good honest men say that their wild ganders when turned with a flock of tame geese will mate with more than one goose. But here at my home everything is as near the natural state as I can possibly make it, and I haven't seen these geese show any inclination toward acting that way.

Here is a fact hard for you to believe, for it is beyond the human power's control. These wild geese come here from the south-east Atlantic coast, arriving about March the first; if fed and protected they will not leave here for Hudson Bay, where they nest, before April the twentieth to May the first, living here under exactly the same conditions as our wing-clipped or pinioned ones do. And ours usually lay the last week in March.

This year six young were hatched on April the 27th, and it takes twenty-eight or twenty-nine days for incubation alone.

Or to give you a better explanation I will say, take a pair of these wild geese, clip their wings and keep them here. In about three years they will nest, but will do so fully a month earlier than if they had their wings and could go to their natural breeding ground. Possibly their reason for nesting earlier when they are compelled to stay here is to get their young well developed before the extremely hot weather sets in, as I have had them die in dry, hot weather. On the other hand, when they are three days old they will toddle around among the white frost on the clover leaves and enjoy their meal as if it were sugar-coated.

Now I am aware that I have been altogether too lengthy; but I have so many of these interesting facts that I can't, apparently, ring off.

I know you educated people call it nature, or instinct; and really I have heard such a variety of names for this goose-knowledge that I don't try to look up the meaning of these artificial words; for I am sure if all their meanings were boiled down, and all the man-made, artificial names were skimmed off, the real interpretation would be—"G O D."

Last summer, about the first of July, as I went from the factory to the house, Mrs. Miner said to me, "What is the matter with your geese? This old pair and the four young ones have come to the house and honked two or three times. We have driven them back to the north pond, time and again." I said at once, "Were there only four young that came up?" She assured me that was all. But the looks and actions of the geese were enough; I knew there was something wrong, for when the old pair saw me they honked aloud.

I hustled through the shrubbery and these geese followed me. On my arrival at the water's edge the meaning of their mysterious actions was revealed, for I saw the gosling lying dead upon the east shore. I hurried along and picked it up. On examination I found a small head of rye in its wind-pipe. The noise of the machinery where I was working had prevented my hearing the alarmed cries of the parent birds, or I would have gotten there in time to save its life. However, it was then too late; the gosling had been dead at least an hour.

So I took it by one foot and carried it in my hand; and the parents and the four remaining young followed at my heels right back to the house. I buried the gosling beside the rose-path, with the broken family of geese standing within fifteen feet of me. We had to drive them back several times before they would stay and it was fully a week before they would content themselves back at their home where they had lived all summer.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
The Migration of Our Canada Geese.

As to the regularity of the migration of our Canada goose which is pointed out on this map, I must say I am greatly indebted to the kind assistance of the Hudson's Bay Company's agents and those of the Revillon Fur Company, and I have a great ambition to lay aside all home cares and enjoyments and in the near future treat myself to a three months' trip to the nesting grounds of our Canada geese, where I will have the great pleasure of grasping the hands of all classes of these men whom the geese have let me know are on earth.

As proof that these men are genuine I am reproducing some of their letters, the following is the first one I received:

Hudson's Bay Com'y,
Moose Factory, Ont.,
August 19th, 1915,
via Cochrane.

Box 48,
Kingsville, Ontario.
Dear Sir.—

I have an aluminum ring with the above address stamped on the outside and number 15 on the inside. This was taken off the leg of a Canada Grey Goose shot by an Indian last spring about the 15th April a few miles south of the H.B. Post of Eastmain on James Bay. The Indian who shot it said that it was in a band of about fifteen and this particular goose appeared larger than the others and of a lighter colored plumage. It was probably bound for the breeding grounds, north, from the fact of its being in a flock. A good many geese hatch all around the bay but these are generally seen flying around in pairs before nesting. These birds are very easily tamed and I have seen some here taken very young which, after they have grown up, would continue staying around the place after being turned loose. I would be interested to hear from you the particulars of this goose and hope I have given you all the information you require about it. I am,

Yours faithfully,
W. E. Camsell.

Later, in January, 1916, I received another letter, as follows:

Hudson's Bay Company,
Fort George, James Bay,
via Cochrane.
27th January, 1916.

Box 48,
Kingsville, Ont.
Dear Sir,—

This is to inform you that an Indian last week brought me a band, bearing the above address, which was taken from the leg of a goose, killed about the middle of October last at Comb Hills, a point on the coast of James Bay about forty miles south of this Post.

As the Indian seemed to expect something for giving me the band, I paid him a dollar and shall be glad if you will kindly refund same to me.

Yours truly,
Owen Griffith.

I at once sent a few dollars to these agents requesting that they pay the Indians and Esquimaux one dollar each for the tags. I also requested them to give me all particulars about that country, as to what the geese feed on, where they nest; in fact, that any information would be acceptable.

The following letters of interest were written me:

Hudson's Bay Company,

14th Nov., 1916.

My dear Jack,—

I was very glad to get your letter of August 30th, and must thank you for your enclosure of $5.00. I am sure you will think I have been a long while in answering your letter, but I have been over in England this summer and only returned to this part of the country about two weeks ago; it was only on my arrival here that I received your letter, and as there will be a packet out as soon as the ice is strong, I am taking the first opportunity to answer your letter.

I am now stationed here at Moose for the winter and shall be going to Albany in the spring. This is a post on the opposite side of James Bay to Fort George, but a very good place for game, especially for those birds we call "wavies." The correct name for these birds, I believe, is "snow goose." It is a strange thing that on the west coast of James Bay we get almost nothing but white "wavies," with an occasional blue one in the flock, while on the east coast it is just the opposite with almost nothing but blue (grey) with a few white ones in the flock, while a short distance farther north (on the east coast) at Whale River the white reappear again in large numbers, so that they evidently cross the bay on their annual migrations.

There are lots of geese both on the east and west sides of the bay, but I believe that more pass on the east (Fort George side) than the other, as the coast is rocky with lots of islands where they can breed. We have some islands out in the bay called the "Tioms" which are great breeding places.

The Indians who killed those tagged geese said that they seemed to be tamer than the others and came out of large flocks and down to the decoys when the rest of the band would not turn.

About three miles north of Fort George Post there is a big bay (salt water) with lots of mud and grass at low tide, and in the spring almost every flock of wavies and some geese feed in this bay on their way north. The Indians never hunt them on their arrival in this bay, but gather on a long hill on the other side and then shoot at the birds as they are going off. They generally get up in small flocks; as they have to rise considerably to clear the hill, they can be seen getting up some time before they get to the hill, and then every one runs along a path and tries to get right under where the flock is going to pass. Of course if three or four flocks get up at the same time there is shooting on different parts of the hill and the hunters are apt to spoil one another's sport. The Indians say that once these birds leave this bay that they do not feed again till they get far north (Hudson Straits or Baffin Land). In fact a wavies nest is a great rarity. Strange to say they do not feed in this bay in the fall.

We have no wild rice in the bay and the birds seem to feed mostly on grass in the salt water, and in the fall they go out to the islands to feed on berries; they fly out to the islands in the mornings and back into the small bays for the nights.

I am staying with Mr. Camsell just now and he tells me to be sure and remember him to you. He is going to walk out to the line in March and will perhaps try to look you up.

I am enclosing you some photos which I think may interest you. I have written on the backs what they represent.

The Indians get lots of fish in their nets but not much in winter except with hooks.

Mr. Camsell showed me the photo of yourself. Please send me one.

Well, I will write you again, and in the meantime remain,

Yours sincere friend,
Owen Griffith.

Dear Mr. Miner,—

The enclosed metal band, No. 18 S, was brought here to-day by an Indian, by name Andrew Butterfly, who killed the goose carrying the band, while hunting in Hannah Bay, south-east of James' Bay.

Andrew informs me that the goose was killed on April 28th, 1918.

We are all very much interested in your experiments down here, and make a point of returning the bands we receive. If you require any further particulars about the geese killed, please let me know, and I will try to give you as much information as possible.

Yours faithfully,
Geo. Watson.

Great Whale River Post, via Cochrane, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Miner,—

I have delayed answering your letter of Sept. 4, until I saw some of my hunters from the north, so as to get as much information as I could about the nesting place of the geese, etc.

The Esquimaux tell me that a good many birds nest at some large islands, about north-west of this Post. The islands are called the north and south Belchers, and some of them are fairly large. One of them has a large lake extending nearly the whole length of the island and this is the place where a good many of the geese nest. I have received two tags from the natives who stay on these islands, and I enclose them herewith.

The hunters from the far north told me that quite a number of geese nest about 300 miles north of this place; and I have let them know that if they kill any geese with tags on, to bring them in to the Post, so very likely I will be able to send you some next spring when the natives again visit the Post.

I don't know what has happened to the birds and animals this season; I have never seen it so poor for all kinds of game since I have been up in this direction, and I am hoping that we have an early spring so that perhaps we may be able to get some of your geese or other game.

I have been showing your pictures of the geese in the pond to some of my hunters, and they tell me that they wish they were only eating some of them; and of course I have to tell them that the spring will soon be here and that they may kill some of the geese they have been looking at in the pictures.

Well, I see the war is now over, and every one up at this place was very glad about it. The natives have some very funny ideas about what the war was really about, and as each man held that his idea was the correct one, there have been some lively discussions about the matter, and this controversy has helped to pass the time at this isolated place.

Well, trusting things are going all right with you and that your geese are well and fat, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
L. G. Maver.

Spring

Grandmother was a wonderful housekeeper in her day and generation. Every spring, up came the carpets; down came the pictures and heavy lambrequins; out went the furniture, and in came soap and water and scrubbing-brush. Soon the floors and woodwork gleamed like new; the carpets were replaced after a beating that sent every particle of dirt swirling away in a cloud of dust; the furniture was cleaned and returned to its accustomed place. Everyone was miserable, including grandmother—but it simply had to be done.

Women are better housekeepers than grandmother ever was or ever could be, for they have the modern conveniences to make them so. They have learned, through advertising, of the many utensils that make housework lighter and do it better. They have learned, through advertising, of better foods and how to prepare and serve them more attractively. They have bought, because of advertising, the many time and labor saving devices that we have come to regard as every-day necessities.

Because of advertising, women have more time for relaxation and the social amenities. They look younger. They are younger—by years—than grandmother at the same age. Advertising has made that possible.

DIES OF ILLNESS CONTRACTED ON HELPFUL TRIP

Floyd Bennett left a sick bed in Detroit to fly to Greenely Island and speed the triumph of Koehl, von Huenfeld and Fitzmaurice, who had landed there in the Bremen after completing the first westward flight across the Atlantic At Murray Bay he suffered a relapse and was taken back to Quebec, where he developed double pneumonia, from which he died Col Lindbergh made the 470-mile flight from New York in the record time of 3 hours and 32 minutes, with a supply of anti-pneumonia serum, but it was proved of the wrong type. It was doubtful however, whether any such preparation could have checked the disease in the advanced stage which it had reached.

Commander Richard E Byrd, who had made Bennett chief aide in his projected flight to the south pole this year, hastened to Quebec by train from Boston, and stayed by Bennett until the end. The latter's death will be a grievous loss to the south pole expedition. On a previous Arctic flight Bennett saved Byrds life by crawling out on the fuselage of their plane in a sub-zero gale to correct the pressure of an oil tank which threaten. l to explode.

Lindbergh, who is shown in No. 1 left Curtiss Field, Long Island, at 3.08 in the afternoon the day before Bennett died. He flew an army pursuit plane and, heading directly into a snowstorm, flew direct to Quebec, where he landed on the plains of Abraham at 6.40 p.m. Bennett is shown in No. 2 with Fitzmaurice, on his arrival at Murray Bay. No. 3 is Commander Byrd and No. 4 shows Bennett being helped into a plane which carried him to the hospital at Quebec. No. 5 is a close-up of Bennett

Fair was the presence of numerous buyers from America, who came mostly to buy glass, china, shoes, linen and all sorts of novelties. Other overseas countries were also represented. On account of the general recovery in Central Europe, neighboring countries, viz. Germany, Austria and Hungary, as well as Yougoslavia and Roumania sent the greatest number of buyers.

The importance of Czechoslovakia as an outlet for foreign goods was emphasized by the organization of a special United States Pavilion, placed under the supervision of American Commercial Attache Elbert Baldwin.

The next Fair, which will be held from September 23 to 30, will present many noteworthy features. Not only have already announced their intention to organize official exhibits of France, Spain, U.S.S.R., Roumania, Brazil and Colombia. The Fair will also coincide with the opening of the new Permanent Fair Building, which will be not only the biggest building in Czechoslovakia, but the greatest permanent samples exhibition of the world at the same time. It will house sample rooms open during the whole year, and will thus afford a permanent opportunity for foreign buyers, who will be dispensed from the necessity of travelling many days through the country in order to visit the different manufacturing centres.

Charles Shashawaskum, a Cree Indian.

The goose that was carrying the band marked 18 was killed last fall near Cape Jones by Richard Fleming, an Esquimaux.

One dollar has been forwarded to each of these men out of your fund, held by Mr. Nicolson of Rupert's House.

Yours faithfully,
Wm. C. Rackham,
District Manager.

Address: c-o The Hudson's Bay Company,
Moose Factory;
Clute Post Office, Ontario.
Rupert's House, Clute P.O., Ontario,
20th June, 1918.

Mr. J. Miner.
Box 48, Kingsville, Ontario.

Dear Sir,—

The enclosed tag No. 18S was handed to me the other day by an Indian who killed the goose to which it was attached about thirty miles north of this Post. I believe two or three other tags were procured by some Indians who do not deal with me, but no doubt they will be forwarded by the trader to whom they were delivered. As far as I can ascertain your interests seem to be pretty well looked after around the bay generally.

Yours sincerely,
A. Nicolson.

Now it is a fact that thirty-six of my returned goose tags have come from Hudson Bay. Yet it would be well for us to remember that over eighty per cent. of these birds were tagged in the spring, and they went direct from this tame spot to James Bay, thus giving the Indians and Esquimaux the finest opportunity. We are quite certain that two or three were killed by them within three days after they left here. One goose, tagged and liberated here on April 24th, was killed at the Belcher Islands on the 28th; another, liberated on April the 22nd, was killed at James Bay on the 25th.

On two different occasions when the geese were leaving here at five p.m., I telegraphed the C.P.R. agent at Stralak, Ontario. Stralak is about sixty miles north-west of Sudbury, Ontario, or about four hundred and fifty miles north of my home. On both occasions I got returns before nine o'clock the next morning. My first reply was "Geese are crossing at Metagama." The next year, under similar conditions, the reply read, "Geese are passing at Spanish Forks and at Pogmasing." These three stations are on the main line of the C.P.R., about seventy to ninety miles north-west of Sudbury. At these three particular points the railroad is running nearly straight north, and I doubt very much if the geese would be over four miles out of their east-and-west lines on their northern trip the two different years.

During the same period of time I have a lot reported from their winter home along what I called the south-east Atlantic Coast.

The following are the names and addresses of the gentlemen in the South who have reported the wild geese. 1. Lewis L. Lewark, Nag Head, Dare County, N.C.; 2, Irvin Smith, Littleton, R. No. 4, N.C.; 3, C. S. Boomer, Swan Quarter, N.C.; 4, L. T. Johnson, Mamis, N.C.; 5, Dr. J. G. Baum, Pines Island Club, Currick Sound, N.C.; 6, E. W. Brumley, Woodligh, Currick County, N.C.; 7, C. E. Toppins, Jr., Box 76, R. i., Swan Quarters, N.C.; 8, J. C. Bristo, Richmond, Virginia; 9, Linden Archibald, Kennedy, Maryland; 10, Oliver T. Crammer, West Creek, Ocean County, N.J.

I have received odd letters that have become mislaid, but besides what are quoted above, have had letters from the following addresses: Gust P. Stunhs, Lacrosse, Ind.; W. F. Fherkildson, New Holland, N.C.; Geo. Cheechoo, James Bay; Marshall I. Bradshaw, Tylerton, Md.; C. A. Ulmer, Rose Bay, N.C. (two tags).; Francis Clark, Pine Island Club, Poplar Branch, N.C.; L. O. Turford, Powell's Point, N.C.; William Solomon, Albany River, Hudson Bay; Haywood Whitehead, Townsend, Va. (two tags); Arch. Pardy, Hamilton Inlet, Labrador; M. C. Britt, Elizabeth City, N.C.; Simon Alisaibe, Sr., James Bay (two geese); Peter Henlisty, James Bay (one goose); James Oachigan, James Bay (one goose); E. C. Hallman, Tangier, Va.; Harry P. Smith, Holland, Mich.; S. Archibald, Salt Water Lake, Near James Bay, Ontario; (Hudson Bay Agent), Great Whale River, Ontario (two tags); E. Renouf, Fort George Post, James Bay District (five tags).

I am here reproducing one letter from the South which gives us a fair explanation as to when the geese come to, and leave, their winter home.

Swan Quarter, N.C.
Nov. 15th, 1917.

Dear Sir,—

I killed a goose yesterday, the 14th of Nov., on the Lake of Matmostus te, Hyde Co., N.C., with a band on his left leg with your address on it. It said "Write to Box 48, Kingsville, Ont." So at your request I am taking pleasure in doing so. Inside of metal band was a Bible verse; it said: "Keep yourselves in the love of God. Jude 1:21." You will please write me and tell me how you caught the goose, and when you put same on him and all about the geese in Canada, and their raising there. They come on our lakes about Oct. 15th, and stay here until March 15th. Then they all leave and go north to places unknown to us. Lake Matamoskeete is a great place for hunting geese. There were about three hundred killed the day that I killed this one. Will close. Write me soon and a long letter, and tell me all you know about them.

With best wishes for you and yours, I am,

Yours very truly,
C. S. Boomer.

One of the most recent and interesting of the letters I have received is the following:

Hudson's Bay Service,
James Bay District, Canada,
Fort George Post,
July 25th, 1923.
via Mattice, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Miner,—

I am enclosing herewith five tags taken off geese killed by my hunters in the vicinity of this post this year. Should you ever desire further information I shall ever be glad to assist you in the excellent work which you are doing, to the best of my ability.

I am, however, rather afraid that some of the birds which recourse to your sanctuary are lulled there into a greater trust in mankind than is well for their continued well-being, as undoubtedly some of these birds, on leaving the sanctuary you afford them, fall very easy victims to gunners.

With great appreciation, I beg to remain,

Sincerely yours,
E. Renouf.

In 1919, Mr. Sainsbury of Toronto, one of our Canadian explorers, was in Baffin Land. There he ran across some Esquimaux with a goose that had my tag on it. They were superstitious about the goose, but when Mr. Sainsbury explained it to them, they tore its skin off, and ate the goose, raw. This is away north of timber line, where the Esquimaux eat their meat raw.

PRAGUE FAIR SUCCESS.

460,000 buyers visited the International Sample Fair at Prague which closed its doors last Sunday, after a week of feverish business activity in which 39 nations took part. Results were favorable in nearly all branches thus reflecting the increase of industrial production, which took place during the last few months. For the first time after the war Czechoslovak production passed the pre-war level and continued on its road towards greater prosperity. The sound condition of the Czechoslovak market is also revealed by the rising standard of living of the population with bank deposits rapidly rising and an active foreign trade balance while unemployment has become practically non-existent.

SOCIAL EVENING

Held Under Auspices of St. John's Choir, Emily, at Orange Corners.

ORANGE CORNERS, April 27. — A successful and well attended social evening and debate was held in Orange Corner's school house on Friday evening, April 20, under the auspices of St. John's choir, Emily. The following program was given, with Mrs. Walter Magee as organist: Chairman's address, Walter Magee (in the absence of the Rev. A. T. Weir; reading Cecil McConnell; vocal solo, "Duna," Hubert Lowes, with encore; harmonica, duet, Jane and Lawrence McConnell; recitation: William Howden, with encore; vocal duet, Nellie Casey and Gladys Smith, accompanied by the Hawaiian guitar played by Gladys Smith, "Honolula Moon" and encore "Red Wing;" vocal solo, "The Second Minuet," by Mildred Magee; reading, "Counting Eggs," Doris Parker, with encore; "That Old Sweetheart of Mine;" vocal duet, "Two Little Girls in Blue," Mildred Magee and Mrs. T. B. Jones, in costumes of blue crepe paper; vocal solo "Where the River Shannon Flows," Nellie Casey; duet, Nellie Casey and Gladys Smith, accompanied by Hawaiian guitar.

"Resolved: that country life has more advantages than city life," was the debate given. Doris Parker and Mrs. T. B. Jones were on the affirmative side, while Cecil McConnell and Alfred Lough supported the negative. The judges, Mrs. Norman Fee, William Howden and Harry Jackson, decided in favor of the affirmative after some consideration. Good points were brought out in an able manner by each of the speakers in such a way that judging was rather difficult. A vote of thanks was extended to the judges by Miss Doris Parker and Alfred Lough, after which a dainty lunch was served by the members of the choir. Mrs. Walter Magee, organist, and Miss Dench moved a vote of thanks to those who had taken part.

COUNSEL TO CLOSE CASE THIS EVENING

had an additional incentive for capturing Mons as was claimed by first army orders. He would not substantiate further extracts which Mr. Regan read from the records. He said he had not seen the action personally and only knew from reports received from the lower formations.

You understand the army had means of communication which would not go through me? said General Loomis.

Yes.

Asked regarding the evidence given by General Clark, saying that there had not been even a shadow of fighting in Mons, witness said Mr. Regan had misinterpreted the meaning. There was no resistance offered, once the Canadians reached the outskirts of the city.

"Do you agree with a statement made by General Morrison?" Mr. Regan began. Mr. Tilley objected and His Lordship would not permit the question put as it was. Differently worded it was allowed and General Loomis disagreed that the enemy ceased all resistance, having made a last stand November 10th. General Loomis would not agree with the word "assault." He preferred the word "attack." It all depended on the reader's conception of the meaning of the word.

Arrangements had been made for one gun of the 24th Battery, C.F.A. to be manhandled in order to overcome the German machine guns. General Loomis could not say whether or not the gun had actually been brought into action.

Regarding the operations of Captain Graffety and the two platoons which entered Mons, General Loomis could not recall the affair without referring to his notes, which he had at his home.

He stated he had first heard of the armistice at 6.45 a.m. The message came from Colonel McGee at Corps headquarters, and was delivered to General Loomis in bed. He immediately took steps to have the message transmitted to the lower formations. Questioned regarding General Clark's evidence, General Loomis replied that Mr. Regan and he (Loomis) had apparently interpreted the evidence differently.

Walked Into Mons.

In closing his cross examination of General Loomis, Mr. Regan read reports saying the Germans intended to put up a stubborn opposition into Mons. He asked the witness if, according to his orders to his officer, they were ordered not to attack if the opposition proved too great. General Loomis replied that it was just what happened before Mons and preparations were made to enforce the order on the attacking troops, but in the meantime the Germans left and the Canadian soldiers practically walked into Mons.

Capt. Joseph O'Neill.

Joseph O'Neill followed General Loomis in the witness box. His examination was conducted by Mr. Parmenter. To the court O'Neill identified himself as a chemist in the village of Bowmanville and said he had been a Captain in C Company of the 19th Canadian Infantry Battalion. Using a colored map, placed in front of the large map prepared by Mr. Kelly for the case, Capt O'Neill told of the general movements of his unit during the last days of the war beginning November 9th, when they were in billets. They received their order to advance on the morning of November 10th. His company was split to have one platoon in the rear of each of A, B, and D Companies. The other platoon of the company was left out of the line during the beginning of the action.

They came under fire not later than 8.30 a.m. November 10th and continued to advance in artillery formation. They had one man, Private Howard, killed at Q 19 about 10.00 a.m. This was the first casualty. D Company retired behind C Company for a time but later returned to the original formation. Corporal Foote was wounded right behind him at Q 19, D 58. They spotted enemy fire coming from a house in Q 12 and tried to advance to it, but D Company's flank was in the air and he could not attack across the open space. It was here that Sergeant Craig was killed by an enemy shell, not machine gun fire.

Orders were to advance unless held up by the enemy, said O'Neill therefore when there was opposition he did not attempt to go forward. A Canadian six-inch trench mortar fired three shells for him. He saw them land where he had requested and some of the Germans running from cover. O'Neill continued to advance till he arrived at a good field of fire. The first word of armistice came to him as the biggest joke he had ever heard because he heard it as a rumor at 8.00 a.m. November 11th. It was necessary for him to explain to many of his company the exact meaning of the word "armistice". They were inclined to be dubious regarding the cessation of hostilities, believing it would give the Germans the opportunity to consolidate their position.

In the operations, O'Neill said there were four officers killed and eleven other ranks and thirty-eight wounded. The last officer was killed about 4.00 p.m. November 10th. The last man witness actually saw killed was Sergeant Craig, who was hit at about 11.00 a.m. November 10th and died of wounds the following day.

After a ten minute recess, Mr. Regan asked permission of His Lordship to have a map specially prepared for Col. Duguid entered as evidence in the court. His Lordship hesitated and Mr. Regan ordered Col. Duguid "never mind, take it away. I don't want to see it," and proceeded to examine the witness.

The witness said the map which Col. Duguid had produced was not correct with respect to the second division as far as his company and general knowledge was concerned.

In reply to further questions, O'Neill outlined the movements of the battalions and his own company in particular, as he had done when examined by Mr. Parmenter. He declared that his battalion had reached their objective before the cessation of hostilities. He had previously sent cavalry patrols north and east between 6.00 and 7.00 on the morning of November 11th, before he heard of the armistice.

Following his regular custom Mr. Regan read extracts from various official documents and asked the witness whether or not he agreed with them. To most of them, Capt. O'Neill replied that he was not in a position to answer since he did not know conditions except on his immediate front. The Germans evacuated Mons on account of the general pressure all along the front, not through any one attack.

The armistice was not taken seriously, but more as a joke. Most of the men thought the supreme command had "pulled a bone."

Mr. Regan—"Had they been in the habit of pulling bones?"

A—No.

Later Capt. O'Neill said he did not think the men had been kept in ignorance since it was not to come into effect till November 11th at 11.00 a.m. No one in the army believed a rumor, O'Neill said, since they were too numerous. At Mr. Regan's suggestion, he confined the statement to his own case.

Asked if there had been any fighting in Mons, O'Neill said he was not in a position to say, since he had not been in the town till three days after the armistice.

"From what you have learned in the past few days?" Mr. Regan pressed.

"I am not in a position to say. I was not there and do not know", O'Neill maintained.

Lt. R. H. Dinsmore.

Lieut Richard H. Dinsmore of 19th Battalion, Chief Intelligence Officer of that unit, was the next witness called by plaintiff. He told of the movement of his unit of the last three days of the war. He carried out observations on the Mons-Vinche road on the 10th, locating several artillery locations in the village of Hyon which during the war was a German Machine Gun School and had some excellent positions for machine guns. These positions were displaced and the battalion moved into Hyon and advanced further to another road leading from Mons. The casualties were four officers and eleven other ranks killed and thirty-eight wounded. "I heard of armistice about 7.30 in morning," said witness.

Mr. Regan said to the witness in commencing his cross examination: "I suppose you were surprised to hear of the armistice."

"I certainly was", answered the witness. "We arrived at Hyon at 1.10 in the morning of the 11th, no matter what the second division report says about the matter", concluded witness.

Major Harry C. Hatch.

Harry C. Hatch, Hamilton manufacturer, when called and examined by Mr. Parmenter, identified himself as the officer commanding the 19th Canadian Infantry Battalion. He described the movements of the battalion in the same way as Lt. O'Neill had done. He advised the company commander not to advance if the casulties were likely to be heavy. The advance party (battle patrol) of the battalion entered Hyon at 1.10 a.m. November 11th. The entire battalion then went forward. By 5.30 a.m. the battalion had arrived at a good field of fire. The casualties earlier in the day were heavy during the advance. He received the armistice message about 8.00 a.m. November 11th.

Mr. Regan—"I suppose you are giving evidence from memory."

Witness replied that he had and upon further questioning, admitted having gone over the map with Mr. Parmenter about three days ago. He also agreed with Mr. O'Neill's evidence in entirety.

After considerable poring over maps by counsel and instructing the jury as to where the Mons-Maubeuge road lay and some difference of opinion as to the correct spelling of the name, Major Hatch was allowed to step down from the box.

Major B. O. Hooper.

Bertram O. Hooper, commander of 20th Battalion, Second Canadian Division, gave evidence of the movement of his troops on November 10 and 11.

He ordered his battalion companies A and B into the line, C to go on the right, and D in reserve. D Company soon encountered gun fire. A and D companies made contact with the 19th Battalion on the left and on the south with the Royal Naval Division. The support and reserve advanced to the left front of the attacking companies and by midnight the Germans had been dislodged, said witness. On the morning of eleventh he heard of armistice at about 7.30.

Q.—Were the 19th and 20th in front of the second division?

A—Yes.

Q.—What casualties did you have on the 10th?

A—One officer killed, two wounded. Two N.C.O.'s killed, nine men killed, and thirty-three wounded, the last occurring about 8 p.m. on the 10th.

Opening his cross examination Mr. Regan asserted that Mr. Parmenter prompted the witness on one occasion and asked if he had forgotten anything.

"No doubt I did. It is impossible for any one to recount the events of a day like that in ten minutes on the stand," Major Hooper replied.

At once Mr. Regan tried to batter down the evidence of Major Hooper, regarding the figures he had given Mr. Parmenter during his examination. Major Hooper had given the fatal casualties as one officer, two N.C.O.'s and nine men, with the list of wounded set at one officer and thirty-three men. The figures which Mr. Regan produced were much larger and Mr. Tilley suggested that Mr. Regan's figures were a summary for a month. There appeared to have been a foot note to this effect omitted from Mr. Regan's copy. The document was ordered compared and corrected.

Asked by Mr. Regan, witness continued that he had heard of no casualties in the Fifth Lancers till he had arrived in court. Regarding the heavy casualties suffered by the Imperials in attempting to capture a machine gun nest, Major Hooper said they gave up the attack temporarily. He believed the guns were part of the machine gun school at Hyon. The positions were "very cleverly concealed."

Asked why he did not clean out the nest, witness explained that he was under orders to keep down casualties which left much to his own initiative and it was not necessary to do so. He did not do any fighting right to eleven o'clock since he had reached his objective by 4.30 that morning.

Hoped for Armistice.

Asked if he had any previous knowledge of the armistice, witness said he had none. There were countless rumors and the troops had been hoping for three months past.

"Since you broke the Hindenbergh line?"

A—"We'd been hoping."

Q.—"Since you put the skids under the Germans?"

A—"We'd been hoping."

With the permission of the judge, Major Hooper, expressed the opinion that when the Hindenbergh line was broken, it was merely a "booby trap" and in six weeks the Germans would be dug in further back. He had heard of no betting on when the armistice would be signed, nor had any of the rumors which mentioned the time before it would be signed as two days. The time was always more indefinite, usually a number of months. These rumors were left in the towns by the retreating Germans.

When Major Hooper stepped from the box, Mr. Tilley suggested that the jury start early in the morning with a view to ending the case this week. The jury, when asked by His Lordship, expressed their willingness to begin the day's session at 9.00 a.m. rather than a half hour later. The court will therefore assemble at that hour. Adjournment was at 6.30 p.m.

Add enough thick cream to make a stiff batter and beat vigorously for several minutes. Heap into a flat baking dish, sprinkle with Melba toast crumbs and place in a hot oven until lightly browned. Serve while hot in the dish in which it has baked. Sweet potatoes may be prepared in the same manner, except that they should be boiled in their skins. If they are thrown into cold water when done, the peeling can be easily slipped off. Mash and beat as directed for Irish potatoes. Do not add the salt, but be careful to remove all stringy fibre.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Alice M. writes: "I am getting an ingrown toenail. Will you please tell me how to prevent its getting any worse?"

Answer: Any chiropodist can treat your toenail and show you how to make it grow into normal shape. One method of treatment is to shave the nail in the center so the edges will be encouraged to grow toward the center, making the nail more narrow. Ask your chiropodist to show you how to use this method of treatment.

Question: Cook asks: "What are the best types of chickens for table use?"

Answer: The best types are the Brahma, Cochin, Langshan, Dorking, Orpington, Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Rhode Island Red and Houdan. Thick scales on the legs, thin necks, and dark colored thighs are signs of toughness in chickens. A good table bird should have a large full breast and, at other points, also a large proportion of meat to the size of the bone. Chickens should be starved for at least 24 hours before killing. Those killed with partially full crops should be avoided, as the disintegration of the grain quickly discolors the flesh. They are more tender if held for two or three days before cooking.

Question: Mrs. J. E. writes: "One of our boys frequently has pimples on his ears, and the last few days he has had a lot of small pimples on the inside of his mouth. I bathe them with boracic solution, but wondered if you could tell me the cause and cure. He seems in excellent health. He is very fond of eggnogs and has had one every day for years."

Answer: Such unwholesome mixtures as eggnogs would be just the thing to cause pimples on your boy's skin or even inside his mouth. Raw eggs and milk should never be used together, but may be used cooked in the form of custard.

WANT PREFERENCE GIVEN CANADIANS

Toronto Council of Women Urges Engaging of Native Architects.

TORONTO, April 27 (Canadian Press).— A resolution brought before the Local Council of Women the other day urged that Canadians be given the preference whenever possible when architects were required. Is there any chance for women as architects in Canada? Taking Miss Elizabeth Lalor as an example Mary Dale Muir writes in the "Toronto Club-Woman", of some questions she asked a long-established firm of architects, as well as a femine neophyte in the profession:

Miss Lalor graduated a year ago from Toronto University. Two women had preceded her in graduating but she does not know where they are. At present there are four women students enrolled. "It's perfectly possible," she said, "for women to make success of architecture. Some have already done so. I got my inspiration from Miss Julia Morgan, architect in San Francisco. Miss Morgan is the only woman graduate of the Beaux Arts in Paris and she has been practising for 20 years. Of course I don't think a woman should attempt to go into architecture for herself before she is 35, at least. She must first gain experience and knowledge of her profession by working with, and under, others."

The head of a firm of architects, Mr. William F. Sparling, next approached, agreed with Miss Lalor that there is no reason why women should not be successful in architecture. "Women have proved themselves capable in other lines of business," he said, "why not in architecture?" Arguing with contractors, he told us, is no different than seeing that any business contract is carried through. Many women hold positions in which this ability is necessary and others who are interested in similar work can train themselves to it.

Mr. Sparling thinks, however, that architecture is undergoing a change. It is becoming less of a profession and more of a business. Architectures are no longer content to wait for business to come to them; they now go out after it. The mere suggestion that a building is to be erected is sufficient to bring architects, their plans and quotations to the spot. Women who enter architecture will have to be prepared for this change.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ASK EVERY SUCCESSFUL MAN THE SECRET OF HIS SUCCESS

By Mehran J. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Every successful man is besieged by admirers who are eager to learn the secret of his success. His success may consist of any outstanding achievement.

A prominent citizen who reaches the ripe age of four score years is approached on each succeeding birthday by a corps of newspaper men and bombarded with questions calculated to uncover the secret of his long life. He is supposed to know what made him live so long.

Magazines that feature the life story of successful men in business have a tremendous circulation. People are eager to learn the secret of success. The ideal magazine hero starts life in a log cabin and rises to be a merchant prince, a financial giant. The implication is that if he could do it with no education and no friends how much better off you and I are with at least a fair start.

Nothing succeeds like success. We admire and envy the successful man because we too would like to be regarded as successes. We like to read of such people because it has inspirational value. We naively assume that if we get hold of the secret, we too may be as successful. This is because we feel that possibly if we had the right password and could pull the right wires we have enough native ability to get there.

We want to know the secret of the great man's greatness not only that we might also become great by following the same methods but also because we are curious to know the ins and outs of a colorful career. This interest is very much as the curiosity we have in knowing how to solve a puzzle or a riddle. It answers the perpetual question, "How do they do it?"

We try and fail and then wonder how others succeed. We conclude that either they are made of different clay or else they have some special secret. We hope it is due to some secret and not to superior native ability; hence the eagerness to inquire of every successful man the secret of his success.

DRESS

The silk stocking in sunburned shade shown above at the left has anklet embroidery in gold thread and is sued with a white kid sandal. The tan lizard slipper at the right is worn with gunmetal stockings and a gray suit. The white silk stocking at the left below has a colored initial just above the ankle. The long lisle stocking at the right is appropriate for semi-sports wear.

The younger generation of girls and women—who think of the fashion for long skirts and substantial black stockings as just an amusing custom of a dim and distant past—take it for granted that the price they pay for stockings shall be a considerable percentage of their total dress expenses. Young office workers earning twenty or twenty-five dollars a week pay two or three dollars for a flimsy bit of hosiery without turning a hair.

But older women, though they may actually spend as much for stockings, sigh with regret as they do so. The thought of paying thirty or forty dollars for a hat would cause them no qualms of conscience whatever, though as a matter of fact they may find it perfectly possible to pay less. They got used to the idea of paying lavishly for hats when they were young.

But this practice of paying three dollars more or less for a pair of cobwebby stockings that may not last three weeks seems all wrong. And yet I know of no present fashion which has done so much to produce trimness, daintiness and general smartness among those who follow it—and that means practically everyone—as this fashion for fine-quality, light-toned stockings.

Fashion sets no hard and arbitrary rules in the matter of stockings. You may even wear black ones—with black or gray frocks—providing their extreme sheerness makes up for their dark color. There are almost innumerable blends and shades of beige, flesh nude, gray from which to choose. You may wear the faintest pastel shades for evening or follow the fashion of always wearing for evening the sheerest textures in flesh tint—the nearest possible approach to nothing at all that stocking makers can devise. And with white shoes for summer wear you may choose sunburst tints—as they have been doing at American winter and spring resorts—or else follow the newer French revival of wearing stockings of pure white tone.

LYRICS OF LIFE

A HEAVENLESS EARTH

The earth and moon and stars and sun,
Each separate, and yet all one;
The sun that in his heaven burns,
The orbs that shine till day returns,
And then the race of humankind,
Body, ah, yes, and soul and mind.

And who, upon this earth with doubt
Would wipe the stars in heaven out,
Remove the moon, destroy the sun,
Say this is earth, the only one?
And who upon the earth so blind
Would from the body blot the mind?

Yet there are men so strangely made,
Who from the truth so far have strayed,
They stand upon their planet small
And say there is no heaven at all,
No hope, no haven, and no goal,
Yes, from the body blot the soul.

DOMINANT URGE IS USEFULNESS

Woman Has Much More to Do in Home Now, Says Student.

MUST HAVE FUNDS

TORONTO, April 27.—(Canadian Press).—Miss Margaret Reid, for six years at McDonald Institute, Guelph, now taking post-graduate work at the Chicago University, is quoted as follows under the caption "Woman's Place Is in the Home; Is it True?"

"In spite of all the things that have gone from the home it is still possible for the housewife to be overworked by the duties of the home. Life is no longer as simple as it formerly was. Much more time is spent on the frills of food, clothing, and housefurnishing, greater time and thought is being put on the early care and training of children. These are necessary for us) is more and that our standard of living (consist-are all matters of great importance but it must ever be borne in mind ing in those things which we feel more dependent on those things which money can buy. The woman is now the director of consumption; as such she must have funds. The money income under the present popular family arrangement should be provided by the man in a sufficient amount to meet the ever increasing needs of our modern standard of living. The dominant urge of woman is not motherhood any more than the dominant urge of man is fatherhood. The dominant urge of woman is usefulness.

"Investigations which have been made as to why women who have homes to care for are no longer, in them have shown that the large percentage of women are in the industrial and professional fields for economic reasons. In many cases the need is acute. Until there is bread to eat, clothes to wear and shelter for the family it is useless to say that the place for the woman is in the home, where because of the industrial changes she is not able to provide these necessities."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1928
(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate)

According to astrology a benefic aspect dominates today, which is supposed to be especially favorable to men in the learned professions.

Lawyers are well directed and they will have many big cases in 1928 when international affairs will develop unusual problems.

The sway is fortunate for physicians who will demonstrate their skill in an epidemic, the seers prophesy.

Hospitals will benefit from generous bequests and nurses will find much demand for their services.

Sanitation should focus attention, for peril of strange and serious phases of influenza and other diseases is again announced by astrologers who have urged cities to be on guard.

The seers foretell a time when toleration of spitting and other habits endured by what is called civilization will be classed with other barbarous practices.

Women and children have the prognostication of a period that will be favorable to them, although they will still be subject to danger from criminals of diseased minds.

There is a first rate promise in the stars for those who sign contracts or deeds under this rule of the stars.

Newspapers are to change many of their policies and suppression of crime details is one of the reforms, according to the reading of the stars.

A rural editor is to command attention by the promulgation of a new system of philosophy, the seers prophesy.

Intellectual interests will again command earnest attention, it is forecast, for the results of college study are to be slowly demonstrated.

Despite discouraging appearances the younger generation is to prove itself wise for its own time and an improvement on those of the past.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a surprise that brings money and ease of mind. A secret compact is indicated.

Children born on this day probably will have clear cut ideas and inventive gifts. The subjects of this sign are usually subtle and secretive.

A story of a romantic discovery of riches comes from Rhodesia. A woman farmer went for a picnic, during which she and a companion came across an outcrop of Quarts. The same night she dreamed there was a gold-mine on the spot, and that for her share in it she received $250,000. As a result of her dream digging was undertaken, and in a short time a valuable gold reef was found.

ARTICLE No. 21

Here are three interesting hands that came up in play the other evening and caused considerable difference of opinion. See what you think of them and compare results with the analysis that will be given in the next article.

Problem No. 23

Y
A B
Z

Hearts — K, Q, 7
Clubs — K, J, 8, 4
Diamonds — J, 7, 6, 2
Spades — K, J

No score, first game. If Z dealt the foregoing hand, what is his proper opening bid, if any?

Problem No. 24

Hearts — K, Q, 10, 4
Clubs — 9
Diamonds — 6
Spades — K, Q, J, 10, 9, 8, 6

Z

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and passed, A bid one club, Y bid four spades and B bid five clubs. Z doubled, A passed, Y bid five spades and B bid six clubs. Z doubled and all passed. What is Y's proper opening lead?

A B
Z

Hearts — Q, J, 9, 8, 5, 2
Clubs — 8, 3
Diamonds — A, K, J, 9, 7
Spades — none

No score, A-B a game in. What should Z as dealer bid with the foregoing hand?

In the preceding article the following problem hand was given as an illustration of the value of sizing up your hand and planning your line of play at the first trick. Unless you do so then, it may be "everlastingly too late."

Answer to Problem No. 21

Hearts — 8, 3
Clubs — K, 7, 3
Diamonds — A, J, 9, 5, 2
Spades — Q, 5, 3

A B
Z

Hearts — A, J, 10
Clubs — A, 6, 4
Diamonds — Q, 10, 3
Spades — K, J, 9, 6

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one no-trump and all passed. A opened the six of hearts, B played the king and Z won the trick with the ace. How should Z plan the play of the hand? The point of this hand should be very evident. Z has two suits to play for, spades and diamonds, and must decide at the first trick which suit to play for. The natural play is to try to set up the diamond suit for it is longer and stronger than the spade suit. Z should realize, however, that if B holds the king of diamonds he will win the second trick and lead back his partner's heart suit. Then, after the hearts are cleared, A, if he holds the ace of spades, can get back in the lead with it, make his set-up hearts and thus prevent Z from scoring game.

Therefore, Z's proper play at trick two is to play for the spade suit and force A to play the ace if he holds it. If he doesn't, no harm is done. The ace of spades in A's hand is a positive re-entry and must be got out of the way before his heart suit is set up. Played in this manner, Z cannot help but go game, no matter how the cards lie.

Hearts — 5
Clubs — A, 10, 5, 3
Diamonds — none
Spades — 5, 4

Hearts — 4
Clubs — J, 8
Diamonds — 5, 4
Spades — J, 9

Hearts — 6
Clubs — Q, 9, 7, 6
Diamonds — 10, 8
Spades — none

A B
Z

Hearts — Q, 3
Clubs — K
Diamonds — K, Q
Spades — 10, 8

Hearts are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y-Z win six of the seven tricks against any defense? Z should lead the king of clubs, all following suit. He should then lead the king of diamonds, all following suit except Y who should discard a spade. Z should then lead the queen of diamonds, all following suit except Y who should trump with the five of hearts. Y should now lead the five of clubs, all following suit except Z who should trump with the queen of hearts. Z should now lead the trey of hearts which B must win with the six, Y discarding his last spade. B must now lead clubs up to Y's hand who must win both tricks, having the ace ten over B's queen nine.

This is a very pretty little problem and its solution depends on the play of the queen of hearts at trick four which enables Z to force B in the lead.

Tests made by engineers with instruments that measured heat flowing through a sunlit roof showed that shiny aluminum paint is most cooling, as it reflects away the sun's hot rays. A roof coated with it transmits thirty-eight per cent less heat inward.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE DECORATE CHURCH

Works Nights to Beautify Interior of Famous Scottish Church.

LONDON, April 26.—(By the Canadian Press).—A remark of an Edinburgh woman visiting St. James' Church of Scotland at Goose Green, East Dulwich, two years ago led the minister, Rev. Percival Mackenzie, to face the task of redecorating the interior of the church. Having obtained a portable scaffolding and the aid of a few willing workers, he began by cleaning the walls. Then with a cycle pump he started spraying the walls. This was slow and disheartening, but when things seemed most hopeless he received an offer of a spraying machine, complete with engine. The knack of making the spray play on the walls and ceilings and not on the workers was soon mastered, and the church has now become a place of beauty.

Much of the work was done between seven p.m. and midnight, and the helpers came straight from their employment in town. While they worked they were supplied with a hot meal by friends in the vicinity. Such satisfaction have the workers derived from their task that they asked if they might bring the adjoining hall into keeping with the church, and this work is now in hand.

KING EDWARD VII. DANCED AT COBOURG

Ball Was Held in Court House Where Libel Suit is Being Tried.

COBOURG, Ont., April 27. — King Edward VII. danced in the court house where the trial of the action for $50,000 damages for alleged libel brought by General Sir Arthur Currie against F. W. Wilson, of the Port Hope Guide and W. T. R. Preston has been in progress this week. That was in 1860, when, as Prince of Wales the ruler who was later to be known as "Edward the Peacemaker," was visiting the Dominion. The court house was built in 1857 and formally opened in 1860.

A dance was held in honor of the Prince of Wales at the new court house, and he graced the ball with his presence.

The building at first was partly a fort for the repelling of possible invaders and partly a courthouse for the trial of actions at law, and was regarded as a triumph of architecture. The foundations of the building are all of eight feet in solid masonry and the situation is a commanding one enabling old muzzle loading cannon to sweep the approaches to the Canadian shore.

ANNUAL HOCKEY BANQUET HELD AT LAKEFIELD

Much Good Fellowship in Evidence at Gathering of Sportsmen.

MANY ADDRESSES

Cement Team Presented With Casement Cup for District Honors.

LAKEFIELD, April 27.—The annual hockey banquet was held on Monday evening, April 23, in Brown's restaurant with an attendance of about forty. Dr. M. P. Kennedy, president of the Lakefield Hockey Association and also of the Lakefield Rink Company, presided. Following a generous and appetizing supper served in first-class style by Mr. and Mrs. Brown and their corps of assistants, Dr. Kennedy extended a welcome to those present on behalf of the Rink Company, also thanking the hockey association for its support during the past season which was the best both financially and from a sporting point of view in the history of the rink.

The Rev. A. W. Mackenzie spoke a few words on behalf of the O.H.A. team, expressing pleasure at the good season which is well deserved by the Rink Company and its officers, who give their services gratis and carry on the rink for citizens and to encourage hockey and give pleasure to the young people. "The rink is a real asset where people gather in a spirit of good fellowship and enjoy themselves. The hockey stars are all "home brews," we did not import outside players but grow our own stars at home. However, it would be a good thing if the Cement Company would send some of their Belleville players here and if the Royal Bank would send us one or two good players from other places.

Need More Players

This would tend to increased competition and give a greater per cent. of good material. The O.H.A. team did well and played the game every time they went on the ice and received many compliments for their good sportsmanship. They were beaten by a team not as good as themselves, which indicated a jinx somewhere. Hockey is the fastest game in the world and as it is played with sticks, there is a temptation to get wild and retaliate instead of keeping the sticks in their proper places. All manly games teach a great deal to the young fellow who plays with the proper spirit and the object not only to win the game, but to play it. Hockey teaches co-operation and in the interests of team play one must learn to pass the puck sometimes sinking the individual in the success of the team.

Dr. Kennedy regretted the absence of W. H .Casement, the honorary president of the club and the donor of the Casement Cup as a championship trophy for the District League, and in his absence, Dr. Kennedy presented the cup to E. W. Bailey, on behalf of the winners, the Canada Cement team. Mr. Bailey gracefully accepted the trophy on behalf of Plant 7, and W. G. Morrison preganized for the past season's play, ning team.

B. Hunt, on behalf of "The Grove" team, the youngest in the league, thanked the Rink Company for the banquet and expressed the pleasure he and his team found in the games.

R. C. Chittick, manager of the Rink Rats team, which was re-organied for the past season's play, said that while the list of victories of the team was not large, the team was always there and nearly won several games and had as much fun as any of the players.

Reviews Season's Activities

G. H. Loosemore spoke for the Grove Grads, the runners up of the league and in a witty little speech reviewed the season's activities, regretting the small representation of the Grads at the banquet and also the fact that the league games were so poorly attended, as sometimes the gate receipts were less than five dollars. He fully realized that no team can compete against the Canada Cement team, which is composed mainly of the famous "Colts" who held the cup for two years and who proved themselves nearly invincible.

J. W. Ridpath, who was called one of "the old brigade," was the next speaker and he paid a splendid tribute to the brand of hockey in the district league games. "The games were all fast and clean, and anyone who could not enjoy the games, lacked appreciation of true sport."

W. J. Charlton feels that Lakefield district has at least as good players as any other district and sees in the result of the past season's games, good promise among the young players. Mr. Charlton said he would give the individual prizes to the winning team next year. As a remedy for the small turnout at the games he proposed having lucky number ticket prizes at some of the games. He voiced his appreciation of the O.H.A. team and hoped that next year it would be the victory in the O.H.A. games.

P. Spence, secretary-treasurer of the Lakefield Hockey Club, read a report which showed a substantial balance on hand. It has been decided to give each member of the winning team a sweater coat which will be presented in the near future.

Cup Awarded

By a popular vote Dr. Kennedy's cup for sportsmanship was awarded to John Sabatino, who received it from the hands of the donor, modestly protesting that he did not earn it. The crowd drowned the protest with hearty singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and three rousing cheers and a tiger. Dr. Kennedy announced that the cup now becomes Mr. Sabatino's property and also that he hopes next year to put up a similar cup.

Mr. Loosemore paid a tribute to Dr. Kennedy and his management of the O.H.A. team, the organization was largely due to his efforts and his work would not be too highly praised. The whole team joined in praise of Dr. Kennedy's management.

Dr. Kennedy, in thanking Mr. Loosemore, referred in a humorous fashion to a game in which he himself took part. He urged organization for next year's season and stressed the need of thorough preparation. Lakefield has to be in the O.H.A. in order to get outside teams to play, and it is hoped that next year it will be possible to secure the services of an outside coach, as that makes an ideal situation. He paid tribute to the excellent work done by Mr. Spence, who so faithfully and capably filled the office of secretary-treasurer.

Officers Elected

The following officers were elected for next season President, Dr. Kennedy; secretary-treasurer, P. Spence; executive committee, K. A. Mackenzie, John Sabatino, Wilfred Murduff and Braden Blewett. Three cheers and a tiger were lustily given for Dr. Kennedy.

Mr. Bailey suggested that the issuing of tickets for the district games might help to solve the attendance problem. Mr. Loosemore agreed with this idea and offered a further suggestion, that the return of the refreshment booth would be an attraction to fans.

J. R. Hill suggested a more aggressive campaign of advertising the games than has been used in the past. One of the merchants had offered to put up a notice board of sporting events only, and thought that if the idea was carried out it would help greatly. Mr. Hill also felt that in allowing the O.H.A. players to take part in the district games the main object of the league was defeated; that is, the development of new players who could be recruited for the O.H.A. team. Dr. Kennedy agreed with Mr. Hill in theory but pointed out clearly how hard it was to make practicable a district league without the O.H.A. players; in fact, last season there could have been no league without the O.H.A.

Mr. Mackenzie urged the encouragement of the younger boys and asked the executive to take up the matter. Two boys who showed special promise were R. Wannamaker and Rollie Kennedy. Mr. Mackenzie will give a cup for Junior hockey next year as he did in the past. Mr. Mackenzie also voiced the appreciation of the Hockey Club to the press.

Dr. Kennedy, in his closing remarks thanked the teams for their presence at the banquet and last but by no means least, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, and their assistants, for the splendid meal provided.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

Local Young baseball enthusiasts are again reminded of the practice games slated for to-morrow afternoon at Sacred Heart grounds. . . .

Jack Deannard expects to trot out a strong junior team this season to give McFadden's Royals a real battle for honors in the City League series. The majority of the veteran junior ball mogul's team is made up of "home-brews," having fought their way up from the minor leagues. Payne, Cotton, Crary, and Howden will make up a double battery, while the infield and outfield will be composed of LeBarr, Carroll, Terry Hall, Walton, Graham, Westbrook, Starr, Gillespie, Hollingsworth, Madill, Morley and Cuffe.

Peterborough Normal School basketball teams will play the Collegiate teams in the local gymnasium on Saturday afternoon. The first game will be a girls' game, and will start at 2.30. One hour later a boys' game will start. These games promise to be good, for the teams are fairly evenly matched, even though the Collegiate teams won the game at Peterborough, the boys' team ought to put up the better game, for even though they won both games in Peterborough, they did not win the last period. Their large lead made in the first period carried them over.—Lindsay Daily Post.

All local soccer fans are looking forward to the first appearance of the new aggregation into soccer—Canadian General Electric—on Saturday afternoon, when the Quaker Oats will be their opponents in a league fixture at King Edward Park. Kick-off is at three o'clock, and Alex. McKinley has been appointed official referee.

• • • • • •

In the Electric boys' eleven there are many old players who have been associated with the other teams. George Clark returns to the game, while Alex. Mitchell will adorn a new color of sweater, along with Bob Dawson. A greater portion of the fans credit the new team as a perfect machine.

After a week of silence, the Quaker boys have placed their quota of players into the secretary, and will pick their team from their full list.

Peterborough is to be well represented in the running events scheduled for May 24 at Lindsay. The "Y" Harriers have already consented to support the meet, which is being held under the auspices of the Monarch Athletic Club and sponsored by the Lindsay Kiwanis Club. Canadian General runners are starting to get into some kind of shape to compete if possible at the big show. The runners from the local electric plant will probably have some opposition in Orillia at the annual picnic on June 23. By that time they ought to be in pretty fair condition, and will probably be thinking of staging a meet here. There is also a possibility of seeing three local relay teams compete during the next four weeks.

YANKS RALLY TO BEAT SOX

Boton Defeated 9-4 in Opening Tilt of Three-Game Series.

TIGERS LOSE 6-1

NEW YORK, April 27. — (Canadian Press.)—An eighth inning rally enabled the New York Yankees to defeat the Boston Red Sox, 9 to 4, yesterday in the opening tilt of a there-game series.

Bill Carrigan removed MacFayden in the eighth with the score tied, but Harris, the third Boston pitcher, proved easy picking for the Yanks. A hit by Durst filled the bases and a pass to Koenig forced in Robertson with the ultimate winning run. Ruth's sacrifice fly and hits by Gehrig and Meusel sent in four more runs. Al Shoaly, a New York pitching recruit, flashed a steady game and contributed a single to the eighth inning rally.

After tieing the score in the eighth, the Chicago White Sox dropped the first of a four-game series to the Browns, 6 to 5, at St. Louis yesterday. In the ninth, Barrett hit into a double play, with a man out and a runner on third, losing the chance to score.

The Browns pushed across the winning run with a trio of singles. Blue and Schulte hit homers in the fourth and fifth innings, scoring a runner ahead in each case.

Gathering ten hits off two Tiger pitchers, the Indians took the opening game of the series with Detroit 6 to 1 at Cleveland. George Grant, hurling for the Tribe, was wild throughout the game but was not scored on until the final inning. The Indians pounded Sorrell and Smith at will.

Washington's losing streak reached the four game mark yesterday when the Philadelphia Athletics defeated them 10 to 0 in the Athletics' opening game at the capital. Tris Speaker, who last year played for Washington, did enough yesterday to beat his former mates single-handed. With three on base he banged a triple. Cobb got one, too. Quinn held the Senators in hand throughout while Zachary and Burke were hit hard.

RUNNERS HOLD SECOND MEETING

Training Facilities for Summer Months Discussed by C.G.E. Club.

WILL GO TO LINDSAY

The Track and Field Club of the Canadian General Electric plant held their second meeting of the season last night. In the absence of the secretary the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was dispensed with.

Jack Pilling, president, called upon Dick Bates to give a report of the interview with the Y.M.C.A. with regards to training facilities during the summer for the C.G.E. runners. The terms offered by the 'Y' seemed reasonable enough and it was decided that the runners themselves should pay part of the fee required.

The president reported that no showers had as yet been installed by the local Fair Board at the Exhibition grounds and it would probably be some time before they could consider financing such an undertaking.

The club will centre its interest chiefly in running, with one or two aspirants for jumping. When the organization is on a stronger footing other activities such as hurdling, bicycle racing and many more sports will be considered.

Discussion arose regarding the choosing of a suitable crest representative of the association. However this was left over for another meeting.

The secretary was reminded that the club should have a supply of this year's amateur cards on hand.

A poster was displayed at the meeting advertising a big track meet in Lindsay on May 24th. Some of the runners are going down to the track at the Exhibition ground to-night for a little warm-up and they will have some entries at Lindsay on May 24.

GIANTS LOSE TO PHILLIES

Nose Out New York Team 5-4 in Home Game.

LOSERS GET FIVE HITS

NEW YORK, April 27 (Canadian Press). — Back on their home field, the Phillies jolted the Giants yesterday by nosing out the New York team 5 to 4 in the ninth. Augie Walsh had much the better of a pitching duel with Larry Benton, who suffered his first defeat of the season.

The Giants only got five hits off Walsh.

Leach and Thompson, the latter with four hits in five trips to the plate, led the attack for the Phillies.

Although Rogers Hornsby, Dick Burrus, and four regular pitchers were incapacitated with colds or influenza, the Braves defeated Brooklyn 4 to 0 at Boston in the first game of the series. Ed. Brandt, the recruit pitcher, let Brooklyn down with two hits, while his mates bunched safeties off Dazzy Vance for three runs in the third. Eddie Moore hit a home run into the new left field seats in the eighth after Moss had replaced Vance.

The Pirates hit Edwards and Jablowski hard in the early innings, while Carmen Hill held the Reds in check, and Pittsburgh won 7 to 2 yesterday from Cincinnati. It was the Reds' first appearance in Pittsburgh this season.

Hill, showing no effects of recent injuries and illness, kept the Red Legs' seven hits well scattered to win his first victory of the campaign. Grantham, Pirate first baseman, hit his third home run of the season in the third inning. He has hit for the circuit in each of the Bucs' home games.

Mays went to the mound and spiked the Buccaneer guns after the fourth, but the game already had been won and lost.

St. Louis-Chicago — Postponed on account of cold weather.

Soccer Notes

Quaker Oats versus C.G.E. will be as follows: W. Curtis, goal; J. Buchan and H. Curtis, backs; R. Carmichael, T. Wilson and W. Rankin, half-backs; A. Wilson, G. Logan, T. Craig, T. Williams and T. Foster, forwards. All players please be on hand at King Edward Park no later than 2.45 prompt, as kick-off is at 3 o'clock.

Next regular meeting of association will be held in G.W.V.A. Rooms on Tuesday, May 1st. On Monday evening the soccer executive will be at Prince of Wales School presenting prizes to the school champions.

ROYALS WIN 6-5

READING, Pa., April 27.—(Canadian Press.)—John Prudhomme held Reading to five hits yesterday and Toronto won the first of the series, 9 to 1. Johnny Moore saved Reading from being shut out by doubling with Hawks on second in the eighth inning.

After tieing the score with two runs in the eighth inning Jersey City lost out to Buffalo in the ninth here yesterday, and as a result is occupying the cellar position in the International League. The final score was 9 to 6.

After two were down in the ninth, Martin booted Thomas' grounder with one on. Felix was intentionally passed filling the bases. Then Moore sent a scratch hit to right to drive in two runs. Cullop's single pushed over the other.

Montreal Royals captured a ten inning game here yesterday from the Bears 6 to 5. The Royals scored four runs in the eighth, three of which crossed the plate when Shannon hit Bentley for a home-run drive over the left field wall. Two singles, a sacrifice and a double gave the Royals two runs in the tenth. Lutzke tied up the score in the ninth with a home run hit into right field bleachers. Two hits, a sacrifice, and an outfield out gave Bears a run in the tenth. With the tying run on third base, the Bears failed to come through. The largest crowd of the season saw the contest.

HOCKEY PLAYERS' CHANGE OF POSITION

O. H. A. Before June 1st.

TORONTO, April 26.—Change of residence application forms will be mailed to all Ontario Hockey Association clubs this week.

The residence rule of the O. H. A. is as follows:

"No player shall compete in an association match who has not been a bona fide and continuous resident of the town, city or village to which his club belongs since the 15th day of May preceding the date of said match. In case of a player residing in a rural district, village or police village, he must play for the O. H. A. club nearest to his residence having a team entered in the series in which he is eligible to play, it being understood that a junior player has the privilege of playing in the nearest place to his residence which has a junior O. H. A. team. The manner of determining the distance is to be computed by the mileage over a well-established highway, and not as the crow flies. A bona-fide and continuous resident shall include a teacher or student who may be absent from home and registered in actual and regular attendance at lectures at a preparatory school, a high school, a university, or an affiliated college, providing said student satisfies the O.H.A. executive of the bona fides of his attendance, but such teacher or student shall elect before the date of the first association match and shall notify the secretary of the association whether he will play with a club where the said school of learning is located.

"Note—A student leaving a town to attend a high school in another town cannot qualify under the student rule if there is a high school in his own home town of the same grade, except upon application to the O. H. A. executive.

Special Rule

"No player who has changed his residence or his club since Jan. 1 shall be granted a certificate unless he has satisfied the O. H. A. executive of the bona fides of such a change, with complete and definite information regarding the change, with complete and definite information regarding the change of residence on the form supplied for the purpose by the O. H. A. executive.

"Immediately upon his change of residence the player must notify the secretary of the O. H. A. on the form provided for that purpose of such change, and no application for a playing certificate will be considered by the O. H. A. executive in any case where such notification has not been filed within two weeks after the change of residence is made. No application received after June 1 will be considered.

"In cities and towns having more than one club, a player is not allowed to change clubs without permission of the O. H. A. executive, after having first secured written consent of his old club.

"A player who desires to change his club or residence must first secure the written consent of his old club, and if this is not forthcoming the player will have the right to present his case in person to the O. H. A. executive for final decision. The clubs concerned will have the privilege of representation at the hearing.

"In case of a player under 20 years of age changing club or residence he must, in addition to the foregoing, secure the written consent of his parent, parents or guardian to make such change.

Exceptions to Rule

"Notwithstanding the above regulations, 'exceptional cases' may be dealt with by the executive committee subject to the veto of the dominion registration committee. Such 'exceptional cases' shall be interpreted to mean:

"When prior to October 1, an employer changes the residence of an employee who has had six months' continuous service prior to this change of residence, and that player still continues in that same employment during the whole of the playing season. Players receiving certificates under this clause automatically forfeit them if they leave that service, or

"When in the case of a boy (under 20 years of age on January 1) the parents and family change their residence and the boy continues to reside with his family."

Clubs that have not yet filed with the O. H. A. secretary financial statements for the past season should do so at once.

GERMAN FLIERS ON WAY SOUTH

Leave Lake Ste. Agnes On Non-Stop Flight To Washington To-day.

IN BIG FORD PLANE.

LAKE STE. AGNES, Que., April 27 (Canadian Press).—The tri-motored Ford Reliable plane which landed here yesterday from Greenely Island with the Bremen crew, took off at 7 o'clock this morning on a proposed non-stop flight to Washington. The plane, which was piloted by Bernt Balchen, was occupied by Capt. Koehl, Baron von Huenefeld, and Major Fitzmaurice, heroes of the East to West trans-Atlantic flight.

Miss Herta Junkers, daughter of the designer of the Bremen, a newspaperman and Carl Wenzel, Junkers representative.

The relief plane left the ground easily after a run of a thousand feet. It steadily climbed, clearing the neighboring mountain, and disappeared in a south-westerly direction. Five minutes later it was back circling over the lake, apparently waiting for Clarence Chamberlin, who piloted Charles Levine's Columbia across the Atlantic, to take off in his Fairchild plane.

Mechanics immediately started the motor of Chamberlin's plane while the Ford machine was loafing. The Ford headed towards the south for the second time, and at 7.05 Chamberlin rose into the air and both planes were soon out of sight.

At a recent industrial exhibition in London a piece of artificial silk was washed 150 times as a demonstration of its wearing powers.

ENGLISH COLT FOR KENTUCKY DERBY

Strolling Player Makes Impressive Showing in His American Debut.

The latest reading of the Kentucky Derby future book prices recorded a big drop in the odds against the imported colt, Strolling Player, after his impressive American debut in the Congressional Handicap at Havre de Grace last Wednesday. Admiral Cary T Grayson, who races under the nom de course of Salubria Stable, paid $61,000 for the half-brother to Call Boy, winner of the last running of the Epsom Derby, and Strolling Players' performance in finishing second to E. B. McLean's good handicap horse, Jock, should be very encouraging to his owner and justify to a great extent the handsome sum paid for him.

No easy spot was selected for the English colt to make his entry on the American turf, for aside from the brilliant McLean colt, the field included the stars of the Seagram stable, Sir Harry and Gaffsman, and H. G. Bedwell's Banton. A certain amount of confidence in the English colt's ability was reflected in the generous support accorded him in the mutuel machines, but to the turf world in general his actual showing in the race was a pleasant surprise.

It was a surprise for this reason, that it usually takes outlanders practically an entire season to acclimatize and show their true worth, while Strolling Player extended a mighty smart handicap performer to the limit at the very first asking.

The son of Grand Parade naturally showed a lack of familiarity with American methods in being slow to reach his full racing stride, and it was this that lost him his first engagement on this side of the Atlantic. Had the race even been a little farther than the mile and a sixteenth, Strolling Player would have undoubtedly trimmed Jock, for the finish found him cutting down the winner's lead rapidly after being badly outrun for the first six furlongs. He appeared to have difficulty getting into his stride, in fact ran awkwardly during the early stages, but that brilliant closing rush stamped him as a colt of unusual speed, and all the leading critics who witnessed him in that race predict a great future for him on the American turf.

Strolling Player has a lot to learn about American methods but has a capable teacher in Bob Smith, and with a few more races before the date of his big objective, the Kentucky Derby, rolls around, he will probably have mastered to some extent the knack of breaking and finding his stride quicker.

Strolling Player only had three starts as a juvenile in England last season, but his two victories in those three engagements stamped him as one of the outstanding developments of the English racing season. He carried 132 pounds to victory in his last start in the old country, which was at Newmarket on June 30, when he beat Tetrecaun, Exeter, Ironclad and four other of the leading two-year-olds. That race was a six furlongs.—Toronto Daily Star.

A WARNER BROS. PRODUCTION

Episode No. 8: 'THE MASKED MENACE'

COMEDY - NEWS

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"BEN-HUR" COMING TO THE CAPITAL MONDAY, TUESDAY, AND WEDNESDAY AT POPULAR PRICES.

When you see "Ben-Hur", the lavish screen spectacle coming to the Capitol Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday you will have the first century history of many different nations displayed before your eyes, with all the glamour and splendor and turbulent drama of the life of the first century of this era.

Here you see Romans and Greeks, Egyptians and Syrians and Jews, and a score of other races with their actions, customs, mannerisms and accomplishments.

"Ben-Hur" is as authoritative an account of the life or ancients as any history, and more so than the average, for not only has everything pertaining to costume, mannerisms, religion, education, social life, sports, etc., been authentically reproduced, but the very temperament and air of the age represented as it actually was thousands of years ago.

In order to accomplish this the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization engaged several noted Italian archaeologists who spent months in research work before actual production work was begun. They remained a part of the staff throughout the entire period of its filming; always criticising anything that was not as it should be to represent the life of the first century.

The result of all this is that when you see the picture you will, in a very short period of time, learn more about the world in the first century that you could possibly do by studying for months. Aside from what you will be learning of history you will be seeing the most gigantic production that has ever been offered the public.

You will be thrilled by the high-strung, dramatic narrative.

You will be held in delightful suspense throughout the whole picture, for there has never been a story of more human appeal than that of "Ben-Hur"; and every dramatic quality has a place in the picture, from comedy to deep tragedy and from pathos to highly-keyed excitement.

An unusual cast has been selected to interpret the roles in this spectacle. Ramon Novarro and May McAvoy play the leading roles.

AT THE REGENT.

FAMOUS FIGHT PROMOTER WITH BLUE IN FIGHT FILM "ONE ROUND HOGAN"

To fight fans all over the country, the presence of "Rob Roy" Benton in the cast of Warner Bros.' production of "One Round Hogan" will lend it an authentic atmosphere which nothing else could, for "Rob Roy" with fifty-six years of ringside writing behind him, is undoubtedly the dean of all sport reporters.

Born in New York, he became the protege of such grand old editors as Bennett, Dana and Greeley. He promoted the famous Kearney-McAuliffe fight for a $250 purse and sustained a broken arm which prevented him from correcting and stopping fallacious reports of the seventy-two round affair. As a result, he is still meeting youngsters with garbled versions.

Benton was instrumental in arranging many fights throughout the country and has brought out some of the most famous leather-pushers. He became internationally famous under his pen name, "Rob Roy."

More recently he was press representative for Jack Dempsey, keeping that worthy constantly before the public eye.

Ill health has recently curtailed his activities, but when sought by his friend, director Howard Bretherton to appear in and give technical suggestions on the picture, he willingly complied. James J. Jeffries, Leila Hyams, Tom Gallery, Frank Hagney, Texas Kid and Abdul are also included in the cast. "One Round Hogan," greatest fight-film of the year starring Monte Blue is now showing at the Regent Theatre.

What CAN a Man Believe?

By BRUCE BARTON

Author of "The Book Nobody Knows," "The Man Nobody Knows"

XXXV—Child Faith in God

WHEN he was a little boy Charles Darwin used to run foot races, and was very often victorious. Years later he wrote this explanation of his youthful assurance: "I prayed earnestly to God to help me, and I well remember that I attributed my success to my prayers and not to my quick running, and marvelled how generally I was aided."

There are many grown-up little boys, beginning now to be gray around the temples, who will read that paragraph with a sympathetic smile. They too remember athletic contests, grammar school examinations, and boyish business ventures in which they were successful because God was on their side. With some feeling of loss and loneliness they look back on those days when there were no doubts, and all life seemed so much simpler.

"I remember, I remember
The house where I was born,
The little window, where the sun
Came peeping in at morn.

"I remember, I remember
The fir-trees dark and high:
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky:

It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm farther off from Heaven
Than when I was a boy."

To be sure, the God of boyhood was not an altogether comfortable companion. He was stern and busy with bookkeeping. Yet He could be relied upon in an emergency.

Less Dread Now

When a little boy had been good for several days in succession it was possible, by timely prayer, to induce Him to take notice and give real help. That boys should really love Him was almost impossible, however much the Sunday-school teachers might urge it. But the fear of Him was much less dreadful than it had been a few generations before.

Says Harvey J. O'Higgins in his interesting chapter on Julia Ward Howe:

"The training (in her home) was narrow and cloistered and Puritanic to a point that is now almost incredible. Her mother died at the age of twenty-seven, having borne seven children of whom Julia was the eldest living, then five and a half years old. Her mother was 'almost literally prayed to death,' and after her mother's death the father's 'views of religious duty became more stringent' than ever. He read family prayers night and morning. With him Sunday observance began, Puritanically, on Saturday evening. 'The early days of my youth,' she wrote in her Reminiscences, 'were passed in the seclusion not only of home life, but of a home most carefully and jealously guarded from all that might be represented in the orthodox trinity of evil, the world, the flesh and the devil.' She was allowed no playmates outside the family connection, and their play was inside play.

"At the age of eight she wrote to a young cousin ill from some childish ailment: 'I hear with regret that you are sick, and it is necessary as ever that you should trust in God; love him, dear Henry, and you will see death approaching with joy.' At twelve she dedicated a manuscript volume of poems to her father, warning him not to 'expect to find in these juvenile productions the delicacy and grace which pervades the writings of that dear parent who is now in glory.' And the titles of the poems included 'All things shall pass away,' 'We return no more,' 'To an infant's departing spirit,' 'My Heavenly Home,' etc. At fifteen she composed a verse called 'Vain Regrets' with the subtitle 'Written on looking over a diary kept while I was under serious impressions'; and a stanza reads:

"'Oh! Happy days, gone, never to return!
At which fond memory will ever burn,
Oh! Joyous hours, with peace and gladness blest,
When hope and joy dwelt in this careworn breast.'"

One would have to think quite a while in order to compose a stanza more foreign to the mind of the modern Christian child.

Something must be allowed, of course, for the widely different view-point of that generation, remote from us only a hundred years in time but many centuries remote in its approach to the method and subject-matter of religious instruction.

Something must be allowed also for the personality of little Julia Ward Howe. Her over-developed religiosity seems as abnormal to us as some of the sophistication of our children in quite different directions would have seemed to her and her parents. But when all allowances have been made, this stanza and the other poetry in her juvenile book constitute a rather terrible indictment of that type of Christianity which was taught to her.

Pious Phrases

Why should a God-fearing little girl ever have caught up those pious phrases from the lips of older people and made them her own?

Of what use is faith in a loving Father if its effect is to cause sixteen-year-old youngsters to have "careworn breasts"? How could any one imagine that Jesus, the friendliest person who ever lived, whose first miracle was performed to make a happy social party happier, who was followed everywhere by laughing groups of boys and girls, should demand solemn introspection and dyspeptic forebodings as the evidence of belief?

By what strange perversion did the laughter and sunshine of His personality become debased into gloom and fear? Surely, these are questions which constitute one of the mysteries of the world.

WHAT IS THIS GOLF?

(Author Unidentified)

Golf is a form of work made expensive enough for a man to enjoy it. It is a physical and mental exertion made attractive by the fact that you have to dress for it in a $200,000 clubhouse.

Golf is what letter carrying, ditch digging and carpet beating would be if these three tasks had to be performed on the same hot afternoon.

Golf is the simplest looking game in the world when you decide to take it up, and the toughest looking after you have been at it 10 or 12 years.

It is probably the only game a man can play as long as a quarter of a century and then discover it was too deep for him in the first place.

The game is played on carefully selected grass with little white balls, and as many clubs as the player can afford. These balls cost from 75 cents to $26 each, and it is possible to support a family of 10 people (all adults) for five months on the money represented by the number lost by some golfers in one afternoon.

A golf course has 18 holes, 17 of which are unnecessary, and are put in to make the game harder. A "hole" is a tin cup in the center of a "green". A "green" is a small parcel of grass costing about $1.98 a blade, and usually located between a brook and a couple of apple trees.

The idea is to get the golf ball from a given point into each of the 18 cups in the fewest strokes, and the greatest number of words.

The ball must not be thrown, pushed or carried. It must be propelled by about $200 worth of curious looking implements, especially designed to provoke the owner.

Each implement has a specific purpose, and ultimately some golfers get to know what that purpose is. They are the exceptions.

After each hole has been completed the golfer counts the strokes. Then he subtracts six and says: "Made that in five, that's one above par."

After the final or 18th hole the golfer adds up his score and stops when he has reached 87. He then has a swim, sings "Sweet Adeline" with six or seven other liars, and calls it the end of a perfect day.

IN MEMORIAM.

HOPCROFT. — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Katherine Hopcroft, who passed away April 27, 1927:
God saw that her footsteps faltered,
When the pathway had grown too steep,
So he touched the drooping eyelids
And gave His loved one sleep.
Sweet is the word, Remembrance,
As these few lines will show;
You will always be remembered
In the years that come and go.
Ever remembered by husband and Children.

IN MEMORIAM.

HOPCROFT. — In memory of my dear Mother, Mrs. Hopcroft, who died April 27, 1927:
Remembrance is a golden chain,
Death tries to break but all in vain,
To have, to love, and then to part,
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never;
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
—Inserted by Mr. and Mrs. F. Marwick 324 Euclid Avenue.

IN MEMORIAM.

HOPCROFT. — In memory of my dear Mother, who died April 27th, 1927:
Years may come and years may go,
But memories of you will cling forever;
Till God above did think it best,
To ease your pain and give you rest.
The flowers we laid upon your grave
May wither and decay,
But my love for you, mother dear,
Will never fade away.
—Remembered by Mr and Mrs. F. Smith.

IN MEMORIAM.

HOPCROFT — In loving memory of my dear Mother, who died April 27th, 1927:
Days I am lonesome,
Nights they are long,
Thinking, dear Mother,
Always of you.
—James Hopcroft.

IN MEMORIAM.

HOPCROFT. — In loving memory of my dear Mother, who passed away April 27, 1927:
What would I give to clasp your hand,
Your smiling face to see,
To hear your voice, and see your smile,
That meant so much to me.
Surrounded by friends I am lonesome,
'Midst the season's joys I am blue;
A smile on my face hides a heartache,
Always thinking, dear mother, of you —Always remembered by Mr. and Mrs. A. Cockerill.

IN MEMORIAM.

HOPCROFT.—In loving memory of my dear wife, who died April 27, 1927:
The years may wipe out many things
But this they wipe out never,
The memory of those happy days
When we were altogether.
Loved in life, treasured in death,
A beautiful memory is all that is left.
—In loving memory. Mr. Hopcroft.

ALL CURRIE CASE EVIDENCE IN; COUNSEL ADDRESSES AND CHARGE TO BE GIVEN MONDAY AFTERNOON

Court Adjourns For Week-end When Plaintiff Concludes Case.

GENERALS ON STAND.

Sir Richard Turner and Gen. J. H. McBrien Among Witnesses This Morning.

(By Staff Reporters.)

COBOURG, April 28.—All that remains of the famous Currie-Wilson-Preston $50,000 libel suit are the addresses of the counsel to the jury, the charge by His Lordship the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose, who has presided over the hearing since its opening two weeks ago, and the verdict. Before the court adjourned at ten minutes to one this afternoon, both Frank Regan, counsel for F. W. Wilson and W. T. R. Preston, who is appearing in his own defense, intimated to His Lordship that their addresses would not require more over one hour each. They would not, however, promise to confine their remarks to that length of time. W. N. Tilley, K.C., Toronto, told His Lordship that he was practically compelled to be in Ottawa Tuesday morning and suggested that he would make every effort to bring the case to a close Monday, April 30th.

Both combatant and non-combatant troops appeared as witnesses this morning. The latter were represented by a chaplain, the Rev. George Kilpatrick of Ottawa, who stated that he had entered Mons on the morning of November 11th about 9 o'clock. His evidence was particularly descriptive of the military funeral held in conjunction with the citizens of Mons for the ten Canadian dead who were "available" for burial. The ceremony had impressed the reverend gentleman greatly. He had officiated as chaplain at the funeral.

Tense Moments.

Tense moments figured in the proceedings this morning. The first came when General Sir Arthur Currie stated that it would be traitorous to stop fighting before the hour set for the cessation of hostilities arrived.

"Then you would call Col. Ewing a traitor?" Regan asked.

Col. Royal L. H. Ewing, O.C. 42nd Canadian Infantry Battalion, had previously testified that his unit had not engaged the enemy since several hours before the "cease fire." That this could not constitute Col. Ewing a traitor was pointed out by General Currie by his explanation that some of Col. Ewing's unit had already reached the objective set for the unit. Therefore, there was no need of sending out "all the other men."

General Sir Richard Turner, V.C., D.S.O., K.C.M.G., K.C.B., entered the box, and said General Currie had a most enviable reputation as a military leader, and had been highly recommended for the rank of corps commander when General Sir Julian Byng resigned the command. Sir Richard declined to acknowledge himself as "one of the most if not the most distinguished soldier in the British Army." The suggestion was advanced by Frank Regan. Sir Richard did not hesitate, however, to admit a vast experience in military affairs, and that rearguard actions were not at all strange to him. He absolutely agreed, he said, with General Currie's interpretation of his orders which were issued for the purpose of being carried out. The only way to conduct warfare of the type involved was to keep on the enemy's tail, and if he hesitated in his retreat push him a little.

Perhaps the most dramatic scene of the entire case came when after W. N. Tilley had examined General Jas. McBrien on the order issued by Field Marshal Foch, Mr. Regan attempt to question the witness on the same evidence to which he had objected but a few minutes before during his examination, he held his horn-rimmed glasses in his hand and shook them in the direction of the witness.

"Don't shake your glasses at me, Mr. Regan, or I will shake this book at you," said General McBrien, as he suited the action to the word, raising the large book above his shoulder and at arm's length.

Mr. Regan deposited his spectacles on the table when General McBrien stated, "I'm a little nervous, you know."

Later in his evidence, the General stated, "You have been very funny and insulting, Mr. Regan, but I am not used to that sort of thing.

Drama also entered into the proceedings as was evidenced by the stirring account of the funeral given by the chaplain who conducted the military burial service, the Rev. George Kilpatrick of Ottawa. During his recounting of the event, the entire court listened in respectful silence, eager to gain at first hand the account of how the last Canadians to fall on a foreign field were interred with every rite and honor which could be afforded their memories.

Mr. Preston examined General Currie as to the number of troops engaged and the advantage probably to be gained by surrounding the city.

"The Germans were not running away," said Sir Arthur. "There was no rout. The Germans would be the last people to admit that; because they were unable to give defensive battle does not say they were routed."

Sir Arthur further stated that he was aware of conditions on the front and had a fair idea of general internal conditions. Hostilities had been resumed on other occasions after an armistice.

Q—In modern times?

A—Yes.

Q—When?

A—Oh, the civil war.

Mr. Tilley—I object. Must we revert to the civil war? We had a perfectly good one.

Mr. Preston—Very well, I'll drop it right there.

In the face of a volley of questions General Currie maintained that he would have been a traitor had he stopped fighting before the armistice came into effect.

Mr. Preston—Then Col. Ewing was a traitor? He ordered his men to stop fighting.

The remark precipitated a breathless moment, which terminated in a protest by Mr. Tilley against such a speech, and which was immediately ruled quite improper.

General Currie—I think I should say this for Colonel Ewing. Part of his command had reached their objective. There was no need for him to send all the rest of his men out there.

Regan Denies Statement.

Following the examination of certain documents and a request to have them filed Col. Orde of the Department of National Defence said he had furnished Mr. Regan with two copies, one for himself and one for filing.

Mr. Regan at once rose to protest. It is a direct mistatement of fact," he asserted. "I will not go any further than that but I want Col. Orde's statement retracted in this court."

Justice Rose expressed displeasure that such an argument should arise in the procedings

Sir Arthur was allowed to step out of the box while the documents were being produced. When Mr. Regan attempted to address His Lordship, while the latter was examining the list of exhibits he was ordered by the Bench "Sit down, Mr. Regan."

Following Mr. Regan's protest against Co. Orde's statement, Col. Duguid, also of the Department of National Defence, entered the witness box and produced the third copy of the documents in question. These were filed for exhibit. They included war diaries of various brigades, accounts of enemy shell fire, and some operation orders. There was also a list of the men who were buried at Mons Nov. 13 1918.

Mr. Regan wished to file a list of men killed at Mons. Mr. Tilley objected since the information contained in the document was also contained in others already filed.

His Lordship ruled that since the case for the defence had closed a week ago his time for filing exhibits had passed.

Mr. Preston rose to continue his examination of General Currie but Mr. Regan interrupted to ask His Lordship to clear up the matter of Col. Orde's statement.

You know what the situation is now, my Lord, said Regan.

I know that the documents are in. Let us get on with the case, replied His Lordship.

Mr. Preston continued to question Gen. Currie regarding the number of men under his command at various times and as to the handling of war diaries. Gen. Currie could not give many figures since he thought the officers in charge of such things should speak for them.

At 10.40 Mr. Preston completed his questioning and Mr. Tilley asked General Currie regarding the situation at the Meuse. General Currie stated that he believed the war would have ended regardless of whether or not Mons was taken. "What would happen on that small section would not greatly effect the other

Berube Exonerated On Mission Charge

DALHOUSIE, N., B. April 28.—(Canadian Press.)— Peter Berube of St. Quentin was yesterday found not guilty by the jury in the Restigouche County Court, on the charge of murder by Thomas Daigle at St. Quentin on October 29 last.

The jury was out one and a half hours.

Berube had been charged with the death of Daigle during a quarrel on the day in question arising over an accusation by Daigle that Berube had made improper advances to Daigle's young daughter. The case began on Wednesday last and evidence was concluded Thursday night, yesterday being taken up with addresses of counsel, H. A. Carr and A. P. N. McLaughlin for the Crown and J. T. Hebert and J. Allin Leblanc for the defence and by the Judge's charge.

The cases against Clarence Laurette, Louis Roussie and Jas. Ramsey, who pleaded guilty on Tuesday to charges of theft were disposed on, the prisoners being freed on probation on account of their youth and previous good records.

$8,000 NEEDED FOR BUILDINGS

Exhibition Board Hears Report of Grounds Committee—Postpones Decision.

WILL LOOK OVER LAND.

"Will you take it with you now?" was the question asked by Secretary F. J. A. Hall when Tom Brown, chairman of the grounds committee of the Exhibition Board announced that the committee, after carefully considering the needs, wanted $8,000 to spend on new buildings this year. The rest of the board greeted the announcement with silence, sitting back to let it sink in while the chairman explained that they proposed to erect a new cattle barn, a barn for horses, and one for sheep. That for the cattle would go south of the one at present along the eastern edge of the grounds.

Vice-president Tom McIndoo, who presided at last night's meeting, explained that the decision had not been arrived at without considerable thought on the part of the committee, which had met on the grounds and gone over the matter carefully. The increased number of exhibits and the greater attraction to the fair would, he felt, meet part of the cost involved.

"Where will we get the money?" was, however, the question in the minds of most of the board, and action on the report was delayed until the whole board had a chance to go over the matter at a special meeting on the grounds this afternoon, and the finance committee had considered the prospects of meeting this expense.

Reg. H. Turner asked if the committee had considered that placing the cow barn at the proposed site would eliminate a number of the present stalls, so that the increased accommodation would be only half the capacity of the barn. Mr. Brown pointed out that the present stalls are in bad shape and will soon have to be torn down.

Vincent Eastwood doubted whether the increased attraction would bring in enough to carry the cost, and wished to know what indebtedness the board now carries. The answer was $8,000, and the realization that the proposal would increase the burden to $16,000 brought a pause in the proceedings.

J. W. Frazer proposed that the finance committee might get after more specials and reduce the money cost to the board. In this connection Manager William Knox reported that revisions of the prize list, cutting out poorly supported classes and adding new ones, had resulted in a net saving of $145 on live stock. He also read a list of new specials.

A new item on the program of the exhibition was approved last night. This is a horseshoe contest. Certain gentlemen interested in the matter are promoting it and would provide the prizes. The contests would be held on the race track in front of the grandstand, at the evening performance and, judging from the interest taken in this sport at the Royal Winter Fair, should prove attractive.

Dr. J. J. Craig, as representative of the City Baseball League, was given permission to use the baseball diamond on condition that each player becomes a member of the Exhibition. The grounds committee will be in charge and will make arrangements for the use of the diamond by the City and East Peterborough leagues.

Director Stan Lowe submitted a list of rules governing the horse racing, and it was adopted. There was some discussion on the possibility of enforcing a time limit for entries, which the rules placed at September 1, and on the advisability of providing free hay.

TALK ON ANIMALS IS GIVEN CHILDREN

Rev. William McDonald Addresses Junior Humane Society.

The weekly meeting of the Junior Humane Society was held in St. John's Parish Hall.

The opening song, "Ring the Bells of Mercy," was sung. The pledge followed.

Philip Pink reported having stopped boys from thrown stones at a dog.

Herb Lush stopped a girl from trying to force a dog into the water.

The roll call showed an attendance of twenty-six.

The members sang, "The Marching Song."

The president introduced the Rev. William McDonald of Knox Church, who gave a most interesting address on "Wild Animals of the Forest." The speaker mentioned the good work of Jack Miner. He also told of a way to catch animals without being cruel. The speaker expressed himself in favor of a zoo in Nicholl's Park.

A vote of thanks was moved to the speaker by Thelma Buller, and seconded by Fred Constable.

Constance Legon favored the meeting with a very fine piano solo, and Leonard Phillips gave a reading entitled "Little Gustava."

Thelma Buller, a clever elocutionist, gave a recitation.

Next week's program was arranged and it promises to be good.

Ottawa Commons Divided On Motion For Third Reading of Divorce Bill

OTTAWA, Ont., April 28 (Canadian Press). — A motion for third reading of a Divorce Bill precipitated a division in the House of Commons last night. On the order paper were about 100 divorce bills in various stages of progress. When the Deputy Speaker, J. Fred Johnon, called the third reading of the first on the list, J. S. Woodsworth (Labor, Winnipeg North Centre) rose with an amendment that the House consider the Bill to provide divorce courts for Ontario.

The House divided.

The amendment was lost on a vote of 53 to 21. Liberals voted solidly against the amendment. The only Liberal-Progressive to vote, John Millar (Quappelle) also voted against the amendment. Conservatives, with the exception of Hon. E. F. Tolmie (Victoria) and G. C. Wilson (Wentworth) voted for the amendment. U.F.A. and Progressive members split on the vote. A number of members were paired and consequently did not take part in the division.

BELL COMPANY STAFF BANQUET GREAT SUCCESS

Men of Local Plant, With Visitors From District, Enjoy Dinner.

DISCUSS PROGRESS.

Safety Stressed By Various Speakers—Value of Councils Great.

Indicative of a splendid spirit of loyalty and co-operation between company and employees, the annual dinner and meeting of the Peterborough Plant Employees' Council of the Bell Telephone Company, held in the Empress Hotel last evening was one of the most successful yet held, bringing together as it did, not only the members of the local exchange but representatives from all over the district which extends along the lake front from Trenton to a point between Port Hope and Bowmanville and the territory north of this line including the town of Lindsay. Several company officials were present from Toronto, including J. H. Martin, Division Plant Superintendent, Mr. Ingram, Division Commercial Engineer, and Mr. McKenzie, Division Plant Engineer.

During the dinner, Mowry's Collegians played a brief program of dance numbers and also led in the community singing. The other entertainment, aside from the toast list was a program entitled "Nuts from Brazil," under the irection of H. H. Lush. Previous to the comic part, little Miss Sophia Yeates entertained with a couple of cleverly executed dances.

Soon to Retire

Among the guests at the meeting last evening was one who has been in the service for forty years, who helped place telephones in Peterborough thirty-eight years ago and come here from Port Hope in 1900 to spend the next five years as foreman of construction and maintenance, and who, for the past twenty-three years has been manager of the exchange at Lindsay, namely, Thomas J. Tilly. Known to telephone men throughout the entire district and, indeed, throughout the province, Mr. Tilly last evening received the congratulations of friends on completion of his forty years' service.

It is understood that on Tuesday evening next a complimentary banquet will be held in his honor. It will take place in Lindsay and will be attended by representatives from points all over the district. A large number of local "Bell" men are expected to be present.

The Toasts

Following his proposal of the toast to the King, Chairman Percy Gray extended a welcome to the guests and called for the toast to "Our Guests."

In responding, His Worship Mayor Denne expressed his pleasure at being present to meet the Telephone men with whom he had had many connections. He referred to the splendid spirit of co-operation indicated by such dinners as this and concluded by paying tribute to the splendid service given by the Bell Telephone Company in Peterborough.

J. H. Ross

J. H. Ross in behalf of the visitors, thanked the chairman for the pleasure of being present. Of the plant council, he explained that it provides a means by which the employees may meet and discuss matters beneficial to the company and pass along ideas to the head office.

"Our Company"

G F. Elm, in proposing the toast to "Our Company," stated that this dinner was a direct result of good relations between employees and management. He mentioned the thrift plan which enabled the employees to have an interest in the company, and other benefits enjoyed by the employees of the Bell Company.

"Service at a minimum of cost coincident with safety, has been the plan of the company to the success of which I now ask you to drink," said he, in conclusion.

J. H. Martin.

The division plant superintendent of Toronto, J. H. Martin, expressed his pleasure at being present. He felt that the work of the district men had made the plant council a success.

In response to the toast to "Our Company," Mr. Martin stated that it was one of the greatest public utili-

Part of Belgium Forever Canada

COBOURG, Ont., April 28.—(Special.)— The most dramatic touch of the entire case which has been heard before the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose here for the last two weeks, occurred this morning, when the Rev. George Kilpatrick entered the witness box and testified at the call of W. N. Tilley, K.C., Toronto, counsel for General Sir Arthur Currie in the $50,000 libel suit which has been in progress here. During his evidence the reverend gentleman asked permission of His Lordship to quote the actual words of the Burgomaster of the historic city of Mons, which had been uttered at the funeral service and which had lingered in his memory since that day. The permission was readily granted and the chaplain who had been among the first of the non-combatants to enter Mons, quoted:

"There are those in your land who sorrow to-day. Their loved ones are in our keeping Tell them there is a corner in Belgium which is forever Canada."

At the conclusion of the chaplain's remarks, a reporter, who by chance is a returned soldier, was heard to murmur, "Amen."

COAL BUSINESS IS TAKEN OVER

Conger Lehigh Company, of Toronto, Enters Peterborough Trade.

PLANS ENLARGEMENT.

Another company, one of Toronto's leading coal firms, is about to commence business in Peterborough, by name, The Conger Lehigh Coal Company, Ltd., which has taken over and will enlarge upon the Charlotte Street business of Robert Hicks Company, Ltd. That firm has terminated thirty-five years of successful business in this city.

The Conger company contemplates enlargement of its quarters to handle adequately the fuel and building supply business and will also take over the gasoline station adjacent, William Poulson, the present proprietor, will continue to have charge of it, and his facilities for serving the motoring public will be increased by the addition of a new 10,000 gallon tank and two pumps so that the station will boast two 10,000 gallon tanks, one 1,000 gallon and one 500 gallon tank, with pumps placed so that two lines of cars may be served at once.

The new managing director will be a Peterborough man of many years' standing, in the person of T. O. Donaldson, former managing director of the G. Walter Green Company, assisted by Miss M. Rose, while the staff of drivers at present employed will "carry on." Mr. Donaldson is already in his office at 266 Charlotte Street. The office quarters, in accordance with changes in the building, will be moved slightly to make way for a driveway on the west side. The exact plans of renovation have not, as yet, been prepared.

The Conger firm, established in 1868, and now having fifteen yards in Ontario cities, stands prepared to attend the wants of Peterborough citizens.

FAST TIME MADE ON NEW BUILDING

T. C. Ephgrave Has Lockworks Replacement Nearly Ready For Use.

The management of the Peterboro Lock Company is more than pleased with the progress made in the erection within seven weeks of their new brick and steel building on Simcoe Street.

T. C. Ephgrave, contractor, has had a staff of between forty and fifty men on the job and has lost little time. At present, the new building stands almost ready for occupation while a new office and shipping room is being constructed and fitted in the space beneath the west building formerly occupied by W. R. Turner Company which has moved its side of Simcoe Street.

SHAWL PAGEANT MOST COLORFUL

Women's Art Association Arranges Pretty Exhibit and Program.

HISTORICAL COSTUMES.

A quaint and colorful old-time atmosphere of quiet charm and grace permeated the performance in the hall of the Conservatory of Music last evening, when a very attractive double Pageant of Historical Women and of Shawls was presented under the auspices of the Women's Art Association. This was in charge of Mrs. B. L. Barns and Mrs. J. E. R. Munro, while assistance with the very attractive arrangement of the stage was given by Mrs. J. H. Seels and Miss Linden Hall.

The program was appropriate and included songs and recitations by ladies wearing historical and old-time costumes and beautiful shawls of different types. An exhibit of draperies of various sorts was enjoyed at the conclusion of the program.

The president, Mrs. W. Blackwell, opened the program with an expression of thanks to all who had loaned shawls for this second Pageant and the presentation of Historical Women commenced, Mrs. J. H. Seels reading the prefatory explanation to the introduction of each character. Little pages in attendance, in costume, were Isabel Weddell and Margaret Allison.

Moving in stately procession across the stage, silently, to pause momentarily to bow, were Queen Isabella of Spain (Mrs. R. C. Cummings), Madame de Champlain (Madame Sifroy Goulet), Madame de lat Peltrie (foundress of the Ursuline Order in Quebec), Mrs. N. D. Seaton), Madame la Tour, impersonated by Evangeline of Acadia (Miss Esther Deyell), Madeline de Vercheres (Miss Ruth Sutton), Laura Secord (Mrs. P. L. Allison), and Mrs. Adam Scott, wife of the founder of Peterborough (Mrs. V. S. Foster).

The appropriate and elaborate costuming of the ladies, the pretty setting of an old-time interior and the soft music played by Mrs. T. Cruikshank, who was also dressed in an old-time gown of quaint style, made this section very charming. The finale was an ensemble grouping, with Mrs. H. F. Doig, in patriotic costume, singing "O Canada."

The applause which greeted the Pageant of Historical Women was just as enthusiastic for the second portion of the program, a Pageant of Shawls, directed by Mrs. J. E. R. Munro, who introduced the various performers and also gave, in commencement, a pleasing description of the growth of popularity in shawls as feminine attire, recording the story of the first Paisley shawl with a Persian design.

Each of the characters in turn either sang, or recited, or gave a brief little talk, the effect being pleasing in the extreme. Mrs. Cruikshank played accompaniments for this section also, and opened the program with a rendition of Borowski's "Chant du Soir" on the piano. Miss Geraldine Collins, as an Irish colleen, wearing Miss McIvor's shawl, sang "The Last Rose of Summer"; Miss Edna Conner as a Scotch lassie, in Highland costume, danced the Highland Fling; Mrs. H. E. Connolly as a Canadian Pioneer of U. E. Loyalist stock, wearing a shawl loaned by Miss Dench, recited; Mrs. Gerald McClelland as a Spanish senorita, wearing a shawl loaned by Mme. Goulet, sang "Ramona"; Mrs. F. C. Neal as an Indian princess, wearing a Navajo blanket loaned by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, gave a reading of Indian lore, and Mrs. D. N. Carmichael as an Irish immigrant, wearing a shawl loaned by Mrs. C. S. Stapleton, recounted some of her experiences in a new land.

The Ages of Women were then presented, in an extremely interesting finale to a pleasing entertainment. In turn, appeared, in old-time dress, singing and reciting as they took their places; little Marilyn Munro, as a tiny girl; Miss Geraldine Glover, as the modern young girl; Miss Lillias Grierson as the bride; Mrs. C. Saunders, as the mother crooning to her infant daughter; Mrs. A. Barton, as Serene Middle Age; and Miss Grace Reinhardt, as the Grandmother. A salute to the seated grandmother by the other members of the two pageants and the singing in unison of "Auld Lang Syne" formed the conclusion to an artistic and quaintly charming program.

POLISH FLIERS OFF SUDDENLY

Flying Field Officials Don't Know Whether They Have Started Ocean Hop.

FLYING WESTWARD.

LEBOURGET, France April 28. — (Canadian Press). — Two Polish airmen with trans-atlantic ambitions hopped off from this airfield at 5.55 a. m. to-day on a mysterious flight. The fliers Major Idzikowski and Major Kubala, had announced that they would make an all day test flight in which they hope to fly to New York by way of the Azores. Some persons, however, thought that today's hop off might be the actual start for America, since the plane was fully fueled and carried food enough for such a venture.

So secretive have the fliers been during their lengthy preparations in France that aviation experts continued doubtful, even after the plane had disappeared, as to whether the men were testing it or flying for New York. Late this morning no sign of it had been seen. Signal stations along the coast from Dunkirk south had no report of it. Weather conditions along the entire coast were ideal, with only a light breeze.

Aviators Forced Down.

The Polish airmen, who hopped off early to-day for an unknown destination, landed at Adderville at two o'clock this afternoon because of a break in the radiator of their machine.

Posse On Lookout For Young Farmer

REGINA, Sask., April 28 (Canadian Press).—Sweeping northward in a far flung cordon, Provincial Police and a number of volunteers are searching near Pangman, Sask., for Tony Yost, 21-year-old German immigrant who is alleged to have shot and stabbed three members of the Martin Kaufmann family on Wednesday night because his suit for Annie Snyder, the adopted daughter, was spurned. The victims are all reported to be recovering.

Yesterday a farmer named Albert Minion, who lives six miles north-west of the Kaufmann farm, told the Provincial police he had seen a man, looking much like Yost, in his pasture Thursday night. The man he saw dropped into a little gulley as soon as he noticed that he was observed, and when Minion ran to the spot he had disappeared.

Provincial police were searching the entire district yesterday.

YOUNG PEOPLE HOLD BANQUET

Annual Custom Observed By St. Paul's Church Society at Warkworth.

TABLES DECORATED.

WARKWORTH, April 28. — As is the custom the last meeting of the year of the Young People's Union of St. Paul's Church was held on Wednesday evening, April 25, in the form of a banquet, being held in the Sunday School Room.

The beautifully decorated room of streamers of the league group color, red, blue, orange, and white, with the table decorations of pink and white carnations, tulips, daffodils and daisies, presented a pleasing picture.

O. E. Kelly ably filled the position of toastmaster and proposed the toast to the King, also to Canada, in which it was stated that we may well be proud of Canada. We should be proud of our town, as it was the largest in Percy Township; of the township, because it is the greatest in Northumberland County, of the county because it is the greatest in Ontario, of Ontario because it is the greatest in the Dominion of Canada, and of the Dominion, because it is the greatest in the British Empire.

Misses Jean and Frances Bowen played an instrumental duet, and Miss Ruby O'Neill gave an excellent address on music and its appreciation, in which the speaker capably exhibited and expressed different types of music on the piano showing how feeling is brought out in different kinds of music. A vocal duet, "How Do You Do?" by Lila and Edgar Allen was greatly appreciated, following which was a reading by Mis Jean Walker. Rev. Harston, of St. John's United Church, Campbellford, gave an excellent address which was thoroughly enjoyed. He chose the rhyme of Jack and Jill for his subject, and very clearly drew an interesting picture of what kind of type Jack and Jill must have been and should be, and which is the attitude which all young people should adopt. Misses Ina Bowen and Frances Jones sang a duet very acceptably, after which Rev. W. W. Jones gave a talk on "Opportunities." Community singing interspersed throughout the different numbers added greatly to the evening's program.

W. T. R. Preston Has Several Questions Yet To Ask Former Commander.

PROCEDURE DISCUSSED.

Defense Counsel Wants To Make Address to Jury on Same Day as Mr. Tilley.

(By Staff Reporters.)

COBOURG, April 28. — Practically all day, General Sir Arthur Currie, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., plaintiff in the $50,000 libel suit against W. T. R. Preston, and the Port Hope Guide, stood in the witness box and replied to a volley of questions fired at him by his own counsel W. N. Tilley, K.C., Toronto, counsel for the defence, Frank Regan, Toronto, and from W. T. R. Preston himself, one of the defendants in the action.

Only one witness preceded Sir Arthur, William J. Moore, a Toronto photographer, who identified himself as a corporal of the Twentieth Battalion in Nov. 1918. During the last few days of the fighting he was detailed to a place in the evacuation party. His duty was to superintend the carrying out of casualties to first aid posts. The fact that he carried some men into an Imperial dressing station and not to the Canadian post was because the former was closer at hand by a matter of 200 yards of open fire swept ground was the cause of considerable questioning by Regan.

Sir Arthur Currie gave evidence as clear a manner as could be desired. Twice he was given the permission of the bench to make a statement in explanation of some reply he had made which might be feared be misinterpreted or misunderstood Many statements which he was credited to have made by various newspapers and other publications Sir Arthur denied absolutely.

The speech made by the Hon. Rudolph Lemieux he referred to as "poetic licence," in part. He stated that he knew Mr. Lemieux personally and did not think for a moment that he would go all the way to Belgium to misstate facts. He believed the speech had been made from the facts as the Honorable Rodolph then understood them.

In Mons, said Sir Arthur, he has been thrilled with pride by the gallant, soldier like attitude with which his men had marched "off parade," after the celebration of the afternoon.

Accused by Mr. Regan of trying to withhold honor from the men who had fallen during the last days of the war and were buried in Mons November 13, General Currie denied ever wishing to do any such thing He did however declare that it was no more glorious to fall before Mons than on any other field of honor.

To W. T. R. Preston Mr. Currie stated that he had hoped the rumor had died down, but since it had not he left instructions with his solicitors before leaving last year for a holiday in Honolulu. The present action had resulted. He had not selected the two defendants particularly.

How long the case will continue is not yet definitely known. The jury was allowed to leave shortly after six last night while His Lordship and counsel remained behind to discuss the procedure to be followed. Justice Rose expressed the opinion that he had expected the proceedings to be ended yesterday and had been disappointed. Mr. Tilley, K.C., was also of that opinion. Frank Regan said he thought it was a big case with a lot of money involved and that it could not in justice be rushed to completion. Whether or not W. T. R. Preston will be allowed to address the jury has not yet been decided upon His Lordship said he would give the matter further consideration although he was of the opinion that the "Irish case" would be a safe precedent to follow.

After Mr Tilley advised His Lordship that he had only two more witnesses to call and that these were "short witnesses" the bench ordered Frank Regan to be prepared to begin his address to the jury this morning.

When court reassembles in the morning Mr. Preston will complete his examiation of General Currie and the other two witnesses will be heard. The session is to start at 9 a.m. It was suggested that 8.30 be set as the hour, but His Lordship considered this too early an hour.

When court re-assembled after the noon recess, Mr. Regan continued his examination of General Currie by recalling the last of his examination of the morning a statement made in the Canadian House of Parliament by Sir Sam. Hughes. He continued by reading another statement by the same man and in the same place. Sir Arthur Currie stated that he disagreed with the statement as read.

Mr. Regan—"Now Sir Arthur, will you be good enough to take a copy of the article which brought this suit, I want to go over it with you."

Suit Entered in Time.

Sir Arthur Currie complied with the request and Mr. Regan brought out the matter of dates. The period of time allowed for notice of suit to be served was given as six weeks. Mr. Regan claimed this might become an important factor of the case.

Montgomery, Paul Barrie, William Scriver and Lew Scriver shipped twenty-eight from their camp for the sum of $140. They also sold about four hundred pelts to local and outside buyers.

The number of muskrat pelts shipped from Hastings and district will number more than three hundred and a great many escaped the clutches of the trappers on account of the water rising so high in the river. The prices paid by the local buyer, Howard Fairman, ranged from $2 to $2.25, who obtained a large number of the rats.

During the course of the festivities the happy couple were presented with a beautiful floor lamp, accompanied by an appropriate address read by Mrs. Lena Williams, the gift being presented by Mrs. Fred Wrightly. They were married in Blairton on April 24, 1888, the Rev. R. J. Eyes of Love

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, April 28. — Playing to a full house, the Young People Dramatic Club, of Zion, recently staged one of the most successfully staged plays ever given in the Orange Hall. With the nonchalance and demeanor of professionals they put on "Eyes of Love" to a thoroughly appreciative audience. Each player interpreted his part with a sympathy and understanding unusual in amateur performances.

The following is the cast: Judge Barry, a middle-aged man, Alfred Gifford; Mrs. Barry, the dignified mother, Mrs. Lorne Barnum; Gailya, the vivacious, pretty, adopted daughter, Jennie Fry; Royal Manton, a clean-cut youth of high principles, and a suitor for Gailya's hand, Earl Fairman; Burt Wade, rather inclined to be unprincipled, who considers "all's fair in love or war," also a suitor, a part splendidly played by Lindsay Anderson; Reeta, Burt Wade's sister, well educated, but unprincipled ,Nellie Bennett; Carolina, colored mammy, whom the members of the household love and who is devoted to the family, Gladys Simpson; Lora, the piquant, pretty, clever little housemaid, Gladys Petherick; Clark, the butler, who is a sleuth in disguise and who, although hired by Wade, does a little detective work of his own, Roy Fry; Jim, an escaped convict found wrongfully accused and sentenced, afterwards proved innocent and found to be Gailya's father, a character splendidly portrayed by Elmer Petherick.

Rev. C. D. Daniels, who assisted the players in their rehearsals, also acted a chairman for the evening, introducing the character in such a manner as to give some insight into the play. The cast appreciates Mr. Daniel's interest and assistance.

Music for the evening was supplied by Mr. Hazell and Mr. Ronald Hazell of Campbellford. Following the play, the ladies of Zion congregation served a light lunch.

Miss Elsie P. Truskett wants to become a member of the Kansas City Livestock Exchange and has brought suit to force the exchange to admit her.

DEVONSHIRE CREAM BRINGS SONG ORDER

Minister Puts Condition on Acceptance of Gift From Deputation.

LONDON, April 28.—(Canadian Press). — A. M. Samuel, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, figures in an engaging story of a deputation, the gift of a tin of Devonshire cream and the suggestion of the writing of a song. A deputation from Bideford, Devon, who visited Whitehall in connection with the appeal for the restoration to Bideford of the dignity of a port, were highly pleased with their interview with Mr. Samuel who recalled the happy time he had spent in Devon.

One member of the deputation, on returning home, sent a large tin of Devonshire cream to Mr. Samuel. He replied humorously, pointing out the danger of making such gifts to a member of the Government, but saying that if he had returned the cream it would have been spoilt, so he had eaten it, much to his enjoyment. He accepted it, however, on the condition that the donor, or the local laureate, should write a song to celebrate the newly restored dignity to the town, suggesting as the title "From Bideford Quay to Appledore Bar". He added that he would get the song set to music.

The challenge is being accepted.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

SEATED ALONE AT MY WINDOW, looking out into the gathering shadows, thoughts came thick and fast. And, while some of them were too sacred to share with any other human being, many of them were such that it would be a shame to keep them to myself. Where they came from I cannot tell. They seemed too wonderful, most of them, to have originated in my brain. But, as guests, I gave them a royal welcome! I remembered that it was written to some, "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." It is an honor to have the privilege of entertaining angels—but what a pity to miss the angel in the stranger! So, as I gazed into the shadows, I prayed for the gift of discernment and the ability to see the angel even in strangers.

Wanted—Intercessors!

I seemed to be carried in the spirit to the midst of a great congregation, and I was strangely moved as I listened to the words of the preacher. I felt that I was in the presence of a true prophet of God. There was a tone of authority in his voice such as is not always heard in those who are supposed to be speakers for God. I did not hear him announce his text. Perhaps there was none! He was speaking when I arrived, and yet I did not seem to be late. Nobody turned to look at me when I took my place in the congregation, a fact that impressed me as being rather unusual. Everybody seemed to be intent on the message of the man of God.

I could not help feeling that this was no sermon in the ordinary sense of that term. It was a message that had already been delivered to the preacher; and it was coming from a heart deeply stirred by the thoughts he was seeking to transmit to this great company, of which I formed a part.

The sermon was a plea for intercessors. And if the rest of that company felt as I felt they must have felt that it was being specially addressed to them. It seemed to me as if that preacher could see into my very soul, and that he was addressing his message to me just as if I had been the only person present.

Three Links in a Chain.

"Vision, compassion, intercession—these are the three great links in the golden chain of redemptive service. How clearly you can see them in the saving ministry and life service of our Lord Jesus Himself. He saw the multitudes as sheep without a shepherd—scattered, torn, bruised and bleeding—and if that was the vision before His eyes when He looked on a multitude from the quiet religious villages of Galilee, where the people were moral in their habits of life, and not sunken with drink and manifold vice, what would be the vision before Him to-day if He looked upon Montreal, New York, London, or any of our great cities?

"With that vision His heart was moved with compassion, agitated with deep feeling—agonized within Him with the desire for a better world. He had compassion on them, taking their pain and sorrow up into His own heart of love, and with that love-swept spirit He turns to His disciples and says, "Pray ye," and on every possible occasion slips off Himself to the lonely mountain side to spend the night or early morning hours in prayer.

The Master's Vision.

"Beloved, how few of us have the Master's vision, and hence, how few of us have the compassion-filled heart, the consequent ministry of intercession!

"If any one conviction has laid hold of my spirit more than another, and has held it in a grasp as solemn as eternity for some years past, it is that the overwhelming need of the church and the doomed world is intercessors—not so much preachers, however great that need is—but men of the mountain solitude and midnight watch, who know how to stand between God and men, in fasting and prayer; and who will not leave the throne of grace until from His presence will go forth times of refreshing and salvation that will make His name a praise in the earth.

"Then will be given to the church preachers with the tongues of fire, and workers mantled with His power; and the whole awakened spirit-filled church will become the instrument of our glorified Lord in awakening a godless world to the conviction of sin and sense of need of the atoning blood, and to the fear of coming wrath.

Only a Little While.

"A very little while and He will come, and the door will be shut, and the doom of Christendom sealed. Only a brief season can remain for us all. But what may not be done in these quickly passing days! What seasons of prayer and intercession may we not have! What sacrifices for Him may we not make! What power from the throne may we not receive! What scenes of blessing may we not witness in the gathering out of the last members of the mystical body of Christ from this doomed and darkening world, while upon it the night shadows of coming judgment are falling fast!

"Beyond this little while there will be the glory of His presence, the glad re-union with the loved the thrilling "Well done!" of the Master at His judgment seat—the entering in, to go out no more for ever. But—but—there will be no more opportunity of praying lost souls to His feet and winning them to His heart for ever.

"Perishing, perishing Thou wast not willing,
Master, forgive and inspire us anew;
Banish our worldliness, help us forever
To live with eternity's values in view."

A Hush Falls.

As he ceased speaking it seemed to me as if the hush of heaven had fallen upon every heart. There was no inclination, if others felt as I felt, to think the message had been meant for somebody else. I felt it was meant for me. Through human lips, by the vehicle of human speech, God had been pressing home to my heart His thoughts regarding the greatest need within the Christian church.

What does the average church member know about fasting? Absolutely nothing! We prefer taking our ease to exerting ourselves. Self-denial may be a popular theme at conferences during the season of Lent, but it has never become popular enough to get many people to practice it! And the refusal to deny self paves the way for the denial of Christ.

Is It Fair?

If the private prayer life of the average church member were to be judged by the part taken in public prayer when opportunity is presented, then there is very little praying done in private.

It is my belief that when God fails to get the chance to speak to us through His word therein lies the explanation of our failure to speak to Him through prayer. You can no more study the Bible as a devout student of that blessed book and get along without prayer than you can live long without breathing.

Therefore, I repeat, if the failure on the part of so many church members to take part in public prayer be a guide in the matter, the private prayer life of multitudes is at a very low ebb. And I maintain that this is largely due to our neglect of the sacred scriptures.

—Allan Fairbairn.

The Minister Remarks--

—It does not take much of a man to feel that he could put up a good front if he only had the backing.
—The downward path may seem to have many attractions, but it does not take long to discover that it has no rewards.
—The only advice some people will accept is that which is in harmony with their own views.
—You may have thousands of dollars and not be worth a cent.
—Some men and rabbits differ only in the respect that the rabbit starts quicker and runs faster.
—I have noticed that people with no music in their souls often insist on harping about things in general.
—It is interesting to see how many second - class people manage to travel first-class.
—Some people are so vain that they cannot be natural even when they are asleep.

Pythagoreans

THE Pythagoreans were a sort of intellectual and highly cultivated Quakers. The Quakers are a sort of Christians withouh passion and imagination. The formative forces common to both Pythagoreans and Quakers are Order, Love, and Peace.

What Shall The Answer Be?

THE BIBLE is the crux of the whole present-day controversy. Is it the word of God? Has it a right to speak to us commandingly? May it properly exercise authority over the conscience? Are its commandments obligatory? Are its counsels a part of infinite wisdom? Are its facts properly attested. . . . It is enough to say that taken in its entirety the Bible is genuine, authentic, trustworthy; and as a rule of faith and practice, infallible.—"Jesus Christ at the Crossroads." —A. Z. Conrad.

Get Up and Shake Yourself

DO you ever have the feeling that "something terrible is going to happen?" If you do, show your wisdom by getting rid of it as soon as you can. Go out into the fresh air and take a walk. If you cannot do that wash your face in cold water, the colder the better. Perhaps a good book will help you, one with a little bit of laughter in it. Call up some of your friends; or, if you cannot do anything else, get up and shake yourself some way and start over again. It's a tonic you need!

Avoid, as you would avoid a plague, people who worry over every idle hour they have, thinking of the misfortune which may never come. Absent treatment is the best sort of treatment for such folks. To be much in their company, unless you go in the capacity of a doctor with the ability to help them, is to be infected with their peculiar disease. There is trouble enough in actual experience for most of us. But why make yourself miserable till you have reason? It is foolish to use up to-day's strength in wrestling with to-morrow's burden.

Trouble in the future seems greater through perspective, for imagination is a wonderful magnifying glass. Most of us who have worried over our troubles before they arrived have discovered that when the circumstances have confronted us the reality has usually been insignificant.

Make a bold bid for confidence in yourself. Go out to meet and overcome all obstacles. If you do not believe in yourself, your need not be surprised if no one else will. Go ahead on the assumption that everything is going to turn out finely, and see how difficulties will fade away like mist in the sunlight.

Even if the worst comes to the worst it will always be true that as your day is so shall your strength be. —A. F.

Scepticism

IT is difficult to say how much Scepticism or disbelief in the popular theology there may be in a country at any time, the wordly man refraining from uttering his heterodoxy from the fear of maiming his worldy prospects, the spiritual no less reticent from a tender concern not to give pain to his weak brother.

TELL US A STORY

HAVE you heard the story of the faithful dog Bobby? The dog attended his master's funeral at the Greyfriars Churchyard, Edinburgh. There was no stone to mark the place, but for four years Bobby watched over the little mound. He never forgot the spot in which his master was buried. In summer or winter, in rain or in snow, Bobby was there. Though driven from the grave by whipping, he always returned. He loved his master better than himself. He became skin and bone—a tattered, hunger-stricken dog. At last the facts were brought to light by the revenue officers, who visited to levy a tax upon the dog. But there was no one to claim him. His master lay below. Some gave him food, some wished to claim him, but he would not leave the grave. His was a love utterly unselfish. After four years' watching and waiting, the affectionate dog died. And then a monument was erected in the street outside the gate of Greyfriars' Churchyard, to perpetuate the memory of the faithful and self-sacrificing Bobby.

A Pen Picture

A man and a boy are standing beside a group of men who seem to be deeply depressed. The child is silent, but the man speaks, and his words appear deeply impressive. Those whom he addresses look like soldiers who have been defeated, who have fled for refuge to a fortress, have been pursued, and are likely to be captured, so timorous and despairing do they appear.

Their leader is as utterly depressed as are his men; not so the speaker.

When they point hopelessly all around to those things that increase their alarm, he speaks more powerfully than ever, sometimes with entreaty, at other times encouragingly. Then he seems to rise higher than ever in triumphant confidence. He points around, too, to the same things which fill their minds with fear.

We cannot hear his words, but from his gestures as he points upwards they must be something like these: "He has promised to preserve us; greater is He that is on our side than all they that are against us."

The key to the previous Pen Picture of Bible History is to be found in Gal. 2:11, etc.

Not Afraid to Criticise Work of Bruce Barton

REV. T. H. Whelpey has the courage of his convictions, and is not afraid to speak his mind even at the risk of losing some of his popularity. In a raking criticism of Bruce Barton's "The Book Nobody Knows" he says that the author leads "Babbitt Cult" attempt to "Rotarianize" faith.

"For Mr. Barton to advance the theory that 'every one of the principles of modern salesmanship on which business men so prida themselves are brilliantly exemplified in Jesus's talk and work' is an impertinence.

"After reading Mr. Barton's 'The Book Nobody Knows', one cannot escape the conviction that Mr. Barton is one of the 'nobodys.'" —A. F.

IF

If all who hate would love us,
And all our loves were true,
The stars that swing above us
Would brighten in the blue;
If cruel words were kisses,
And every scowl a smile,
A better world than this is
Would hardly be worth while;
If purses would untighten
To meet a brother's need,
The load we bear would lighten
Above the grave of greed.

If those who whine would whistle,
And those who languish laugh,
The rose would rout the thistle,
The grain outrun the chaff;
If hearts were only jolly,
If grieving we forgot
And tears and melancholy
Were things that now are not—
Then love would kneel to Duty,
And all the world would seem
A bridal power of beauty,
A dream within a dream.

If men would cease to worry,
And women cease to sigh,
And all be glad to bury
Whatever has to die—
If neighbor speak to neighbor,
As love demands of all,
The rust would eat the sabre,
The spear stay on the wall;
Then every day would glisten,
And every eye would shine,
And heaven would pause to listen,
And life would be divine.

Unitarian Wants Book Written By Foreigner

MR. SLATTEN, minister of the West Side Unitarian Church, in New York, wants a book of the United States, written preferably by some foreigner and showing certain evils of the national life as Katherine Mayon does for India in "Mother India." He believes that it would be a fine thing for America. "Uncle Sam" might be the title of the book, and it could deal with the slums, coal mining districts, graft, neglect of national parks, and similar evils.

He defended "Mother India" against criticisms that the book gave only a partial picture of India. Miss Mayo's objective, he said, was to picture only public health conditions, not religion or politics, and while she did not give the entire picture, she did give a good idea of the country. —A. F.

BOOKS

THE way to know a country is to walk through it, the way to know a book is to think through it. The process in both cases must be slow, but it is complete, and the results are permanent. A railway traveller touches a country, a pedestrian shakes hands with it, a settler lives in it.

—Prof. Blackie.

The Bible is divine in origin, human in penmanship, eternal in duration, and personal in application. The destructive "critics" remind us of men trying to remove Gibraltar with a ten cent tack hammer.

A SACRIFICE TO SPEED.

It might well be asked, in view of the tragic death of Frank Lockhart, if it is wise to go on trying to push an automobile faster and faster until the limit of the probability of survival is passed.

The famous young American racing driver had his warning some months ago when his car swerved into the ocean at Daytona Beach, and the pilot came within an ace of losing his life.

He chose to disregard the risk, and driving his car to the limit of man's ability to hold a roaring motor to its course, was instantly killed when the speeding machine struck a soft spot in the sand and went out of control.

Lockhart was only twenty-six years of age, a young man of ability, courage and great promise.

Why should such men be sacrificed to speed?

What is to be gained by driving an automobile over 200 miles an hour—a rate of speed that surely will never become of any practical service to humanity?

And yet Lockhart's death will not deter others from trying to spin along a track faster than man has ever gone before while still in contact with the ground.

ALBERTA COAL.

The very reasonable suggestion is offered by J. A. Ellis, fuel controller for Ontario, that the municipalities, school boards and other public bodies in Ontario should try Alberta coal next winter in at least one public building under their control where anthracite has formerly been used.

Undoubtedly such a plan would afford an opportunity to thoroughly test the Alberta fuel under conditions that would enable an intelligent comparison to be made, and the suggestion made by the fuel controller should receive the consideration of municipal bodies throughout the Province.

It is of the greatest importance to this country that so far as possible we should meet our fuel wants within the borders of Canada, and now that the way is open for the transportation into Ontario of Alberta fuel and care is to be taken to ensure coal of excellent quality being sent here, everything possible should be done to open a market for the Western fuel.

At least we should be willing to give the Canadian article a chance to prove that in quality it compares to the fuel we have been bringing over the border, and for which many millions of Canadian money leave this country every year.

BRITISH IMMIGRATION.

The Social Service Council of Canada has urged the desirability of limiting the number of immigrants admitted into Canada each year from the now preferred countries of Europe to a reasonable proportion of the British immigrants admitted during the previous year. Such a resolution from such a body should command serious attention.

The falling off in the number of British immigrants has caused much misgiving among many Canadians, especially as it has been accompanied by the admittance of a larger number of new settlers from other countries.

More population would seem to be essential to Canada, but at the same time we cannot afford to increase too rapidly if the increase continually lowers the percentage of British stock in this country.

Many foreign-born settlers make good Canadians, and we are glad to welcome them, but others are difficult to assimilate, full of communistic doctrines and inclined to live by themselves, and it would be bad business to bring in such immigrants at a rate in excess of the flow of British immigration.

The Social Service Council has suggested a common-sense way of avoiding such a mistake.

THE SAFETY CONFERENCE.

The Highway Safety Committee has called a provincial conference to be held in the Parliament Buildings in Toronto on May 2, to discuss the all-important problem of cutting down the accident toll on Ontario's roads.

Mayors, Chamber of Commerce leaders and the presidents of service and automobile clubs are among those who are being invited to attend, and out of the suggestions that will be brought forward and the discussion that takes place at the conference, it is hoped that some worth-while recommendations will come.

The ever-increasing accident list is a challenge to our intelligence.

The automobile, as a means of quick and comfortable transportation, has brought with its obvious advantage this menace to the safety of the public.

We cannot banish the automobile, it is here to stay, but we can surely learn to use it so that accident hazards will be reduced to a minimum.

So far we have been too busy trying to keep up with the Jones's in the matter of getting possession of a car that will stand comparison with others that we have not given the proper attention to the much more vital question of our responsibility toward the safety of others.

Every citizen worthy of the name should realize the situation and give enthusiastic support to every suggestion that promises to bring about safer traffic conditions.

THE "ROYAL OAK" COURT MARTIAL.

Some rather stolid people in Ottawa expressed sorrow that the Journal should comment facetiously upon the "Royal Oak" court martial at Gibraltar. They thought the British Navy should be sacrosanct. But in England they are evidently not as touchy. The staid London Spectator, after declaring that "all the hubbub of the trial was grotesquely disproportionate to the offences committed," and that "the performance of the Marines' band at a dance, the purple hue of the language which Rear-Admiral Collard is said to have employed about this performance, the use of a Jacob's ladder instead of the accommodation ladder and the question whether the ladder should have been lowered on the starboard or port side—all such small points seemed grotesquely unrelated to the solemnity of a lengthy court martial for which manoeuvres at sea had actually to be postponed," goes on to suggest, as the Journal did, that the incidents might well be set to music.

If admirals were not traditionally allowed some licence in their language—though contrary to all tradition the licence seems to be seldom invoked—there would have been no point in Gilbert's familiar lines:

"Bad language or abuse
I never, never use,
Whatever the emergency;
Though 'Bother it!' I may Occasionally say,
I never use a big, big D."

There was much indeed that would have delighted Gilbert. If anyone had been trying to stage a new H.M.S. 'Pinafore,' or for that matter, to write a new novel in the manner of Marryat, he could not have invented a more satisfactory name than Bandmaster Barnacle, whose righteously indignant evidence revealed to the world the fact that having clung to the navy for seventeen years he at last desired to be detached.

For "the enormous amount of publicity given to the whole affair" the Spectator blames those who, when first there were rumors of "mutiny," demanded: "Why this secrecy? Has not the nation a right to know?"—Ottawa Journal.

FOREIGN-BORN MENACE.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, speaking at the annual dinner of the Ontario Bar Association, gave much food for serious thought when he said that the increasing preponderance of non-British immigration from year to year had brought the population of the Dominion to a state of dilution which, if continued, would augur ill for British ideals and influence predominating in the government of the country. Mr. Meighen stated that only 54 per cent. of the Dominion's population now was of British birth or descent; that in 1921 half the immigration was from Britain, with two-thirds of the remainder from the United States, whereas last year only 34 per cent. was British and of the remainder four times as many came from other foreign lands as from the United States.

These figures should give pause to every man who wants to see this country remain British, an integral part of the Empire. If the foreign-born influx continues to exceed those having Anglo-Saxon tendencies, whether they come from Britain or the States, it will not be very long before the tail begins to wag the British lion.

That was rather a startling statement of the former Premier's in which he declared that there was not a Federal constituency between Lake Superior and the Rockies in which the so-called foreign vote, owing to the party divisions, did not govern. This means that this foreign vote is the deciding factor in an election, and that the parties will truckle to this vote. If this truckling would end with the election it wouldn't be so bad. But it continues between elections, with the result that the policies of the parties, with the continual growth of the foreign vote, will become less pronouncedly British.

As an accompaniment to Mr. Meighen's speech comes the report that there are school trustees in Saskatchewan who cannot read or write English. It seems that the schools acts of the three Provinces merely recite that a trustees shall be able to read and write, without mentioning the word "English." In Manitoba certain patriotic societies have been aroused over this omission and if the higher court sustains a recent judgment of a lower court that a school trustee may qualify regardless of whether he or she can speak or read English, the Legislature will be asked to amend the School Act to insert, where it provides that "school trustees must be able to read and write," the word "English."

It seems to us that such an amendment is in order if the English language is to predominate on the prairies, for how can a trustee board, some members of which cannot speak or write English, be expected to encourage teaching of that language?

The increasing preponderance of non-British among Canada's immigration is something that calls for the most careful thought. How to counteract it should be the aim of every true British Conservative, Liberal or Progressive. All parties should unite to find a solution. It is too menacing to become a party question. A conference of the best minds of all parties might well be called to deal with the matter.

Canada, of course, needs population, and we do not think the time has yet arrived for immigration quotas such as prevail in the United States. The foreigners must continue to come, but special care should be exercised to attract those people who can best be assimilated. And when they arrive, every pain should be taken to instill into their minds British ideals.

But while the foreigner cannot be barred, redoubled efforts should be made to secure the British-born. Family settlement should be given an increased impetus, and where one dollar is spent to get foreign immigrants, ten should be spent to get those from the British Isles.

And while seeking British-born settlers to the fullest possible extent, an intensive campaign should be waged incessantly to keep Canadians at home and to repatriate those who have gone to other countries. True Canadians, after all, are the best British-born, and herculean efforts should be made to hold those we have.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Exclusive Body Features

Confined to Hudson Cars

A new and interesting development—said to improve both appearance and performance—is announced in the 1928 Hudson Super-Six de luxe models, now on display by Brewer Motor Sales, Hudson-Essex distributor. This step forward centers around a feature of design which hitherto has not been greatly noticed by body engineers—the doors.

'For this series of de luxe cars, Hudson designers went after three major points," said Mr. Brewer. "First the doors should be permanently silent; second, they should assist a distinctive and modish appearance; third, they should be staunch and weather-tight.

"The usual idea of an automobile door," said Mr. Brewer, "has been to build it heavy and strong and to fit it closely and snugly to the body—the closer, the better. But in these bodies another line of thought altogether is followed. The lower half of each door is of standard design—heavily constructed and fitting tightly—but above the felt line the structure consists only of a strong but slender steel frame to hold the window glass in place.

"The doors close against a hollow, springy rubber tubing, with no metal-to-metal contact whatever. A quarter-inch clearance is maintained between the outer edges of the door and the door jambs. The door is thus literally insulated from the body, let a tight and permanent joint is assured. The whole summed-up result is individuality and distinction of appearance, permanent silence, and better visibility. Similar designs have been used in custom cars costing from $5,000 to $7,000, but Hudson is the first standard marker to adopt the idea.

"Another distinctive item in these models is the use of aluminum body panels instead of the customary sheet steel. This saves the weight of one or two passengers in each body, making the cars more economical to drive and 5 to 10 miles an hour faster. Aluminum is more expensive than steel, but expense has not been spared in these de luxe cars.

"There are three cars in th Hudson line which embody these improvements—the Victoria, Landau Sedan, and Family-sized or 7-Passenger Sedan. All these bodies are manufactured in New England by one of the industry's best known de luxe builders. Hudson buys the plant's whole output. Brewer Motor Sales, 131-135 Brock street. (Adv.)

hundred odd miles of front line."

Encountered Weakness.

"Testing" is a proper term, Sir Arthus said, and also a proper tactic. The Canadians tested the line and encountered weakness at the railway station of Mons.

Sir Sam Hughes, Currie stated, made his speech March 10th, 1919, in the House of Commons. Col. Peck, V.C. replied. Peck was a gallant fighter who went through the entire war.. He had entered the present action because these men were the first to print the article and he had seen the affair was not going to die. He did not want money. He merely wanted to vindicate himself.

Col. Walter Gow, Toronto, barrister, ex-Deputy Minister at Corps Headquarters, entered the box when Gen. Currie vacated it at 10.50. He said he had held an official position overseas and had entered Mons in company with General Morrison after the signing of the armistice. He saw some dead German soldiers.

Mr. Tilley required only four minutes to question the witness. Mr. Regan continued the examination. To Mr. Regan witness stated he had seen four dead Germans on the Mons-Mauberge road. If they did not die of disease they were killed. The latter was the more likely. It was quite possible for these men to be killed by a bullet or shell. The bodies lay on a "broad, open road." It was a fair assumption, said the witness, to assume that the men had been killed by Canadian soldiers, in the broadest sense of the word.

He had heard rumors of an armistice before it came into effect, but these certainly came from no official sources, merely in ordinary conversation on the street. Reading from an article by Major General Morrison, Col. Gow would only agree with certain parts of it.

Sir Richard Turner, V.C.

General Sir Richard Turner, V.C., D.S.O., K.C.B., K.C.M.G., of Canadian General Headquarters, London; was called by Mr. Tilley immediately after the morning court recess at 11.30. He stated that he had a V.C. obtained in the South African war. "Any man who had a military reputation like General Currie's would be envied," he said.

Regarding Gen. Currie's action in keeping pressure on the Germans after he knew the armistice was to come into effect, Sir Richard Turner agreed that this was quite proper and was the only way to carry on. Sir Richard said he spoke after considerable experience in several places fighting rearguard actions.

Regarding the suggested method of capturing Mons by a flanking movement, Sir Richard would not express an opinion. He was not in a position to express an expert military opinion.

Mr. Regan began his examination by asking Sir Richard if he were acquainted with certain generals, including General Horne. In spite of the millions of casualties in the British Expeditionary Force during the war, Sir Richard declared the pressure should be maintained till the armistice became effective. "I am a fighter. I believe in fighting till the last minute," said Sir Richard.

Mr. Regan—"Do you agree in principle that at the last hour the troops should have been sent to attack a wood infested with machine guns?"

Sir Richard—"You will have to speak louder, I am a little deaf."

Mr. Regan repeated his question, but Sir Richard would not express an opinion on anything he had not seen.

General McBrien.

Major-General James McBrine, former chief of staff of the Canadian Corps, was then called. Witness said he knew General Currie, and that his reputation is of the highest order.

Mr. Tilley—"Was it unusual for a corps to be transferred from one army to another? Some mention of this has been made in this court."

Gen. McBrien—"Not at all. Troops were sent where they were required by the higher command. An order made public in a book of General Foch was objected to by Regan on the ground that the bench had ruled out certain similar publications when he had tried to bring them into the evidence. His Lordship, after considerable consideration, said he thought the book might be admitted, but Mr. Tilley said he would not press the matter since he had a certified copy of the order from Marshal Foch which the book contained. It was a certified true copy obtained from the United States Government Secretary of War. There was no copy at Ottawa. This was the reason Mr. Tilley advanced for sending to the United States for a copy.

Mr. Tilley—"If my friend objects to the document, I will not put it in. I will rely on General Currie's evidence."

Mr. Regan—"Does the word 'pressure' appear in that order?"

General McBrien—"The—"

Mr. Regan—"Yes or no."

A.—"I won't answer yes or no."

Q.—"Then don't answer at all. Close the book."

A.—"I won't close it."

Mr. Regan—"Close the book."

Then occurred the book-shaking episode.

Mr. Tilley asked the witness to read part of the order. Then Mr. Regan claimed the right to examine the witness on the entire contents of the document, and proceeded to do so. In the evidence which followed it developed that fighting had continued on the American front after the hour of 11 a.m. on November 11, 1918.

Lieut.-Col. Lorne T. McLaughlin, D.S.O. with bar, a farmer in Tyrone, Durham County, next called, said he was the officer commanding the 2nd Canadian Infantry Battalion at the end of the war. He described General Sir Arthur Currie's reputation as a most invincible one. He had met him on many occasions.

Bodies Brought to Mons.

Rev. George Kilpatrick, Ottawa, who was chaplain in the Canadian Corps, and who had gone into Mons on the morning of November 11, said he saw dead men on the road to Mons, two of which were Canadians. These men were not in the position of men who had fallen, but they were "laid out" and so covered with flowers that it was impossible for him to identify the regimental markings on the uniforms. He officiated at the funeral, which he described.

"That is the evidence for the plaintiff," said W. N. Tilley, K.C., at 12.45 p.m.

At 12.50 the Court adjourned till 1.30 p.m. on Monday, April 30.

Voice of the People

The Editor,
The Peterborough Examiner
Dear Sir:

In the issue of April 21, under the heading "Chips and Shavings" an article evidently written in an attempt to cover up or excuse a previous effort, contains several reference to Christian Science which are distinctly erroneous and misleading. In submitting a brief correction, all reference to the writer of a former corrective letter will be ignored as wholly irrelevant. I would like, however, to assure all who may have been misinformed, including A. F. and his friend John Plane, (if there is such a person) that Christian Scientists do not lack a keen sense of humor, as was suggested, but fortunately they are able to differentiate between real humor and utter nonsense. Furthermore, they do not consider it humorous or even courteous to attempt to ridicule the beliefs, held sacred by others. The towering intellectual ability of the writer of the article objected to is not disputed or even under consideration, and we have no desire or intention to argue or condemn other than may be necessary to correct the false impressions disseminated relative to the teaching of Christian Science.

In the article referred to, quotations from a book by John T. Stone were presented to support an uncalled for and unnecessary attack on Christian Science. This book possibly presents a fairly accurate account of the author's misconceptions of Christian Science, but certainly not the truth. For instance, the theory of "mind over matter" is advanced as the supposed basis of Christian Science healing; and magnetism, mesmerism, hypnotism, etc., are included in the same category. Christian Science and these other mentioned beliefs are as far apart as the poles. Christian Science does not place reliance on, or concede power to, the mortal or carnal mind, which forms the basis for mesmerism, hypnotism, etc. In Christian Science, mind, used as a synonym for God, is the healing power recognized, and not the mortal or carnal mind which Paul refers to in the Bible as "enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."

Quoting further from the same book: "But this much is true, that this new system which denies the personality of God, the reality of sin and the atonement, may call itself Christian, but it is an infringement on the patent. I think C. S. neither Christian nor scientific." The latter statement has become so time-worn and hackneyed as to require but little attention. Webster defines Christian in part as, "pertaining to Christ or his religion." Christian Science is founded particularly on the teachings of Christ Jesus, and is Christian in the fullest meaning of the word. Science is defined in part as "knowledge; or knowledge of principles or facts." In this instance, the science or knowledge of Christ and the fact about God and His universe. Consequently, Christian Science is, strictly speaking, both Christian and scientific and the name correctly and aptly applied. This being a positive fact, no amount of negative criticism or human opinion can ever alter the truth.

Regarding the supposed denial of the personality of God. It is true Christian Science does not accept the unbelievable theory of a finite corporeal person as God. Who is everywhere present; but it persistently affirms the infinite individuality of God, and understands and honors Him as absolutely supreme.

Denial of the reality of sin is a fact perhaps much misunderstood. We accept, unreservedly, the fact that God is the only creator, and that He created all, "and God saw everything that he had made, and behold it was very good." This excludes the acceptance of evil as any part of God's creation without dishonoring God. However, Christian Science does not lose sight of the fact that all wrong thinking is sin, and that a belief in the reality of evil forms a large part of human experience; also that such false belief seems very real while entertained and believed, as does any lie, and is the cause of considerable bondage until corrected and destroyed by truth. Hence the force of Jesus' promise, "ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The supposed denial of the atonement is clearly refuted by the following tenet of Christian Science, from Science and Health with key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy, "We acknowledge Jesus' atonement as the evidence of divine efficacious Love, unfolding man's unity with God through Christ Jesus the Wayshower; and we acknowledge that man is saved through Christ, through Truth, Life, and Love, as demonstrated by the Galilean Prophet in healing the sick and overcoming sin and death" (p. 497).

The statement that "their whole system breaks down at death" is amusingly absurd. Christ Jesus very clearly established the fact regarding the eternality of life, and yet Christ's Christianity did not break down because the twelve disciples passed on.

It is difficult to understand the motive behind an attack on Christian Science as no one is asked to accept its teachings unless perfectly willing to do so. No other man's religious belief is interfered with, and the Christian Scientist naturally claims and expects the same courtesy and religious freedom. Might I be permitted to suggest that the articles appearing under "Chips and Shavings" will be greatly improved, and will tend to beneficial accomplishments, when the temptation to destructively criticize is superceded by real brotherly love, a lack of which according to Scripture I. John 4: 8, denotes an ignorance of God.

GOD'S MINUTE

Let the people praise Thee, O God.—Ps. 67:3.

Blessed God, this day uphold us by Thy gracious omnipotent Hand. Give to us whatever measure of blessing seems best in Thy sight, and if disappointment or difficulty of any kind awaits us, help us to brace ourselves and play the part of a man, and causes us not to forget that our sorest trials are oftentimes blessings in disguise. So may we always give thanks, being persuaded that if we love Thee, all things work together for our good.

Give us at all times holy ideals, O God, and may our daily endeavor be commensurate with them. That which is dark within us, do Thou illumine by Thy Holy Spirit, and cleanse us from all unrighteousness. May we be truly penitent for our sins, and may we be strengthened with might in the inner man to do Thy blessed will. Let not this day's low descending sun be unprivileged to shine upon some small deed of kindness done, or some spoken word of Christian love. May those with whom we walk and commune along life's way take knowledge that we have been with Jesus Christ, and may this day's life and every other day which in Thy goodness Thou are yet to vouchsafe unto us, make us increasingly fit for the endless and the perfect day through which we are to live in Thy presence.

For Christ's sake. Amen.

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

CHAPTER XXIX.

Catching and Tagging the Wild Goose.

This was a proposition that tested my staying qualities to a standstill, although it is true I had tagged lots of smaller birds, including the wild ducks; but that was like coaxing candy from a baby, too easy to be interesting.

Yes, some one has said, "the silly old goose!" But bear in mind that it is through this silly old goose's ability to outwit the human race that there is one living; we would have killed and eaten them all, long ago, but they outwitted us and went over the top. So if they are silly, what is our number, if you please?

Well, silly or not, it took my little, single-cylinder brain over seven years to outwit them. Actually I studied them more than I did my financial obligations, and that's saying a whole lot. Very true, they will allow me to walk among them, and odd, wounded ones have eaten from my hand. But don't hold him, or interfere with his liberties, as one note from his beak will alarm all the geese within a mile.

In November, 1919, there were fifty-five ducks feeding here and when I pulled the trip-wire I caught fifty of them; but the "silly old goose" would walk by and say "A-h-h! A-h-h!" and my family would say "Ha! Ha!" The variety of contrivances I made during these seven years! And the blisters there were on my hands during that time, caused from cutting and fitting gas-pipe frames and trap-doors and stretching poultry netting over the same, are blisters I will long remember. Then to see the geese come, glance at it and walk away, would make any human being feel small enough to pass a ferret in a gun-barrel. In fact this got to be a family joke. Little Jasper said, "Papa, how many goose nets are you going to make this summer?" Yes, I am a firm believer in the words, "Let man have dominion over all," but in this case I have surely been a poor actor.

At last a thought germinated that proved a success. I dug a canal forty feet wide and sixty feet long between two ponds. This canal was made at the mouth of the drain tile that supplies the ponds with spring water, the last water to freeze and the first to thaw out. A high gas-pipe frame was built to cover the whole canal, with a trap-door at each end. This was neatly covered with two-inch-mesh poultry netting, stretched good and tight to prevent it bagging and flapping in the wind. The trapdoors were left constantly up, and our domesticated geese were educated to winter under this, in the open water at the mouth of this drain tile. This contrivance is at the north ponds, where the geese remain quite wild.

It was completed in December, 1921, and March, 1922, found me away from home on a lecturing tour. When I opened a letter from my boy saying, "Father, your goose-net is a success; we saw fully twenty-five follow ours under, this morning," can you really blame me for reading it twice?

In a week or so I arrived home, and was greeted with these cheering words, "Father, there were dozens of geese feeding under the net last night. We are feeding shelled corn and wheat under there, and the wild geese go under without ours leading the way." Early the next morning I was up and dressed, and quite excited, for I was up in the little "oblookatory" long before the geese arrived from the lake; but sure enough, when they came fully forty went under to feed. And they were just as good as caught, for my previous experiments have taught me how to make a trap-door that works to perfection. Just picture, if possible, the way I was stepping around! Here I had been seven years catching one hundred and nine geese, and no two bunches were caught alike; in other words, every catch was an experimental failure! But now I am going to catch them by the hundreds. Yet I must not pull the trap-doors while the big flock is here, to frighten them all.

On April 21st fully eighty per cent. of them had gone north. Sunday morning, April 22nd, only about three hundred were here, and it was now or never, for that spring.

I climbed up and watched them while Dr. Rob Sloan, of Leamington, who is one of my greatest helpers, stood below to pull the trip-wire. The opportunity arrived. I signalled the doctor, the trap-door dropped in the twinkling of an eye—and sixty-one missionaries were in captivity!

In catching the sixty-one we found a pair tagged in 1917; two others had had their legs broken but were healed straight.

Well, now the big flock is gone, and they know nothing of this disturbance, so now I will enlarge on this successful plan, I thought. So in the summer of 1922 I completed my big net having over 5,000 feet of area in it. One trap-door is one hundred and twenty feet long, one eighty feet, and another forty feet; all three are dropped by the one trip-wire.

Even if I ahd the time I could not give you a detailed explanation of how my goose-trap, trip, and trap-doors, and so forth, are arranged. But if you want to catch wild geese for tagging purposes (and I hope you do) come to my home the first fifteen days in July, when the pond is dry, and get my plans, which have proved to be a success; then you can go home and add to them.

That fall, 1922, about 300 geese came back, but there was not much water as the spring was very low. Yet on December 5th I caught fifty-three, and on Saturday, April 21st, 1923, I caught two hundred and seven. Some catch! "Let man have dominion over all." Now I have caught three hundred and twenty-one in one year.

While watching these last two hundred and seven gradually working their way under the net, my field glasses showed eleven standing on the bank with bright aluminum tags on, but not a goose in the two hundred and seven had been tagged before. In other words, I have never caught a goose twice in the same net. "Silly old goose!"

Mind you, it is a job to tag two hundred and seven wild geese! And I had only one hundred and twenty tags made. When we got these all on, Dr. Sloan wiped the perspiration off his face with his goosey hands and said, "Jack, let's let the rest of the bunch go without any religion."

It will be plainly seen that we haven't had time to hear from many of the three hundred and twenty-one that were caught during the last year or so; but out of the one hundred and nine that I caught between 1915 and 1921, sixty-two have been reported killed, and forty-nine of the tags are back in my possession, thirty-six reported at Hudson Bay; one from Hamilton Inlet, Labrador; fourteen from North Carolina; two from Maryland; one from New Jersey; four from Virginia; one from Illinois; one from Indiana; and one from the Ottawa River, thirty miles north of Montreal, Quebec.

CHAPTER XXX.

Game Protection.

This, a sportsmen's problem, may appear to you as being entirely out of place in a book like this; yet I want you to read, for I feel fully qualified to discuss this matter in a conscientious, fair and square, look-you-in-the-face manner, as I have the itching of my own trigger-finger fairly well harnessed, and have no desire to shoot any bird other than the cannibals; but on the other hand my boy, Ted, who is twenty-three years of age, and for whom I would willingly lie down and give up the ghost if it were actually necessary, likes to shoot, and I sometimes think he is as crazy for a gun as I once was but that seems impossible.

Nearly twenty years ago I organized the South Essex County Game Protective Association, which, by the way, now has advanced into the hands of some of the best and most self-sacrificing sportsmen this earth can produce. And let me say right here that they have stood, and are still standing, right behind me, backing me up in every just undertaking. If every county had an association of the same material the question would all be solved, for when these men asked our Dominion Government to proclaim a bird sanctuary around Jack Miner's home, in less than three months no shooting was allowed within a mile of my house, and the game warden came and declared it a Crown Lands' Bird Sanctuary.

To be sure, I have tasted the insults one experiences when he changes from a pull-down to a builder. An insulting doctor once said to me, as he stood in the safety zone and shook his fists at my red face, "Jack, you are just like old Uncle Joe; when he used to dance he wanted everybody to dance, but when he got religion he wanted everybody to pray."

Now the first thing to consider is that over ninety per cent. of the people in America don't want to shoot. They want to see the birds alive. They take nothing from the shooter, but the shooter takes all from them. Which should control, the ninety per cent. or the ten? I say there can be pleasure for both, if properly managed; but the shooter must be considered last, for the fall of one bird out of the air from his deadly aim gives pleasure to one only, while thousands are deprived of the thrilling enjoyment of seeing that bird alive. God says, "In any wise let the mother go and take the young to thee;" yet some of our people want to shoot the mother before she lays the eggs to hatch the young that He says we can have. Yes, a man may be a good, shrewd business fellow, but when he gets a gun in his hands he appears to lose a little self-control and does not expose enough brains to give him a headache.

Government game wardens are usually a bunch of men appointed by pull and favor, and don't know a bit more about game protection than I know about the price of pork grease in Jerusalem. If called by its right name it would be "political protection," and I don't have to lie to tell the truth about it. However the less said the better, and it is of no use to us to look back at the past. We must remember Lot's wife stopped and looked back, and she turned into a pillar of salt; Pat's wife stopped and looked back, first over one shoulder and then over the other, and she turned into a beer saloon.

Personally I don't like to hear to hear any one complain unless he has a carefully thought out suggestion for improvements. Therefore I will proceed to give you my plan, which is based on twenty years intense interest and careful study.

First of all, every county in America should organize a real live, wild-life conserving association.

Delegates from each county should meet in annual State or Provincial convention with our Parliament members present to hear the discussion.

Appoint our game keepers by right, and not by favor.

Compel them to give an itemized account of every day's proceedings.

During the spring and early fall months let them go to the schools and give half-hour talks to the rising generation on the value and enjoyments of our out-of-door life. During the winter months this same game keeper could often take a bunch of school boys with him as he goes on his visits, carrying feed, and building shelters for the birds in time of need. This would prevent a game keeper from having to make an eagle out of a gnat fly in order to hold his job. Yes, the fellow who dissected the baby hawks crop and found it contained crickets and grasshoppers he could attend such a convention and demand the privilege of airing his views; but hawks and owls that live in Canada during the months of December, January and February do not live on grasshoppers during those months, therefore such questions might open up something higher than a grasshopper discussion.

Every gun should be licensed high enough to pay all expenditures, but no State or Province in America should be allowed over one month's open season on migratory birds until they are more plentiful.

No person or persons should be allowed to feed artificial grain to birds for the sole purpose of slaughtering them. This would encourage the replanting of more natural duck and goose foods, and make our marshes more productive.

The bag limit should be kept down. Not that this bag limit law is easily enforced, but for the steady education that it is wrong and unsportsmanlike to slaughter. Any man who wants to shoot more than five ducks in a day, or twenty-five in a season, is not considerate of the other fellow's North American rights and privileges.

But the whole proposition is hinged on better education, and when the people of this continent wake up and find out that good, sensible game protection pays two hundred per cent. annual dividends, then we won't lie back and yawn and say it is no use trying.

As proof that I know what I am writing about, I call your attention to my own success, that you are compelled to believe. Now if one man, with limited means and no natural advantages, but backed up by good neighbors, can do what has been done here, what can the wealth and effort of one hundred and twenty-five millions of people do with our natural advantages?

Yes, I have demonstrated that the sanctuary plan is a sure preventive of extermination. With plenty of such places where neither rich nor poor dare molest them, bird lovers can have first choice and the shooters the overflow. We can have more tagging stations to enable us to trace the birds of different localities, as I have done here. We can organize an international bird-lovers' association. In fact, we can have anything that will lead to deeper interest and more education as to the value and enjoyment of our birds. Personally I have more confidence in a thimbleful of education that I have in a barrelful of bayonet-point compulsion.

"Self-Denial Week"

When outstanding men, men whose integrity is unquestionable, men whose vision is farseeing, and international in its scope, express such opinions as the above - "There must be good in the Army" - If you could only grasp the stupendous work of this great world-wide organization you would be astounded - all day - every day this Army of Salvation is giving and doing something for some unfortunate. At this period The Army is entering on its campaign of "Self-Denial." Will you deny yourself, too, and help the cause?

Donations may be sent to Lieut.-Commissioner Maxwell, 20 Albert Street, Toronto, or to the Local Corps Commander of your own town.

Anticipation . .

. . . . a safe, even traction surface . . . relaxed driving . . . . luxurious riding . . . . reduced gas consumption . . . . less wear and tear on tires and car . . . .

that is what the motorist smilingly anticipates when a long, smooth stretch of permanent concrete paving beckons through his windshield.

Mile on mile of this modern paving is laid each year. And the demand is for still more miles . . . . from the motorist, because of its safety, comfort and saving; . . . from the taxpayer, because its permanence assures freedom from costly upkeep.

See that your community gets the most out of every paving dollar spent. Advocate concrete. Each mile thus paved is paved for good.

"It's the little it costs to maintain that makes concrete paving economical."

PASSION PLAY VIEWS SHOWN

Rev. Father Garvey Gives Lectures Under Auspices of C.W.L.

EXPLAINS PICTURES

Pictures of the Passion Play at Oberammergau were presented at St. Alphonsus Lyceum yesterday afternoon and evening by Rev. Father Garvey of Lakefield, under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League. Rev. Father Garvey, who witnessed the production of the Sacred Play on one occasion, was assisted by Gerald McClelland, who operated the projection machine.

A very graphic and real picturization of the Passion and Death of Christ is afforded by these beautiful colored pictures, the story being outlined by Rev. Father Garvey as the action progressed. Views of the little Bavarian village in the Alps were shown in introduction, also close-up views of various actors in the Tragedy; Anton Lang, who takes the part of Christ, Judas, King Herod and Caiphas, the High Priest.

The story of the Passion tells in pictures the tale of the scouring of the money-changers from the temple, the act of Christ which determined the Jews in their project of getting rid of Him; the visit at Simon's house and the anointing of Christ by Mary Magdalene; the farewell to Mary, His mother; the Last Supper; the bargain of Judas with the Sanhedrim; the betrayal with the kiss; Annas and Herod and Pilate; the scouring and crowning with thorns and the sorrowful journey with the cross to Golgotha. Later, come the scenes of the resurrection and the ascension into heaven. In the play, as presented at Oberammergau, tableaux illustrative of Old Testament prophecies precede the showing of the scenes as they actually took place during the Passion.

Mrs John Lynch, president of the League, Mrs. Frank Lynch and Miss Norah Shevlin, assisted with the presentation at both performances yesterday. Frank Fairen also assisted at the door.

The afternoon production was for children and was attended by a large number of pupils from the Separate schools.

Automobile Emblems Are Significant, Each Line Carries Its Coat-of-Arms

Victory Six's New Radiator Emblem.

Automotive manufacturers devote considerable attentjon nowadays putting what amounts to a coat of arms on their products in the form of emblems. Dodge Brothers recently designed a distinctive and artistic radiator emblem for the new Victory Six. It is a winged shield, in the upper right hand corner of which is an oak tree on a red background, signifying that the car is as sturdy as an oak. In the upper left hand corner, shining from a field of glossy black enamel is a bolt of lightning, symbol of speed. Beneath these is a horizontal panel extending across the face of the shield carrying the name "Dodge", the letters of which are dark blue enamel with French Gray outline and nickeled edges on a white background. The bottom of the shield is blue surmounted by a large white numeral "6".

The conventional design of lightning and the oak tree are executed in white metal. Oxidized nickel is used in the wings. Borders of the design are in French Gray, which blends very nicely with the other colors.

WAS SO NERVOUS and SHORT OF BREATH COULD HARDLY SLEEP

Mrs. Louise Raglin, Golden Lake, Ont., writes:—"For several years I was greatly troubled with my heart. I was so nervous and short of breath I could hardly sleep at night, and if I did sleep for a while I had bad dreams.

"I managed to keep at my work, somehow, until I began to have dizzy spells which got so bad I had to give up. I used many kinds of medicine, but found no help until I got a box of MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS. After the first box I found a great change, and after two boxes I was as well as I could be.

"I told my mother, who had choking sensations, about them and they helped her greatly."

ALTERED HEREDITY OF FLIES BY X-RAY

Scientist Suggests Cosmic Rays May Shift Course of Nature.

WASHINGTON, April 26. — A suggestion that the powerful cosmic rays, sometimes called the Millikan rays, and the rays from radio-active substance, have played some part in bringing about revolutionary changes was made yesterday to the National Academy of Sciences by Dr. H. J. Muller, of the University of Texas.

His experiments showed heredity to be profoundly altered by the X-ray under certain conditions. What he accomplished in the laboratory by means of the X-ray might be caused in nature by the cosmic rays, which come from distance space, or by the radium rays which are everywhere present in some degree on the earth's surface.

For the purpose of his studies Dr. Muller used fruit flies whose pedigrees and hereditary characteristics were known for many generations back. Subjecting them to severe X-ray treatment, he found that a great variety of changes appeared in their offspring—in the shape and color of their eyes, in the size and shape of their wings, in their hair antennae, and in their general structure.

The X-rays were discovered to have directed effects on the germ cells within these germ cells. Within these germ cells are the sets of chromosomes or sets of small colored bodies, which contain the "genes" 'or the hereditary characteristics which are later to develop.

X-Ray Upsets Nature's Plans.

These "genes" which bear the same relation to the creature that plans and specifications do to a building, are arranged in a regular order, as in a filing system, in the chromosomes. Dr. Muller found that the X-rays sometimes broke the chromosomes in two; that the broken section wandered away and joined another chromosome. This disarranged nature's plans and specifications for the building of the individual. The specimens, which had their constitutions disordered before birth by the X-rays, grew up with a great variety of abnormalities.

The place which each hereditary unit or "gene" occupied in the order of arrangement had been surmised on previous evidence. The X-ray experiments confirmed in detail the previously worked out map or index of the hereditary units. They indicated also that each "gene" was a single big molecule.

In other words each one of a series of large and complicated molecules contained one part of the personality or individuality which was to be unfolded later as the creature grew up. The X-rays thus caused a shuffling up of the preliminary arrangements for the future organism. Dr. Muller reported that others had found that radium rays produced a similar scrambling of the hereditary units.

Dr. Muller tried lead arsenic and other poisons in amounts less than fatal doses to discover whether these would result in any rearrangements of the "genes" and in the production of abnormal offspring. Continuous poisoning, however, failed to achieve such a change. Dr. Muller reported that the cosmic rays and the radium rays were as far as he knew the only things occurring in nature which might disrupt the chromosomes and thus disturb the plan fixed by nature for the individual.

Says Brain Remains Mystery.

Some of the changes brought about by the X-ray remained fixed, that is, they occurred in generation after generation. The exact location of ninety-three of the heredity-carrying molecules has been found, according to Dr. Muller.

Dr. Henry H. Donaldson of the Wistaria Institute of Anatomy and Biology reporting on a study of the brains of three scholars, Sir William Osler, G. Stanley Hall and Edward S. Morse, gave the opinion that the pattern of the convolutions did not mean anything. The theory that a capable and highly developed intellect would make its physical mark on the brain which it inhabited does not hold good, according to Dr. Donaldson.

In his opinion, the brain, as it appears to the eye and to the microscope, is a crude machine; the subtle things which make it what it is, the individual chemistry of the tissue the contacts between the fine nerve cells and the blood must necessarily go unobserved. Regarding these subtler things, he said:

"Herein lie the power, control and regulation of the brain; and all these conditions are unknown, thus leaving us only the crude machine without its finer parts. In their fundamental structure human brains are remarkably alike and the variations in the convolutions are incidental."

Many Pretty Articles Offered By Ladies' Guild of All Saints'.

DECORATIONS ATTRACTIVE.

Pink blossoms twining themselves over green trellises form a very attractive setting for the Blossom-Time sale which is taking place in the parish hall of All Saints Church today. The sale, which opened yesterday, offers a variety of pretty and useful things, in fancy work, pillow cases, embroidered bedspreads, towels, fancy aprons, children's clothing and quilts, also ice cream, candy and home-made cooking and service of afternoon tea in a separate section at the end of the hall, where little tables centred with cut flowers are placed.

The booths are decorated with a profusion of pretty artificial apple and cherry blossoms in bright pink shades, with pussy-willows at several of the sections. A Christmas tree festooned with pink streamers acts as a fish pond, and there is a little well for the sale of ice cream. Candy is sold in dainty, frilly pink baskets.

The sale is under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the church, of which Mrs. P. D. Fitzgerald is president. Mrs. N. H. Sutton is general convenor of arrangements.

Ladies in charge of the various booths are Mrs John Davidson (embroidered articles); Mesdames T. Sabin, C. Curtis, E. L. Goodley, R. Henderson, J. Young (children's dresses, aprons, spreads), and Mesdames B. Ottewell, C. J. Beauclerc, W. Kay, R. J. Wolstenholme (candy). The Senior Ladies' Bible Class of which Mrs. John Elliott is president, have a booth for the sale of miscellaneous articles, in charge of Mrs. Roy Price and Mrs. G. Hillied, and the Brownton Ladies' Guild, with Mrs. J. Black as president, sells babies' wear and embroidered pieces, in charge of Mrs. G. Hutchinson and Mrs. W. Thompson.

Mrs. Ted Burnham and Mrs. James Price have the sale of ice cream: Mrs. A. Haskill and Mrs. A. Milne are in charge of the fish pond, and the tea room is looked after by Mrs. P. Fuller and Mrs. F. Deicher. Mrs. E. Beatty pours tea, assisted by Mesdames A. Clysdale, E. Dillon, A. Kimmell, G. Worboy, F. Holmes, D. McLeod.

A sale of delicious home-made cooking is in charge of Mesdames I. Dobbin, B. Burns, G. Benor, and a Talent Booth offering for sale articles made by the members during the Lenten season is supervised by Mesdames F. Roberts, J. Crowe, W. Seamon.

DISTINCTIVE SPIRIT IN CANADIAN WEST

Author Says Canada's Attitude to Life is Seeking Utterance to World.

TORONTO, April 28 (Canadian Press).—That there is a distinctive Canadian spirit demanding expression is the firm belief of Fredrick Philip Grove, world traveller and author, who addressed the Canadian Club here recently on "Canada, the Spiritual Awakening of an Individual." Mr. Grove drew upon his experiences for his subject, and he expressed confidence that there was a specific Canadian attitude to life, to the world, to the universe, to God, which demanded utterance. Only by giving this utterance, he said, could Canadians make the cultured, well-educated people of Europe, Asia or Africa realize what they were, and only by giving it utterance could the voice of the Dominion resound through the centuries.

Mr. Grove's experience in Western Canada included teaching a school on the prairie attended by foreign-born settlers. Later he received an appointmant as principal of a high school in Winnipeg.

Mr. Grove said: "In our Canadian West I have seen old men and women bending over frayed copies of the Bible and other cherished books, lips moving, their fingers holding the line, spelling out sentences that seemed to express what they felt. And in their eyes I have seen something new; something I have never seen in the eyes of European peasants. I do not know what it is a sort of hopefulness. I sometimes ask myself whether it was bred by our wider spaces along our coastlines, our higher mountains, crisper air or something material; and sometimes I think it is bred by the fact that after all it is one of the fundamental desires of man to own the soil on which he stands, and land ownership was beyond their reach in Europe. That Canada has given them, and thereby freed their spirits."

JOHN WESTLAKE LEASES RESORT

Catchacoma Tourist Lodge Will Be Conducted By American Lady.

CATCHACOMA NEWS.

CATCHACOMA, April 28. — John Westlake, who has not been in his usual health of late, has leased "Westlake's" to Mrs. Lehner for the summer, keeping, however, the mail route under his supervision. Mrs. Lehner comes from the U. S. and is experienced in tourist business. She will run the camping ground, bathing beach and boat livery in connection with the inn itself, where meals can always be procured.

Hugh Cochrane has been up and is rounding his beautiful place into shape for a big business.

The roads have been much improved by the recent hard frosts and are drying up nicely, several trucks having gone through to Pearson's and also to Windover's.

Mrs. Richardson has sent word from Buffalo that she may be along any day to open up her pretty cottage.

Nearly all the vacant land hereabouts is now taken up. The rest is forest and rocky shore.

Mountain trout and bass for which the Catchacoma lakes are famous, are said to be plentiful though it is not the open season for them yet.

More deer were seen this year and also wolves than for some years past. The government is taking measures to wipe out the pests. Also it is reported that an early move is to be made to make the road north from Catchacoma to the boundary what it ought to be in the interests of business and tourist trade.

From inquiries and the number of "scouts" already here a land office tourist business is due for this summer all over the district.

The clear air of these northern "highlands" is attracting invalids, several of whom have arranged for the summer. Catchacoma is 500 ft. above Lake Ontario, it is said.

WOMAN SMITH FORGES NAILS

NIECE IS ASSISTANT

LONDON, April 28.—(Canadian Press).—At Lye, in the Black Country a woman nail-maker, Mrs. Brettle, who carries on her craft in a small outhouse equipped as a forge and smithy, has just begun the execution of two contracts from South America for the supply of a special type of hand-wrought iron nails. The contracts will probably keep her busy for many weeks, and she will be working hard with the frequent assistance of her young niece, who operates the hand-bellows of the forge. She has the sight of one eye only, for that of the other was lost in an accident some years ago. Mrs. Brettle, who is sixty-six, is one of the very few remaining workers in this old craft of the Black Country. There are probably not more than fifty people, all of them elderly, who know from experience the methods of the craft, and probably less than half that number who still earn a living by it.

A few generations ago the making of wrought-iron nails by hand was carried on in hundreds of homes in Lye and other small towns in the Black Country. Small outhouses, or portions of the regular living accommodation, were adapted for the purpose, and an anvil, a furnace of sorts hammers and chisels comprised the equipment. The iron, in long rods was supplied by local factors, by whom the outworkers were engaged. It was heated, cut into sections, and hammered to form the heads and points, and the dexterity of the blows enabled the production of nails at an astonishingly rapid rate.

But, though the output from individual families all of whom, from tiny children, were engaged in the work—was often quite prodigious, having regard to the methods, the workers for the greater part lived in abject poverty, and the conditions of the industry were notorjously bad.

The advent of machine methods nearly extinguished the handwrought trade, but a certain demand for handwrought nails persisted, since for certain purposes, notably the shoeing of horses, they remained better than anything the machine could produce.

DAIRY CONGRESS PROGRAM DRAWN

Extensive Plans Made for Big Convention to be Held in Britain.

TORONTO, April 28. — (Canadian Press) An extensive program has been prepared for the World's Dairy Congress which is to be held in London, opening on Tuesday, June 26. Lieut. Col. Rt. Hon. Walter Edward Guinness, British Minister of Agriculture, and Rt. Hon. Arthur Neville Chamberlin, Minister of Health, are honorary presidents of the Congress which will be held under the patronage of His Majesty King George.

Following the sittings of the Congress in London, sessions will be held in Edinburgh, beginning on July 5, with an address from Sir John Gilmour, M. P., Secretary of State for Scotland.

Both in London and Edinburgh a number of addresses will be given and papers read by men in the dairying world. The London sitting will be interspersed with visits to farms, including Sir Thomas Buxton's place at Waltham Abbey, where certified milk is being produced from a herd of pedigree Ayrshire cattle. The King's farm and dairy at Windsor will also be visited. Creameries in Edinburgh and dairy farms in the vicinity of Edinburgh will be visited by the delegates to the congress.

Glasgow also will be visited and on July 6 the delegates will be welcomed at a civic reception. There will be trips to Burns' cottage near Ayr, and through the Trossachs and other picturesque parts of Scotland.

The Royal Agricultural Society's show at Nottingham, July 10-14, will be visited by the delegates.

FORESTS OF THE FUTURE.

Although the total forest area of Canada is large (1,200,000 square miles), generations of exploitation and frequent and extensive fires have removed much of the more accessible and valuable supplies of timber. Stands of young growth occupy a considerable part of the forest area, which, if afforded adequate protection, will be a tremendous factor in the furnishing of future supplies of the industries.

CHILDREN'S STOCK IS WELL FINISHED

Exhibit of Cattle at Edmonton Show Very Pleasing—Girl Wins First Prize.

EDMONTON, Alta., April 28.—(Canadian Press).—Good type pure-bred stock and fine finished beef marked the remarkable showing of yearling calves in the children's calf feeding competition for which awards were placed before a keenly interested crowd at the livestock show in the arena. Annie Mary Turner of Cadboro Bay, B.C., won the Prince of Wales' challenge trophy, a cash prize of $100 and other specials, while to a boy winner of the fourth prize, went the lieutenant governor's silver medal. Lieut. Gov. Egbert presented personally to the winners the shield and medal as well as the ribbons to each of the 20 winners in the long list of 46 entrants, nineteen of which were girl owners of animals.

Mary Turner, who so bravely led her calf over land, sea and mountains, in order to show the boys and girls of Alberta what Vancouver Island can produce, is a jolly little eleven-year-old girl who looked as though she were fonder of out-of-doors than of helping mother with the indoor chores. She afterwards sold her calf for the record price of $970.

Miss Cora Hind of Winnipeg, for 43 years in agricultural newspaper work, a recognized authority on livestock judging, said that she made her first trip "so far west" at the special request of the late W. J. Stark, to report his first show at Edmonton, and she had been coming every spring and summer since during which time she had noted a gratifying, steady progress. She had been struck by the fact that in every province special developments of business and of agriculture started with agricultural exhibitions. Canadians have always thought that development of the country depended upon agriculture. It is well to have the boys interested, but get the girls interested too, was her plea, which is evidently being taken to heart.

5TH PETERBOROUGH TROOP.

The meeting opened with flag-break and as the flag broke the troop bugler played the general salute. Following this the Lord's prayer was said by all. The Wolf Cubs were also at the meeting. After the Scout opening the Wolf Cubs gave the grand howl. After this they showed the Scouts how the Hungar Dance of Karr should be done. The Troop had a growing up ceremony—a Wolf Cub becoming a Scout. At this time Mr. Johns, president of the Boy Scout Association, Rev. Mr. Paterson and Mr. Cooke walked in. Inspection took place and then a snappy review of the hand signals. Competition was keen. The Bull-dogs carried off the honors of finding out what was wrong during the evening. Following this a game of poison well took place. The boys were then called up and formed into a semi-circle. Cup Master Hope then introduced Rev. Mr. Paterson who gave a short speech and in turn introduced Mr. Johns who introduced Mr. Cooke, sales manager of the De Laval. He gave a speech on advertising. This was very interesting. His wonderful illustrations on the different methods of advertising were much appreciated. He explained the difference between direct and indirect advertising. At the conclusion of his speech the troops prepared for the camp fire. Our A.S.M. opened the camp fire in the usual way. A snappy review of the laws and then several songs were sung. Our A.S.M. gave an interesting talk and then followed some ambulance displays. Several calls were taken up, such as the Queen's Own, the B. P. The camp fire came to order and Scout Silence was observed for thirty seconds. The camp then came to a close and then God save the King was sung. The flag was then lowered and the troop dismissed.

ANNUAL DRAIN ON FORESTS

The forest resources of Canada are being depleted at the rate of about 5,000,000,000 cubic feet annually, through cutting, fire, insects and decay. If the reproduction and young growth are not protected, the stand of merchantable timber accessible for exploitation will not withstand this drain for more than a quarter of a century.

Smoothness and riding ease associated only with cars of higher price, available for first time at such low prices . . .

CHRYSLER now adds rubber shock insulators to the Great New Chrysler "62." And at no increase in price! For the first time this great engineering feature is included in a car selling at $1525.

Thus Chrysler becomes the one manufacturer to offer a complete line of six-cylinder models—"62," "72" and 112 h. p. Imperial "80"—priced from $1525 to $5255, giving the entirely new and modern conception of riding ease and quiet that only this specially engineered device can provide.

Floating in space—with not the slightest sense of mechanical effort—is the effect to which these rubber shock insulators contribute. Gone are all the road shocks and road sounds. Gone are all the squeaks and rattles. Gone is the need of the greater part of chassis lubrication.

This is but one of more than 40 features of the three Chrysler models which give leadership in the field of six-cylinder engineering to Chrysler. 1121

By making possible this greatest riding luxury at its new low prices in the Great New "62," Chrysler again shows conclusively how its Standardized Quality of engineering and manufacturing gives extra value to Chrysler buyers.

GENERAL CURRIE IN BOX ALL DAY

W. N. Tilley, K.C., immediately rose to advise His Lordship that the notice had been served well within the time limit, and gave dates to prove his argument.

There followed a legal discussion as to the correctness of the publication with regard to its location in the paper. After calculations of the dates mentioned it was acknowledged that the notice had been served within the time limit, six weeks.

His Lordship did not think this was important, but Mr. Regan considered it was, but since he writ had been issued in time, Justice Rose would not order the evidence brought into the hearing of the jury.

Hard To Get Wounded Out.

J Moore, the first witness called this morning, stated he is photographer in the City of Toronto. In November, 1918, he was a corporal in charge of the evacuation party of the 20th Canadian Infantry Battal-

Mr. Regan suggested to Sir Arthur Currie that the alleged libelous article came to his attention by being sent by a rival newspaper of the Guide.

Mr. Tilley—"You need not answer that"

Mr Regan— "Who is running this court I was of the opinion His Lordship was in charge."

His Lordship—"The question is not relevant."

"I think the entry to Mons of the Canadians was an historic event, but not on a par with other great battles in the war."

Mr. Regan then picked up a copy of the Globe which told of the unveiling of the monument in Mons last summer. He questioned many of the statements. "The trouble with you, Mr. Regan," said Sir Arthur, "you are trying to centre all the movements in the last days of the war on Mons."

Mr. Regan (annoyed)—"Is it true?" Sir Arthur—"No."

Mr. Regan then produced a lot of newspaper clippings including many pictures of Mons and events taking place on November 11. Sir Arthur failed to agree with many of the statements made in these clippings. Shown a series of pictures of Mons, each with inscriptions under it, Sir Arthur disagreed with all of them where they claimed the Canadians had perfected their revenge and fulfilled their oath to capture the historic town.

Denies Glory.

In a rapid-fire exchange of remarks, Sir Arthur charged Mr. Regan with saying that the lives were lost to glorify him personally. This Regan denied and repeatedly charged Gen. Currie with trying to deny the men who fell the honor which was due them. This Gen. Currie stoutly denied, and countered by saying that Mr. Regan had said it was for the glorification of Gen. Currie. "The only solace which the mothers of these men have is that they fell in pursuit of their duty," he said.

"Will we tell this to these mothers?" Mr. Regan asked.

"I am quite sure that the Canadians would have felt it an absolute disgrace to have quit 24 hours before any of the other troops of the line," Gen. Currie replied. He also stated that the Mons activities did not shorten the war, but that it was a proper military manoeuvre.

Regan—Who was the commander in chief?

A.—I was.

Q.—Of the British army?

A.—Sir Douglas Haig.

Q.—Who was it conceived the mad idea?

A.—I take it I was.

Thus Mr. Regan continued to go through the alleged libelous article, taking a piece here and a piece there. Some of these Mr. Regan claimed had no real meaning, which made them "doubly diabolical," replied Sir Arthur.

Mr. Regan—As a result of this attack on Mons, certain charges were made against you by public men, and you replied to them?

Sir Arthur Currie—I told my story of Mons.

Q—At Massey Hall?

A—Yes.

Q—At the Country Club Ottawa?

A—I spoke there; I might have.

Q—You dont' remember?

A—No.

Q—To the Toronto Star, which reaches a far larger audience?

A—Yes.

Q—As late as Nov. 5, 1927?

A—Yes.

Mr. Regan asked to file a copy of the Star Weekly as an exhibit.

W. N. Tilley, K.C., objected, and His Lordship would not allow it to be entered since it contained much more than had been read.

Mr. Regan—When did you get your appointment at McGill?

A—April, 1920.

Q—This article has not injured your position?

A—I can't tell where it will.

Q—You just wanted to get after the little Port Hope Guide?

A—They put it in print.

Mr. Regan continued to refer to other books and articles on the subject, asking if they were contained in the McGill Library.

General Currie—I don't know.

Mr. Regan—You succeeded General Byng?

A—Yes.

Q—Did you ever start any offensive operation?

A—Unless you would call a raid an offensive operation, I suppose it was.

Responsible for Canadians.

To further questions Sir Arthur admitted that he was G.O.C. Canadian corps and as such was responsible for the Canadian men. He would not say, he was "Canada's representative."

Mr. Regan—Did you ever make any mistakes?

Mr. Tilley objected and Gen. Currie was not ordered to answer the question. He did not remember having ever planned an offensive of his his own. Asked if the Canadians were termed shock troops, Sir Arthur replied that some people gave them that name. He further detailed what shock troops were. They were well trained, well led and physically strong. General Currie would not compare the Canadians with other troops of the line.

Mr. Regan—"When did you first hear of the armistice?"

Gen. Currie—"November 9th."

Mr. Regan—"Not before then? Better think again."

In an effort to prove that Gen. Currie had earlier knowledge Mr. Regan read extras detailing various steps of the war from many months previous to the cessation of hostilities.

Asked if he had received an order from General Foch regarding the passage of envoys from the German lines, Sir Arthur said he remembered getting the order, but could not find it when he came to the court. The order was dated Nov. 7, 1918 and the time was 10.25, without any qualifying letters a.m. or p.m. Again Mr. Regan brought the conversation back to Mons and the operations of the Canadans in that sector during the last few days of the war.

Fighting Not Easier.

Asked if he did not know these men would come, Currie replied that he "hoped" they would. "The fighting was not growing easier each day" said Sir Arthur. "Since the fighting on the 10th was much more severe than on the 9th."

Referring to Major Nickle's evidence regarding a telephone order to stop sending reinforcements, Regan was told that the conversation was probably held. He could not say. Regarding the message which Lingard, a former witness, had told of in the witness box, Sir Arthur declared that if it had been an official message it would have come through Corps H. Q. And it had not come to their attention, therefore it could not be an official communication.

In response to Mr. Regan's questions, Gen. Currie told what he knew of the German envoys passing the Canadians' lines and how he believed they were pleading for easier terms which Foch would not grant them. Although he did not know at the time, Sir Arthur stated that he ascertained later that Foch was determined to stick to the terms in order to convince the German army and the German people that they were defeated. Twice Foch was asked to grant a 72 hour armistice to discuss terms but refused. He intended to force the Germans to sign "on the dotted line." Again Mr. Regan expressed a desire to have a map, giving certain data of the German army, entered as an exhibit. This map had been previously barred and His Lordship did not think Mr. Regan had yet proved its relevancy.

Mr. Regan—"Did you have a conference with General Horne on November 9th?"

Gen. Currie—"Yes, I had a conference with General Horne that night." Sir Arthur further admitted that he had, on that occasion, expressed a "hope" that there would be an armistice.

At this point Mr. Regan referred to the map again.

Mr. Regan—"How far is it from F16 to Mons?"

Gen. Currie (after measuring with a rule)— "26,000 yards as the crow flies."

Mr. Regan—"How many objectives were there in that distance?"

A.—"I don't know.

Again the "little red book" came into the proceedings when Mr. Regan referred to the passages regarding the obedience of orders.

After the 10-minute recess, Sir Arthur returned to the witness box and Mr. Regan read from the report of the first how the crews of the enemy machine guns were all killed or captured. He also read from the report of the 3rd Division how the enemy apparently intended to "resist to the utmost" the Canadians' entrance into the city. He also read that arrangements had been made to man-handle a 24th Battery C.F.A. gun to aid in demolishing enemy machine gun posts. The report mentioned also a "short sharp fight" which ended in the killing or capturing of the enemy machine guns and their crews.

Sir Arthur expressed the opinion that in the light of the evidence produced in this court, these reports could be considerably revised. He stated that he firmly believed that there were no other casualties but one on November 11th.

Mr. Regan—"If all this is true, then certainly we had Providence on our side?"

Gen. Currie—"Certainly we did, many times."

Gen. Currie further stated the reports were not true as regards the time of entry since these men entered before midnight November 10.

Mr. Regan—"Then whose story are we to believe with regard to Mons?"

Gen. Currie—"I wouldn't say the story as told in this court."

Mr. Regan—"Which might be headed the $50,000 story?"

Gen. Currie—"If I wrote it I wouldn't head it that."

For five minutes, Mr. Regan questioned the witness as regards how the men could have advanced in the face of such fire.

Gen. Currie stated that they certainly would not have been able to. They would have been killed, "decimated." The point was, Sir Arthur declared, that they did not advance under the fire, but waited till darkness arrived to cover their movements.

Showing the public proclamation by the Burgomaster of Mons, Sir Arthur recognized it and did not agree with statements contained in it. He did, he said, understand how the Belgians would write it in an attempt to thank the Canadians. He did think, however, that the Canadians were better able to give an account of their entry into Mons than the Burgomaster of the village.

Regarding the accounts of the affair written by a war correspondent Sir Arthur did not agree. He (Sir Arthur) did not know where the man had gathered his information, but was of the opinion that he was obliged to write a good story.

"I said the town was clear of Germans at 6 o'clock," said Sir Arthur.

Mr. Regan—"You wouldn't be particular about an hour or two. It was getting near the end of the war?"

Gen. Currie—"I said the town was clear at 6 o'clock and it was. I didn't say five or half past. I said six."

An attempt by Mr. Regan to put in a book written by a Toronto College professor as an official exhibit was unsuccessful since His Lordship ruled it not official. He believed one might just as well use a magazine article since the professor might not have consulted the proper authorities.

Regan—"Very well, My Lord. I have just one more question to ask."

His Lordship—"Just one more, Mr. Regan?"

Regan—"Just one if Your Lordship will permit it."

His Lordship—"If it isn't too bad. I will try to allow it."

But Mr. Regan had more than one question which led back over ground previously covered and once again the pictures purported to be taken on the last day of the war of men wounded that day, were introduced, recalling the evidence of George Waas, Red Cross man, who attended wounded on the morning of November 11th and who recognized the picture of the man on the stretcher. The wounded man had laid claim to being the last Canadian hit during the war.

Returning to the accounts of the celebrations in Mons, Mr. Regan asked why there should be a "battle honor" for the Imperials and Canadians called "Mons." This called for an explanation of what were battle honors. Mr. Regan attempted to interrupt but His Lordship ruled that since the term had been used in court, Sir Arthur should be permitted to explain it to the jury.

Shown the photograph of the orders which Sergeant Major Cruepley had produced in court, Sir Arthur identified one as a copy of the armistice order. The other he could not identify since it had been sent from Canada Corps heavy artillery.

You have not suffered any financial loss from this article, asked Regan.

Currie—"If you will allow me to explain."

Regan—"No, I'm not going to let you make any speeches."

Currie—"I don't know."

Mr. Preston Examines

Questioned by Mr. Preston, General Currie stated that he had 17 years' experience in the Militia before the war and risen to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in the 15th Highlanders at the outbreak of the war. He volunteered for overseas, and his unit followed him as far as Valcartier. His volunteering was not a spectacular affair. Further questions regarding the affairs of this regiment at this time were ruled to be irrelevant. Mr. Preston's questions as to whether or not there had ever been a time when he, General Currie, had not been given the proper support of the higher commands, was also ruled out.

General Currie, in reply to questions, stated that the matter had been spoken of in the House of Commons by Sir Sam Hughes. This, His Lordship claimed, was quite irrelevant, since it did not matter what one person said or did not say years ago which had nothing to do with this specific case.

Mr. Preston: "What reply did you make to these other remarks?"

Gen. Currie: "By speaking on public platforms."

Asked if there were no other channels to reply to these charges, Gen. Currie admitted that there were, but that he did not choose them.

Mr. Preston: "Why did you not choose them?"

Gen. Currie: "I came back to my own country after four years of war and did not think I was called upon to reply to all these rumors."

General Currie further stated that he had never taken any steps to locate any one person who was circulating the story, an open letter or pamphlet would not have accomplished the necessary end. Friends of his, Gen. Currie claimed, had denied the rumor in the House of Commons.

The article had been copied in the Ottawa and St. Catharines papers. He did not know that these papers were jointly liable in point of law with The Port Hope Guide.

"Fifty thouand dollars or five times $50,000 would not compensate me, if your charge was substantiated," stated General Currie.

After being questioned further by Mr. Preston, Sir Arthur asked permission to make a statement. This was granted by His Lordhip.

He stated that he had spent last summer in Honolulu and had left instructions with his solicitors to proceed with any action they considered proper.

At 6.10 the jury adjourned after His Lordship had inquired whether or not Mr. Preston's examination would be liable to continue for any length of time.

Evidence Ends To-day.

"I have quite a few questions, my Lord," Mr. Preston replied.

The counsel for both plaintiff and defence remained in the Court to discuss the procedure which the case would follow. It was pointed out that all the evidence would be in this (Saturday) morning, and it will be time for Frank Regan to address the jury.

Mr. Regan did not think he should be obliged to begin his address and have a day elapse before Mr. Tilley would be called upon to make his address to the jury.

Considerable argument as to the legality of Mr. Preston being allowed to address the jury, took place. His Lordship stated that he had given the matter considerable thought since he had realized that the question might arise. He had consulted several law books and also a brother judge with respect to the subject, and was of the opinion that it would be a good method to follow provided too much time were not taken up by it. He would, however, consider the matter further, he said, but advised Mr. Regan to be prepared to go on with his address in the morning. His Lordship intimated that the case had already extended into much longer time than it had been expected to do, and had seriously interfered with the proceeding of other cases in this Court, as well as in other Courts in which he was scheduled to sit.

Court adjourned at 6.35 p.m.

Resuming his examination of Sir Arthur Currie when court opened at nine o'clock this morning, W. T. R. Preston asked if Gen. Currie had any opportunity of replying to the remarks of Sam Hughes in a manner which have been at once conclusive and satisfactory.

Gen. Currie: "That is a question.—Had I any oppostunity?"

Mr. Tilley: "I object, my Lord, the remarks of 1919 or 1920 have nothing to do with the case."

His Lordship noticed that Mr. Regan was not present. "Is Mr. Regan not coming this morning?" he asked.

Mr. Preston: "He was a little late getting up, my Lord."

Gen. Currie: "The charge made by Sir Sam Hughes was answered a few days later in the House of Commons by Col. Cy Peck, V.C."

Mr. Preston: "By your authority?"

Gen. Currie: "No—I replied sometime later in a manner which should have been very conclusive to the public."

Gen. Currie further stated that Col. Peck had not been at Mons, but neither had Sir Sam Hughes. No inquiries had been made of him, or through him, by Sir Sam.

Mr. Preston: "You were aware that the then Minister of Defense said he would order a court martial?"

A.: "Which he had no power to do."

Q.: "Parliament is pretty powerful."

A.: "They could not order a court martial."

Q.: "An inquiry."

A.: "Yes, a court of inquiry."

After other questions had been asked him, Gen. Currie informed Mr. Preston that "severe as Sir Sam Hughes was, he didn't go as far as you did, Mr. Preston. He did not say my own men had their rifles trained ready to shoot me down."

Mr. Preston: "Common Rumor."

Sir Arthur: "Common rumor?"

Mr. Tilley: "I object—if Mr. Preston wants to give evidence he is a little late."

Frequently during the questions which followed, Mr. Tilley rose to object. It had been agreed that when Mr. Preston was given permission to cross-examine, he would do so along lines not already covered.

His Lordship upheld his previous ruling to that effect.

Mr. Preston: "Are there any orders regarding the capture of Mons which are not on the official records?"

Gen. Currie: "Not that I know of."

In reply to further questions, Gen. Currie would not agree that he had held any conference with General Horne, since General Horne called on him practically every day when fighting was in progress.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

Smart every-day costume for the little girl consists of a fine slip-on sweater in green and yellow stripes worn with a pleated yellow linen skirt mounted on a bodice top.

Short linen skirts and light-weight knitted woolen sweaters provide the most practical and attractive everyday costume for little girls at this season of the year. Some of the smartest shops are showing these combinations, but you can quite easily make them for yourself. Just a little linen is enough for the pleated skirt, which should be mounted on a sleeveless, washable cotton top. Then a pull-on sweater, which may be bought ready made or knitted at home. The machine-made ones have the advantage of being less likely to pull, and it is, of course, possible to get them in lighter weight than those knit by hand. On the other hand, hand-knit sweaters are considered extremely smart at present and many of the imported sweaters are of this sort.

To look exactly right this season the little girl's sweater costume must not be of too dainty coloring. The colors may be softened enough to avoid actual crudeness, but they should not be of the pastel sort. One of the best children's outfitters shows sweaters in vertical stripes of green and gray to be worn with green linen skirts, red and blue striped sweaters with skirts of Copenhagen blue linen and others of green and orange—enough to give an Irishman brain storm—worn with the short pleated skirt of orange linen.

You might think, to hear some people comment on fashion, that pastel tones were all the rage this season. As a result of my own observation I would say that these rather aenemic tones were not half so smart now as they were twelve months ago. For the soft pretty type of afternoon frock they are worn as they usually are worn in the spring, but the pastel colored street ensemble, I should say, was not so smart. And for daytime sports wear I am sure we shall see a growing tendency as the season advances for shades of more pronounced coloring.

BONE DISEASE AND DIET

It is easy to understand the place that diet has in the cure of any bone disease. The blood out of which bones must be built holds its life and gets its nourishment entirely from the food we eat. If our foods are deficient in bone building material, there is no way in which the blood can secure these materials from any other source, and bone starvation is the consequence. There will be a gradual breaking down of the bone structure, and such a disease as tuberculosis can readily start in these impoverished bones.

Tuberculosis of the bone is characterized by a wasting away of the muscles above and below the seat of the disease. The joints of the hip, knee, ankle, elbow, and wrist are the ones most commonly affected.

Any inflammation of the bone is characterized by excruciting pain. This is due to the fact that bone structure differs from other tissues of the body inasmuch as it is so hard and cannot swell when inflammation takes place the same as other tissues of the body. There are tiny nerve canals sunning through all parts of the bony structure of the body, and when inflammation exists, these nerves are quickly pressed upon by the irritating material. The consequence is extreme pain which is often reflected to other parts of the body.

When only the covering of the bone is affected, it is called "periosteitis." When the bone itself is inflamed, this disease is known as "osteitis," while the name for the inflammation of the medullary cavity is "myelitis."

The cause of all of these troubles is the same, namely, an impoverished blood stream, containing impurities, and not sufficiently rich in bone building material. If these causes are recognized, the cure is obviously through a better diet regimen.

Misplacement of the bone often gives rise to great discomfort. Many of the bones of the spinal column may get slightly out of position, which will cause irritation where the bones pinch too tightly. Osteopathic or manipulative treatments will often restore these bones to their normal position and thus assist in reducing the inflammation. However, many times the bone is pushed out of position by an inflammation which comes from a toxic state of the blood, and in that case only a cleansing of the blood stream will bring about a satisfactory cure.

I recently observed the case of a woman who had been to all of the clinics in a large city. Osteopathic treatments had been taken for over four years—she had been put into a plaster cast—while other doctors had triedddiff erent inds of braces. The last physician she consulted advised her to have an operation on her spine. The pain and soreness seemed to be located entirely in the innominate bone of the right pelvis, which was out of its normal position. After all these physical methods had failed to restore the bone to its original position, the patient was entirely cured in two weeks by going on a strict orange-juice fast. Within a few days after starting the fast the pain had lessened, and at the end of two weeks the bone had returned to its normal position, with all soreness entirely gone.

This case is cited to emphasize the fact that even in bone diseases, where the trouble seems to be mechanical, the patient must not neglect to get the blood in a pure condition, free from any irritating toxic material which may have accumulated around the bone.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. John H. writes: "Please advise what treatment to use for broken capillaries on the face and neck. Skin very fine, without pimples or blackheads."

Answer: Twice daily treat the face by rubbing it with ice. Hold the ice for 15 or 20 seconds over the place where the capillaries are broken, then move it to the next location, and so on, using about a five-minute treatment in all. The cold of the ice will strengthen the capillaries and make them grow smaller.

Question: Mrs. B. J. writes: "I am very interested in your writings and have subscribed to the paper so I will not miss any of them. Will you please explain the difference between rheumatism and neuritis?"

Answer: I consider the cause to be practically the same in rheumatism as in neuritis. With rheumatism, the toxemia locates in the muscles or joints, while in neuritis it gathers around the nerve trunks. The treatment in both these troubles consists in eliminating the toxemia responsible.

Question: F. H. K. asks: "What kind of bread do you advise for Melba toast? And how is the toast made?"

Answer: Slice white bread one quarter of an inch thick, allow to dry overnight or even longer, and slowly toast it in a moderate oven until golden brown all the way through. Butter at the table as eaten.

HOROSCOPE
The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate)

FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 29, 1928

Benefic aspects dominate this day, according to astrology, which find the day most auspicious for reflection and writing.

The clergy is subject to the best possible direction of the stars which promises response to sermons and revival of interest in religion.

This should be an auspicious rule for those who desire advice or counsel regarding serious aspirations.

It is a favorable day for visiting friends or relatives. The aged who have estates to bequeath are supposed to be more than ordinarily appreciative of the good qualities of their kinfolk.

While the sway is advantageous for association with friends it is menacing to lovers. Quarrels and misapprehensions are indicated.

According to ancient lore this is not a lucky day for the wearing of new garments.

A London astrologer foretells that in early summer a device developed from the wireless "beam ray" will be much discussed since it may be used in warfare.

Much work for peace is prognosticated for the summer which may be a period in which is written a memorable page in history.

The stars now encourage interest in floriculture and American gardens are to become as famous as any that have existed anywhere on the globe.

Tremendous volumes of travel will mark the coming summer when the Orient will be visited by many Americans.

The total eclipse of the Sun next month will bring about menacing aspects for Great Britain, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthdate it is should devote their entire attention to business in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be practical and well balanced. They are often successful in big world affairs.

MONDAY, APRIL 30, 1928.

Changing planetary influences mark this day, according to astrology, which finds the benefic aspects dominating.

Women are well directed in the morning of this day and they should push all their affairs.

There is a sign of promised success for public movements in which they may be interested.

While the stars appear to encourage the united action of women they are inimical to personal political ambitions.

This is read as a happy wedding day since the planetary government indicates first rate partnership in interest.

Lawyers of both sexes come under a sway that is most beneficial and which appears to promise diplomatic service.

Under this direction of the stars independent action is most successful. It is not a time to seek support or aid in any sort of ambition.

The evening should be fairly fortunate for confererices and for making plans since the sway is conductive to clear thinking.

Care to prevent accidents should be unremitting under this direction of the stars.

Reforms to protect human lives in the everyday course of existence will be numerous and will avail little until a leader with a novel idea appears late in the summer, an occultist predicts.

Accidents in the air will begin to multiply as the summer advances, astrologers foretell, and air police will patrol the skies.

Persons whose birthdate it is should insure life and property.

Children born on this day have the possibilities of success, but they should choose their environment with great care.

LYRICS OF LIFE

A LITTLE KINDER

My girl, though women talk of beauty,
I do not think it all our duty,
And do not find it all in tresses,
And lips, and eyes, and clinging dresses.
For I have met full many a maiden,
Her satins and her silks arrayed in,
Who needed to be what God designed her—
A little sweeter, a little kinder.

Though lips and eyes may give us pleasure,
And seem a woman's fairest treasure,
To give a woman beauty's splendor
Lips must be kind and eyes be tender.
It is the perfume makes the roses,
For beauty in the heart reposes.
She needs to be, to quite complete her,
A little kinder, a little sweeter.

The roses fade; the perfume lingers.
Time touches beauty with its fingers;
A thing so bright and thing so brittle
It always leaves us in a little.
And then a woman will discover
A fading rose, how hearts will love her
If day by day the world shall find her
A little sweeter, a little kinder.

HEAVY ANNUAL FOREST LOSS

The annual drain on the forests of the Dominion through fire, insects, and disease is appalling. The annual loss through the operation of these insidious factors is a little greater than the amount of timber annually used in all branches of the industry.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE HAVE ENEMIES

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

We have enemies because we can't get along without them. They come in very handy.

We "cultivate" enmities just as we cultivate friendships. Each has its distinct function and serves us well. The enmity is useful in stirring our otherwise sluggish endocrine glands. Without the stimulation of these glands of internal secretion we could never have a thrill. We need a little jog now and then. Our enemies supply this need.

We examine our daydreams and find that we brood over some fancied insult and magnify it until we have aroused anger and indignation to the point of a thrilling adventure. It is a real sport, a cheap pastime. The fighting instinct gets an airing without the effort of physical exercise and violent athletic sport.

Our enemies give us a chance to plot against them and in turn to feel a lot of sympathy for ourselves in the mean way we are treated by them. If they are not mean enough to us we are disappointed and concoct all sorts of grievances in our fond imagination.

Not all of us require an equal amount of enmity. Most of us can get along on a moderate amount such as is bound to come up in the ordinary give and take of daily contacts. But there are those who need to have a lot of enemies to live a healthy normal life.

Do not despise your enemies. They are very useful. Thank God for enemies and love them with all your might.

To A Million Women Who Know The New Order Of Things

Who Want An Automobile That Looks Like Something—Acts Like Something—Is Something—Yet Costs Comparatively Little

IF I were a woman I'd want a certain kind of automobile.

Of course, I'd want it to look like something. For you see, it will be almost a part of me, my life, my home.

And I wouldn't want to pay a fortune for it, because I know too well the value of the dollar.

But I would want far more.

I'd want nimbleness, easy steering, dashing pick-up, certain stopping to end traffic terrors.

I'd want the ability to twist easily into tight parking corners.

I'd want sure-footed, positive braking on those rainy, wet days when I drive the children to school.

And on certain afternoons, when I'm tired of dusting and dishes, I'd want my car to be a care-free vagabond with me, interested only in finding out what is on the other side of some distant wind-swept hill.

Walter Hagen is 14 Down to Archie Compston

ARCHIE COMPSTON IS 14 UP ON WALTER HAGEN AT 36TH

English Pro Gives the United States' Star Beating of His Life.

NEAR A RECORD.

Englishman Outdrives Long Shooting Hagen at Practically Every Hole.

MOOR PARK, England, April 28.—Two phenomenal rounds of golf over these Hertfordshire hills yesterday gave Archie Compston the British professional a 14 hole lead over Walter Hagen, one of the American money chasers in the first half of their 72 hole match for 750 pounds sterling.

Never before in his brilliant career has the debonair Hagen ever been so far behind at the midway point in a match as when the big blonde giant of an Englishman, hair tousled and jaw clenched, dropped his final putt for a sensational round of 66 yesterday afternoon. That round only a stroke above the course record of 65 set by Sandy Herd from the short tees, just about clinched the whole match for Compston. hen added to an equally brilliant 67 in the morning round. Hagen shot rounds of 72 and 76

"I never was in such a predicament before," Hagen said as he strolled away from the final green. "I gave Archie the best I had to-day—but don't talk about my golf; just look at his. Bobby Jones says he is always satisfied with four, but I shot even fours for the first six holes homeward this afternoon, and lost five of them."

Compston played the best 36 holes of golf ever seen at Moor Park.Lashing his tremendous drives from the back tees, outdriving the long shooting Hagen at practically every hole, the husky Englishman drilled 13 birdies into his card, twice holing in the short third and tenth reaches in birdie two's. Compstons score on the final nine holes was 30 and he won seven of them. The match went 13 holes at the start before Hagen notched a single win on his card.

However, it wasn't the Englishman's clouts alone that trounced Hagen so soundly. Compston was deadly accurate on the greens, and around them. While he missed only one putt of less than four feet, he holed out with one long tingling roller on at least a dozen greens.

Hagen was battered and buffeted all day long by Compston's baffling play, but gallery gave him all credit for sportsmanship when hopelessly beaten.

Hagen's bronzed face was wreathed in smiles as he shook Compston's hand at the 36th green and left for London to get some much needed rest before to-day's rounds.

The British public knows that Hagen is not beaten yet, but nevertheless when he goes to the 37th tee to-day his position will call for golf as phenomenal as Compston's win. Compston won ten of eighteen holes yesterday afternoon and lost only ten. Should similar success attend him there would be no need for an afternoon round to-day.

Kearns Enters Suit Into Higher Court

NEW YORK, April 28.—(Canadian Press.)— On the basis of ruling handed down in his recent losing suit against Jack Dempsey, Jack Kearns former manager of the one time heavyweight champion, yesterday entered suit in state supreme court against the ex-title holder for $500,000.

The jury which decided against Kearns in his suit for $701,000 against Dempsey Wednesday night determined, however, that a valid contract existed between the fighter and his manager from August of 1923 until broken by mutual agreement at Los Angeles in July of 1925.

Kearns' new action covers "all possible damages" during that period. Twenty days are allowed Kearns for the filing of a bill of complaint setting forth particulars for the suit. Dempsey will be allowed a similar period in which to answer.

Attorneys for Kearns filed notice of appeal following failure of the recent suit in U. S. District court. Another section of similar nature is pending in Philadelphia.

MacMorran was again elected secretary-treasurer. This will make his third term in that position. T. Pitchford and E. Ruiter were given charge of the course this season. New greens will be added to the course, and the club intends to make other considerable improvements this year. J. Dishart will be in charge of the competition in club events this season. The Menace Passing.

No less a student than John J. McGraw seems to see the silver lining in the black clouds which seemed to herald a customer famine in baseball several years ago.

"The kids are back on the lots," McGraw is reported to have said the other night, "and the game is safe for democracy for all time."

However, Mr. McGraw, when it comes to baseball forecasts, has a polo grounds complex, at least big city narrowness. He takes no account of baseball losses on the minor front.

An incident related by Bill McGeehan illuustrates McGraw's keen faculties as an analyist on baseball economics with the aid of Bill's satire:

"I recall trudging around a golf links at Sarasota some time back, when they were talking of the 'golf menace to baseball.' Hagen and Robert Tyre Jones were playing an open match. It was in the way of being a world series for golf.

"McGraw did not watch the players as much as he watched the crowd. Finally he turned to me and said: 'I have counted this crowd. There are something less than 2,000 in it, and this is the biggest golf attraction you could arrange. You cannot tell me that golf ever seriously will trouble baseball when this is the best they can do in the way of a gate for the greatest show in the game.'"

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

They ain't a great deal happened since I last addressed the customers. The major leagues is going ahead in spite of the football weather, and to me the most interesting thing about the week's happenings in the big show is the way Mister Ty Cobb and Mister Tris Speaker has been performing. Together them 2 represent 83 years of age and a whole lot of trouble for the pitchers they face. Mister Speaker lammed 4 hits in 1 game this week, and him and Mister Cobb combined to cop more'n 1 battle for Mister Mack's Athletics. Just a coupla old fellows trying to get along is Mister Cobb and Mister Speaker, and they's a whole lotta folks besides me who is pulling for them to come through. And if they can hit the way they is doing now in winter weather they oughta be sitting on the world when Old Sol starts to steam up the old bones later on.

Locally the East Peterborough and the City Leagues has been organized this week, and both outfits is healthy and looking forward to a good season. The City League has chosen Mister Bill Prindible as proxy for the year, and, believe me, they got a good boss. There is a bird what has done a whole lot for sport in this man's town, both in hockey and baseball, and he has done it without any advertising neither, but the young element in sport know what kinda friend he has been to them. The City League under his direction should have a fine year, and I don't mean likely. The East Peterborough gang have the same 4 teams as last year, and that should mean plenty action in the Bethany-Cogs-Crescents-Raybestos loop this summer. Friendship ceases in that organization about the time the certificates is issued, and the "cease fire" signal ain't given till the final game is over. The E.P.'s did a lot last year to keep hard ball alive, and they oughta to come back with another lively summer's scrapping on the diamond.

Around the Central loop they ain't much to report, save Mister Daley is beginning to take a little light nourishment now that Mister Bobs Britton has decided to spend the tourist season in Kingston, and that Mister Stan. Burgoyne, the hockey referee and coach, is going to tell the Oshawa selects how the game is to be played. I ain't never heard of Mister Burgoyne as a baseball coach, but if he knows as much about ball as he does about hockey them Motorists won't be the dumbells of the Central League. Mister Burgoyne is there both ways from the jack as a hockey teacher.

The home of the Petes' site still remains under the sea, but they is hope that the diamond will emerge before the league schedule opens. Meanwhile the boys will have to practice here, there, and what have you?

Well, Mac, have to leave you now.

Sportfully yours,

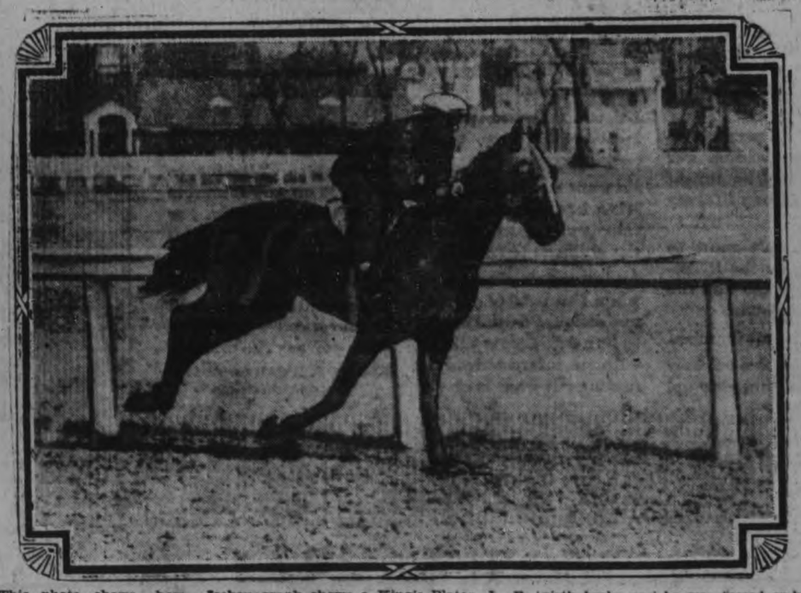
HOW BOURASSA MET HIS DEATH



This photo shows how Jockey Bourassa met his death. The tragic death of the young Canadian jockey, Ovila Bourassa, at Havre de Grace, emphasises dangers that beset the riders even in the mornings when the horses are being exercised. The photograph shows a King's Plate, J. P. White's Cedar Crest, working close to the rail at the Woodbine, Toronto. The chance of accident seem very remote with no interference by other horses and all plain sailing ahead. In the case of Bourassa the saddle girth broke and he was tossed on his head on the inside rail such as shown in the photograph and his skull fractured. If it had been in an actual race Bourassa would have been wearing his fibre skull cap and might have escaped without injury.

ENGLISH FARMERS STUDY WHEAT POOL

Agent General for Alberta Explains System—Discussion Follows.

LEEDS, April 28. — (Canadian Press).— Peel-marketing of wheat in Canada was the subject of a paper read to the Farmers' Club in London at a recent meeting by Herbert Greenfield, Agent-General in London for the Province of Alberta. The Yorkshire Post reported the meeting at some length, and said:

Mr. Greenfield claimed that the Canadian wheat pool, started in 1923, had established itself as a successful system of co-operative marketing unnecessary middlemen and consequent marketing costs, and this without penalizing the consumer. By means of the pool Canadian farmers had improved their position tremendously, the testimony of an American Government investigator being that the wheat-growers of Canada had profited to the extent of between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000 in one year. Oats and barley, Mr. Greenfield said, are now being marketed in the same way as wheat by the provincial pools of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and co-operative pools are now being operated for the marketing of cattle, dairy products, poultry, and eggs, though growth in these directions is bound to be slow.

Lord Bledisloe, formerly Parliamentary Secretary to the British Ministry of Agriculture, commended the wheat pool system, and mentioned that Mr. Greenfield was of great assistance to the agricultural industry, for he had been the first farmer Premier of Alberta. In Canada, however, the agricultural problem had been solved by the farmers themselves, and he doubted if it was desirable to lean on any Government, whatever the part it represented, to do anything effective towards stabilizing prices. 'If British agriculture is capable of effecting its own salvation, he thought it must be done by a means of a great Imperial effort in conjunction with the Dominions, and the Empire Marketing Board might be the key to the solution.

Christopher Turner said the farmers of this country must set about the task of saving themselves and then "ginger up the Government." He did not think it was stabilization of prices the English farmers wanted, but prices that would pay.

Another speaker said the remarkable system of credit developed in Alberta had much to do with the success of the wheat pool. The amount of credit made available to Canadian farmers was over $1,000-000,000.

Major Proby, an East Anglian farmer, spoke strongly in favor of an experiment being made in this country with the pool system. "We want to get the grain sent quickly to the millers who are ceasing to buy English wheat altogether," he said. "Why not set up an experimental elevator or granary and give the system a trial? One British elevator in East Anglia we estimate would cost £100,000. East Anglian farmers cannot afford that expense themselves, but it would be a small sum for the Empire Marketing Board to pay out of its income of £1,000,000, per annum."

J. Dallas said stabilization of prices would be a great advantage to the British farmers and he believed he would have to adopt the pool system whether we liked it or not. The state would have to help. "If we wait till the farmers do it themselves," he said, "many of them will by that time will be forced out of business."

Canada is dissipating her forest resources at a tremendous rate, and unless definite, radical, and constructive steps in forest conservation are taken, the industries dependent on wood will in the near future be faced with the necessity of curtailing production.

Y.W.C.A. PAGEANT PROGRAM PROMISING

Many Fine Displays Included in Annual Gymnasium Exhibition.

"The Flower Babies and the Naughty Felix Cats" is the attractive title of one of the dances by tiny tots, to be given at the Y. W. C. A. Pageant at the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday of next week, May 4th and 5th.

The program is a very ambitious one this year. It includes some new offering in Mimetic Exercises, which simulate the various motions used in sports, such as throwing and catching in baseball, and single sticks, which are elementary fencing exercises. The demonstration of wand, dumbell and club-swinging work is also illustrative of advanced tuition in each of these branches. The Swedish exercises, always interesting, make another striking offering on the program.

The dances which are demonstrated in this annual Pageant of the work done during the year by the various classes, include some very interesting numbers. A class of seventy small tots do the "Dutch Twins" number and the same number of little bits of humanity have the "Flower Babies and Naughty Felix" dance, half of them simulating little black cats with black bows.

A Russian National dance is the Trepak number, with Intermediate school girls as Cossacks, and the "Blue Danube" waltz is interpreted in lovely fashion.

An old French Polka is a quaint figure dance, the Carol of Spring is a lovely interpretive interlude and Song of the Sea is the intruguing title of a ballet done by Intermediates and Seniors, with sandpipers and sea gulls as auxiliary figures.

Each of the dances is gowned in characteristic fashion. This item of costuming is always looked after with careful attention and the time and work spent on the preparation of the different oufits adds much to the general attraction of the colorful Pageant.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"BEN-HUR," OPENS AT THE CAPITOL MONDAY FOR A THREE-DAY ENGAGEMENT WITH DAILY MATINEES.

"Ben-Hur", at tale of the Christ, begins in Jerusalem in the days of the reign of Herod. Judah Ben-Hur, the son of a wealthy Jew, and Messala, the son of a Roman, have been friends since childhood. But when Ben-Hur becomes seventeen their friendship ends because of their racial difference.

Shortly after, Valerius Gratus, the new Roman ruler of Jerusalem, is leading an army through the streets when Ben-Hur, leaning from a window, accidently dislodges a bit of tiling, which fells the Roman leader.

Messala, the former friend, denounces Ben-Hur as having purposely thrown the stone, and the Romans take Ben-Hur away to serve as a galley slave for life, drive his mother and sister Tirzah into cruel imprisonment and seize all his property.

Ben-Hur vows vengeance upon Messala.

For three years Ben-Hur serves as a slave in a Roman war galley, and his education and nobility win the friendship of the commander, Arrius. One night a desperate conflict takes place between the Roman fleet and pirates, the galley is sunk and Ben-Hur saves his commander from drowning. In gratitude, Arrius, a wealthy Roman, adopts him, thus giving him his freedom. Ben-Hur naturally of powerful physique, receives training in arms from the Romans.

But he longs to find his mother and sister and sets out for the East to find them. At Antioch he finds Simonides, a former slave of his father, who has since become a wealthy merchant. Simonides has saved the wealth left Ben-Hur in spite of tortures applied by the Romans.

Ben-Hur falls in love at first sight with Esther, the beautiful blonde daughter of Simonides. She returns his affection.

Ben-Hur is obsessed with a thirst to avenge himself against Rome, and he goes into the desert to enlist the support of Sheik Ilderim, the Generous, in a war against his sworn foe.

He learns that there is to be a great chariot race at Antioch and that Messala, who is now a great Roman soldier, is the favorite to win and that Messala and his friends are wagering their entire fortunes on the race. Ben-Hur makes plans to enter the race at Antioch and to crush his enemy, Messala.

Meanwhile he has met Iras, daughter of Balthasar, and this seductive Egyptian beauty has fallen in love with him.

On the day of the race both Esther and Iras are in the huge crowd in the ampitheatre. Iras is an admirer of Messala as well as of Ben-Hur. Ben-Hur not only wins, but avenges the wrong on the part of his friend by catching the wheel of the Roman's chariot in his own, thus causing Messala to be thrown into the dirt. The hoofs of the flying horses of the other chariots pass over his body and he is crippled for life. Ben-Hur's victory makes him a great hero among his own people.

Meanwhile, Ben-Hur's mother and sister have been confined in a prison as lepers and he rescues them.

He marries Esther and they are happy.

AT THE REGENT.

JETTA GOUDAL'S FILM 'WHITE GOLD" SOUNDS NEW REALISTIC NOTE

Scenes are Laid on Sheep Ranch in Arizona and the Acttion is Rapid and Dramatic.

Striking a new and higher note in motion picture production, 'White Gold,' a new picture starring Jetta Goudal and featuring Kenneth Thomson as the leading man, will be on view at the Regent Theatre on Monday next. Filled with dramatic action, tenseful and compelling, this is said to be one of the most unusual photoplays in which the exotic Jetta Goudal has appeared, and all who witnessed her remarkable work in "Three Faces East" will await her latest starring effort with genuine interest.

The scenes of the story are laid on a sheep ranch in Arizona. Dolores Carson, a dancer, longing for home life, weds Alec Carson, the son of a sheep rancher. The latter disapproves of the marriage and makes life miserable for his daughter in law. A drought of long standing is killing off the sheep and the young wife, who sincerely loves her husband, finds herself neglected. Sam Randall, a herder seeks to win her from her husband, who engrossed in his dying sheep, pays her little attention. The climax is reached when Randall is killed by Dolores after he invades the young wife's room. The finale is as remarkable as it is natural but it would be unfair to the public to reveal it.

Here is a story which provides Miss Goudal with abundant opportunities for the display of her talents as a dramatic actress of remarkable power. In directing the picture William K. Howard departed from the accepted standards of picture production and established a precedent, that of discarding the scenarist's script and developing the plot according to the psychology of the players and the events as they transpire. The motivation is said to have reached a high tempo in consequence and to have been maintained until the final scene was filmed. The result is reported to have been one of the most unusual photoplays thus far produced this season.

The cast embraces screen artists of prominence. They are George Nichols, George Bancroft, Robert Perry and Clyde Cook.

A GREEK SLAVE

(By Jeanette)

The only thing that was seriously wrong with the presentation of the first act of "A Greek Slave" at Knox lecture hall on Thursday, Friday nights was its briefness. There was not enough of it. To take an audience through the thrilling episodes that feature this first act and then leave them in doubt as to the ultimate fate of the slave Diomed, is a cruel proceeding. One is left with the picture of the lover being spirited away by the proud Lady Antonia and the spectacle of his adored one fainting over his loss.

Only the limitations of stage and properties prevented the entire production being staged by the choir of Knox Church, and the manner in which they put over the first act was superb. To take a small choir of this type and train them to present grand opera, in the way that the "Greek Slave" was presented last night, is a noteworthy achievement. R. J. Devey surpassed himself in this miniature production of musical comedy of a type which is seldom heard and which has a charm all its own. "A Greek Slave" is a composition by Sidney Jones, for which M. Devey possessses the only right of presentation in Canada. It was produced at the Grand Opera House in 1917, so that this presentation at Knox Church constitutes its second production in Canada. The production last night was of a type that held the attention of the audience of about two hundred and fifty people, right to the last minute. Upon a very inadequate stage, "A Greek Slave" had a minature presentation that was outstanding in its excellence and attraction. The lighting effects, the costumes, which are mainly the property of Mr. and Mrs. Devey, and the "props" used in the staging, are notable examples of what can be done with a great deal of enthusiasm and hard work behind genuine talent of a very high amateur type.

All those taking part are members of the choir of Knox Church and the solo and choral numbers are beautifully rendered, the latter particularly in the "Incantation" scene, giving an effect far beyond the limitations of stage and setting. Trained by Mr. Devey in the musical portion and by Mrs. Devey in the acting, those taking part thoroughly deserved the generous meed of applause and genuine appreciation which met their efforts last night.

The scene is in the garden of Heliodorus, the wizard, in Rome, A. D. 90. The action presents the various people who come to the magician for advice and counsel. Heliodorus is assisted by his beautiful daughter, Maia, who represents the "blindoracle of Memphis", and who is in love with the Greek slave, Diomed. This slave has been used as a model for Eros, God of Love, by another slave who is also a sculptor, and Eros is declared to be the godly lover of the Lady Antonia, the Roman princess, when the latter arrives to consult the wizard. Matters are complicated by the desire of Marcus Pomponius, prefect of Rome, to wed Antonia, and his threat to torture the magician if Heliodurus fails to help his suit.

Every part in this scene is taken wonderfully well. Mrs. R. J. Devey has the role of Antonia and carries it off in fine style. Mrs. T. E. Curvin makes a superb Maia, daughter of the wizard, her rendition of the dignified, striking role being quite outstanding. In solo singing and in the leading of the chorus, her voice is splendid.

Miss Annie Crocker, who excells in roles of a somewhat mischievous type, is as good as usual as Melanhope slave mistress, and Miss Jessie Hill is the daintiest creature imaginable, n the part of Iris, favorite slave of Antonia. Miss Hill's appearance and singing of solo numbers adds a great deal to the charm of the production.

Heliodorus leaves nothing to be desired, as his role is enacted by H. Hughes, and Stanley Willis gives a fine presentation of the part of the proud Prefect. A. Pitchford, as the Greek slave, Diomed, has some very notable singing to do and a difficult part to play, and George Coleman is excellent in the part of Archias, the sculptor. D. M. Hill makes a very fine statue, presenting Eros, God of Love.

Colorful minor actors in this section are the Greek slaves and lute players, the Misses Doris Soper, May Pollock, Marion Hill and Jean McCannan, and three fortune-seeking Romans in striking outfits are J. Gerrard, as Sillius, J. Ridyard as Manlius, and H. J. McCannan, as Curius, in a dangerous-looking helmet.

Singers in the chorus which adds so much to the tuneful charm of this section included also Mesdames Scholey, Huffman, Lockie, the Misses Chambers, Cotton, B. Morrison, H. Morrison, Gerrard, Hetherington, Benson, Fife, Armstrong, and Messrs. Armstrong and T. Allen.

Part One of the evening's entertainment was also quite attractive, presenting choir members in well-rendered "Musical Rockets," character songs and sketches, prettily costumed and lighted. Selections from the tuneful, light operas of "San Toy" and the "Geisha" were given, this portion opening with the singing of "The Mandarin" and "Chin, Chin, Chinaman," by H. J. Devey and chorus, composed of Mesdames Lockie, E. Huffman, E. Rogers, the Misses Muriel Benson, H. Morrison, Fife, Gerrard, Mildred Hetherington and Mr. Tom Allen.

Dainty numbers from the tuneful operas were the vocal selections by Mrs. N. Todd, whose attractive, true, clear voice was heard to much advantage in "Esmeralda," with its encore, "No, Sir, No!" by Mrs. E. Rogers, who made a hit in the captivating bit, "Jewel of Asia," and G. Coleman, who sang a snappy nautical solo, "Jack's the Boy," with assistance by Mrs. Devey, Mrs. H. Wood, and Miss J. Hill.

A nicely-trained and presented selection was "Pynka Pong," a character sketch enacted by Mrs. H. Wood, Miss Jessie Hill, G. Coleman and H. J. Devey, and a melodious finale was the "Chinese Moon Feast" ensemble, with solos taken in turn by Mrs. Devey, Mrs. Wood and Mr. Coleman.

During the intermission, Rev. Wm. McDonald, pastor of Knox Church, spoke in eulogy of the efforts of the choir and their director, Mr. Devey. Miss Mildred Hetherington gave pianoforte numbers before the opening. Assisting in preparation of stage and lights were Messrs. H. Hughes, G. Davis and Stanley Willis.

Outstanding Points on Hudson-Essex Cars

Most Valuable, Striking and Practical

Three turns of the operating levers raise or lower the windows of the 1928 Essex models.

Essex has paid great attention to detail in the interior finish of the 1928 models.

The Hudson-Essex 1928 models carry the motometer on the dash instead of the radiator.

In the 1928 Essex models the steering column is adjustable to preference of the individual driver.

The 1928 Essex steering mechanism is of the worm and tooth disc type, much in use in the expensive cars.

No metal stripping or fastening of any type is visible in the upholstery of the new Essex models.

Essex upholstery in the 1928 models in all cases, is chosen to blend with the color scheme of the duo-tone lacquered body.

A neat bit of construction work is executed in the 1928 Essex models—the automatic windshield wiper being hidden in the header over the windshield.

Looseness and rattles are eliminated in the windows of the 1928 Essex models by two felt pads against which is maintained a light but constant spring pressure.

Head lamps and saddle lamps of Colonial design, held in place with decorative nickeled fittings, are among the many improvements on Hudson-Essex models.

Improved low-hung curving lines; flatter roof lines; attractively curved rear quarters, and horizontally shaped windows give the new Essex models the attractive contour of much larger cars.

Hudson-Essex have further thinned their front pillars this year, giving still greater visibility to the driver and enhancing trim appearance.

Essex has overlooked no detail in the 1928 models—even the design on the rubber padding of the running boards carries the same design as used on the rubber floor mat.

Parabeam headlamps, of Colonial design, are important in the general scheme of the new Hudsons, adding beauty to the 1928 models.

Hudson's 1928 fenders curve down to meet a wider running board, which is low-hung for passengers' convenience and to assist in the general line of design.

The 1928 Essex steering wheel has a steel core surrounded by ebony-black hard rubber. It carries light control, hand throttle and horn button. The steering wheel jacket carries as far as the instrument board, and is nickel-plated.

Hudson's 1928 radiator is higher and more slender than in former years; the contour at the top being slightly altered. Vertical shutters fit in effectively with the impression of radiator height, adding distinction to the cars.

One-piece fenders sweep widely over the wheel of the new Hudsons, with the apron forming a continuous curve with the crown of the fenders proper. The curve is harmonious with the contour of the radiator shell.

XXXVI—What Few Simple Things Can a Man Believe?

IN your own childhood, gentle reader, religious thinking had considerably improved. Yet there are many people now living who, if they were to make a written inventory of their earliest religious impressions would probably produce a record something like this:

> The earth is a testing ground suspended midway between Heaven and Hell. It was thrown together rather impulsively by God in six days. He is an old man with white whiskers, and very vain, since He insists that the principal duty of men and women is to render Him unceasing praise. He placed in the Garden of Eden a most attractive tree as a deliberate temptation to Adam and Eve and, having all knowledge, He was well aware that they would succumb. When they did, He turned them out of the Garden, sentenced them to labor, pain and sorrow, and condemned their descendants forever. Some generations later, when the human race showed no evidences of perfection, He lost His temper again, repented that He had ever created it, and destroyed practically all life, animal and human, by a world-wide flood. Only Noah and his family were saved, and we are their descendants.

Since the flood the race has been neither better nor worse than before, and practically all of its members were damned until a little over nineteen hundred years ago. At that time Jesus, His only Son, persuaded God to let him come to earth and die for the human race. By this sacrifice God permitted His wrath to be appeased toward whatever small fraction of humanity should thereafter believe in Jesus and confess His name. Sunday is God's day, and there must be no pleasure of any sort from morning to night. Religion consists of going to church on Sunday, saying one's prayers at night, and abstaining from wine, women, song and profanity.

Hell is a place of eternal torment somewhere under the earth.

Heaven is a city beyond the skies, where the streets are paved with gold, and the sole occupation of the inhabitants is playing on harps and telling God how kind and wonderful He is. Many are called but few are chosen and, while one may hope for salvation through a rigid stifling of pleasure and a continuous observance of religious rites, still the chances are against success, and death is a moment of horrible fear. . . .

Overdrawn as this statement may be in parts, it will call up corroborative memories in the minds of many middle-aged readers.

The rigid creed with which they started life began to crumble under the influence of high school and college.

Astronomy assaulted it. They learned with some dismay that the world is not the center of the universe, supremely important, but merely one tiny speck in a vast collection of worlds. Is it then the only world inhabited by intelligent beings? Would God build so great a universe and let so much go to waste—a hotel of a million rooms in which only one was tenanted? It does not sound reasonable.

But if there are other worlds, inhabited by beings like ourselves or better, must not these inhabitants also be children of God? And, if so, had Jesus descended upon these other worlds to die, repeating indefinitely the tragic drama of His earthly experience?

Biology and history delivered other blows. They showed no record of Adam and Eve, beings created perfect and fallen by sin to a lower plane. On the contrary, they pictured a slow, painful struggle upward, a "survival of the fittest"—progress achieved by bitter epochs of selection but resulting always in something better. If their records were true; if there had been no fall through Adam, then what became of the frightful wrath of the Creator and the appeasing atonement of the Son?

The process of disillusionment was bewildering. Millions of earnest, sincere people were shaken, and knew not what to believe. They echoed the protest of the historian Froude, who said:

> "If medicine had been regulated three hundred years ago by Act of Parliament; if there had been Thirty-nine Articles of Physic, and every practitioner had been compelled under pains and penalties to compound his drugs by the prescriptions of Henry the Eighth's physician, Doctor Butts, it is easy to conjecture in what state of health the people of this country would at present be found."

Medicine has constantly progressed by rejecting the old truth for the new; science rejects and moves forward; business refuses to regard precedent as binding or even, in many instances, instructive. To many modern-minded folk, accustomed to almost daily revisions of their thinking in every other department of life, it seemed that religion alone was unprogressive, still clinging stubbornly to the "faith once delivered to the saints."

From this old fixed faith their progressive intelligence turned away, and great groups of them assumed that there was nothing to be set up in its place. So it happened that religion, which if it be true should be as natural a part of human experience as eating or talking or moving, dropped out of the daily thinking of many upright and kindly people.

GOITRE NOT A DISEASE

Milwaukee Doctor Makes Remarkable Discovery.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept. 730, Box 737, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24 years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre ful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cases all over the country with astonishing results. The Doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect and recommends immediate attention no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense, and will send a copy free to anyone interested. Write him to-day.—(Advt.)

JACK NOTT DEAD.

Oshawa Sporting Writer Succumbs to Heart Trouble.

OSHAWA, April 28.—Following an illness of only five days, Jack Nott, life-long resident of Oshawa and veteran sport writer, died yesterday afternoon in the Oshawa General Hospital from heart failure.

Jack Nott was born in Oshawa, in the house where his brother now resides, on April 21, 1877. He has been for many years the sporting correspondent of The Mail and Empire here, and also was the sporting editor of the Port Hope Times.

He was an enthusiastic follower of almost every sport, and was particularly interested in hockey, baseball, and lacrosse. He had always been identified with sport in Oshawa, and had been at one time or another a member of the executive of practically every athletic organization in Oshawa. After the inception of the Central Ontario Baseball League, which has been revived this year, he was secretary for many years, and during the same years was a member of the executive of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association. He was a member of the executive of the intermediate hockey club last year. Nott was known to followers and officials of sport throughout the province and was a familiar figure at all the leading events in Ontario's sport world.

He was a member of the local Oddfellows and Masonic lodges. He is survived by two brothers, William of Oshawa, and Ben of North Bay, and one sister, Mrs. Edward Bradley, of Oshawa.

NO MEDICINE LIKE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

For Either the Newborn Babe or the Growing Child.

There is no other medicine to equal Baby's Own Tablets for little ones—whether it be for the new born babe or the growing child the Tablets always do good. They are absolutely free from opiates or other harmful drugs and the mother can always feel safe in using them.

Concerning the Tablets, Mrs. John Armour, R.R. 1, South Monaghan, Ont., says:—"We have three fine, healthy children, to whom, when a medicine is needed, we have given only Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are the best medicine you can keep in any home where there are young children."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the stomach and bowels; banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE KIDNEYS

are glands which take a very active part in the elimination of poisons from the blood. If the kidneys are working normally the blood is filtered by them in such a manner that the soluble wastes and poisons are removed and carried to the bladder from which they are eliminated at intervals. If the kidneys do not separate the wastes from the blood stream the system soon becomes saturated with toxins, and diseases like neuritis, rheumatism, uremia, dropsy, blood-poisoning, etc., may develop.

YOUR HABITS

of living have a lot to do in regulating the amount of work that the kidneys have to perform, so be careful to eat and drink in moderation, using mostly natural foods, but also see to it that normal nerve energy is reaching the kidneys.

MAKE SURE

that there is no mechanical or structural interference with the nerves leading to the kidneys. Improper nerve force means lack of normal function. This means poisons retained in the system. By a careful examination of the spine your Chiropractor can tell if there is pressure upon the nerves supplying the kidneys. If pressure exists he can release it by spinal adjustments. When this is done the kidney tissues will become strong and capable of functioning properly to free the system of poisons.

AGAINST BILL.

Public Assemblies Bill Scheduled to Come Before Senate To-day.

LONDON, April 30 (Canadian Press).—Several British warship and cruisers sailed to-day from Malta for Egypt in connection with the Anglo-Egyptian crisis which revolves around the Egyptian Public Assemblies Bill. An ultimatum demanding withdrawal of the bill within three days was handed the Egyptian Government last night.

The situation to-day was grave and fraught with serious possibilities, although in official circles in London it was thought that the difficulties were not insurmountable and the sky might clear suddenly. There was no effort, however, to minimize the seriousness of the crisis.

The Public Assemblies Bill, which was passed by the Egyptian Chamber last January, is scheduled to come before the Senate to-day.

Two of the provisions of the bill are regarded by the British government as being direct challenges to the British delaration of 1922 and as endangering foreigners.

One of these articles forbids the police to take any steps against disorder in public assemblies except at the request of the organizers of the meeting or in the event that grave disorders actually occur. The other article which meets with British objection prescribes heavy fines for policemen who violate the provisions of the foregoing article.

Must Answer Quickly.

LONDON, April 30. Canadian Press. — The Egyptian Government has until 7 p.m., May 2, to comply with the British demands that the bill for the regulation of public meetings and demonstrations, be withdrawn.

Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, in making this announcement in the House of Commons today said that Lord Lloyd, British High Commissioner, on instructions from the British government, had handed to the Egyptian premier, a final warning last evening. The British note requests the premier as head of the Egyptian government, immediately to take the necessary steps to prevent the public assemblies bill from becoming law and also requesting him to give a categorical assurance in writing that the measure would not be proceeded with.

Should this assurance not reach him before seven p.m., May 2, the British government would consider itself free to take such action as the situation might seem to require.

FIRE DESTROYS BOX FACTORY

Between $50,000 and $75,000 Damage Done Plant in Village of Yarker.

FIRE FIGHTER INJURED.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 30.—(Canadian Press.)— Damage of between $50,000 and $75,000 was done in an early morning fire on Sunday in the village of Yarker, about thirty miles northwest of Kingston, and twenty miles north of Napanee, when a box factory, owned by Mr. Garrison was totally destroyed, as well as the office building next to it. Some damage was also done to the residence owned by J. Freeman, while the power house also caught fire and but for the presence of members of the Kingston and Napanee fire departments, damage of huge proportions would have been done. Mr. Brock Leonard, son of the station agent, was seriously injured, when a part of the wall of the old factory fell on him. He is now in the Kingston General Hospital.

The fire was discovered by the crew of a train which was passing through Yarker about four o'clock on Sunday morning and though they whistled continually they were unable to rouse the villagers, so they stopped, and sounded the alarm. The village bucket brigade proved utterly inadequate and a call was sent to Napanee and Kingston. Several of the local department, together with the Ahrens-Fox pumper went to the scene and played three lines of hose on the building for five hours, after which the walls were pulled down. The factory was of brick, while the office was a two story stone building. The Freeman residence was damaged on one side, though not seriously. It was after the main fire had been practically extinguished that the power house took fire, but this blaze was extinguished before it got much headway.

Three Cars Crash At Local Corner

A peculiar accident occurred at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets late Saturday afternoon involving three cars.

There was a car at each corner, one going east, one going west, and one each going north and south, and all had apparently stopped.

On starting up, the car going south, which was turning east, and the car going west, in some way got Dr. Loudon's car, which was going north, in between them and jammed it up considerably.

RETURNS FAVOR POINCARISTS

Impression Confirmed That the Present Government Will Continue in Power.

NO DISTURBANCES.

PARIS, April 30 (A.P.)—The early returns for the French elections yesterday, in which the political complexion of Parliament for the next four years was being determined, were decidedly favorable to the Poincare government.

Of the first forty "counties heard from," the Poincarists were elected in at least two-thirds of the contests. This seemed to confirm the pre-election impression that the voting would assure the continuance of the present power in the government. Reports reaching Paris indicated that a heavy vote had been cast without serious disturbance in the second round election, which followed balloting a week ago.

The Communists won a decisive victory when their candidate Duclos defeated Leon Blum in the 20th ward of Paris. Blum was a leader of the Socialist party and has an international reputation as the result of his years of activity in behalf of that party.

Among the prominent candidates who were elected were Henry Hrankling-Bouillon, leader of the Right wing Radicals; George Mandel, formerly right hand man of Clemenceau, and former Ministers de Lasteyrie, Andre Hesse, Augagneur and Reibel.

Many Re-elected

The Communists and other representatives of the Left wing lagged behind the candidates of moderate principles in most of the department. The Communist deputy Marty, who is in prison, was re-elected, although his comrade behind the bars, Dorion, lost his seat.

Alsatian autonomists were elected from both Mulhouse and Alkirch, but the autonomist candidates in the country districts around Strasbourg received only nine votes out of a total of almost 24,000.

Octave Homberg, banker and owner of a famous racing stable, was beaten by Mayor Capron of Cannes in the Alps Maritimes department.

Paul Painleve, minister of war, who failed to get a majority in the first round election last week, yesterday was elected by an overwhelming majority over Mayor Nicod of Oyonnax, in the Department of Ain.

Majority of 100

PARIS, April 30 (Canadian Press.—France has endorsed Premier Poincare and his policy of stabilizing the franc by assuring him a comfortable majority of at least a hundred in the next Chamber of Deputies. With full results of the balloting of the last two Sundays compiled to-day, moderate supporters of Poincare had 306 seats in the new house or 45 more than in the former one. The combined Socialists, Radicals, and Communists captured 257 seats as against 285 in the preceding chamber. A large part of the Radicals were regarded as certain to vote with the Poincare Government.

AGED LADY IS HURT IN FALL

Mrs. James McCoy Still Unconscious Following Accident Near Marmora.

FOUND IN CELLAR.

MARMORA, April 30.—An aged lady, Mrs. James McCoy, of Rawdon Township, who has been visiting at the home of Mr. John Downard, Marmora Township, was found lying unconscious at the bottom of the cellar steps at six o'clock on Saturday evening.

Dr. Thomson of Marmora and Dr. J. Holdcroft of Havelock were summoned, and gave as their opinion that she had suffered a seizure while descending the steps. At the time of going to press, she was still unconscious.

I.O.O.F. HOLDS CHURCH PARADE TO ST. PAUL'S

Rev. William Allan Preaches Helpful Sermon on Social Problems.

OBJECTS OF ORDER.

Commends Oddfellows For Efforts To Help Needy and Improve Characters.

A special service of a most pleasing nature marked the annual I.O.O.F. parade to St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last evening.

Bright and inspiring music including antiphonal singing by the I.O.O.F. and Rebekah choir and St. Paul's choir, and a carefully prepared and ably delivered sermon on "Social Problems" by the Rev. William Allan were enjoyed by a congregation which filled the church to overflowing. Ferns and flowers decorated the pulpit and choir lofts.

Following was the order of service:

Processional Hymn—"For All the Saints Who From Their Labors Rest."

Invocation—'Nearer My God to Thee," Quartette.

Scripture Lesson.

Anthem—"At Even Ere the Sun Was Set" (Turner).

Prayer.

Hymn—"Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Anthem — "What Are These" (Stainer).

Sermon—"Social Problems."

I.O.O.F. Quarette—"Dear Spirit, Lead Thou Me" (Miles).

Prayer.

Recessional Hymn—"The Day Thou Gavest, Lord, is Ended."

Benediction.

Vespers.

The presence of the I.O.O.F. and Rebekah choir added greatly to the musical service. This choir occupied the choir loft while St. Paul's choir filed into the gallery. The two, led by Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., organist, presented an unusual but thoroughly pleasing combination. Messrs. Cutmore, Turner, Worrall and Baldry comprised the quartette.

Social Problems.

Taking his text from Mark 8: 1-9, the Rev. Mr. Allan said in part:

"Although I don't belong to your order I have great pleasure, on behalf of the members and official boards of this church, in welcoming you within these walls.

'Naturally, when I learned that you had decided to parade to St. Paul's Church this year, I tried to discover what your aims were as Oddfellows. And I have learned that you are world-wide in your activities; that you seek to improve the character of your members, and through them the characters of those with whom you come in contact. I find that you seek to imbue your members with proper conceptions of their capabilities for good. You make provision for the needy and seek to relieve the distressed. Yours is not a system of negatives, but on the contrary you impress upon your members the duty and privilege of individual sympathy and every-day service.

"Having learned these things it seems to me that I cannot do better than to speak to you on the subject of 'Social Problems.' In doing this I shall base my message on the first nine verses of the eighth chapter of the Gospel of St. Mark. You recognize that there are certain social problems and you address yourselves to the solution of them.

"The clearer our conception of any problem the more likely are we to be able to solve it. All social problems are alike in one respect .In outward expression there may be much difference. There is poverty! There are drug addicts! There is drunkenness! And there is what is politely called the social evil, as well as many others. But in their origin, and at the heart of them all, there is the same explanation—and that is 'sin.'

"When a man, sick of the palsy, was brought to Jesus in the belief that Jesus would cure him of his sickness, it was, perhaps, a disappointment to those who brought him to hear Jesus speak of sin when the thought that should have been uppermost in everybody's mind should have been the palsy and how to get rid of it. However, there was no lack of sympathy on the part of Christ. He felt for the man thus afflicted, but He knew that lying at the root of all disease was sin: and so He said, "Thy sins be forgiven thee." That attended to He proceeded to help his physical and more temporal need by telling the man to arise and take up his bed and walk. In the giving of that command there was the bestowal of power, and the man did as Jesus commanded.

"It is almost impossible to imagine what would have been the happy condition of mankind if sin had never entered the realm of human experience. There is nothing in the nature of suffering or of sorrow, of injustice or wrong that is not due to sin. Much of our reform is futile because we are going at it in the wrong way. And there will be no

Border Laws Blast International Romance Couple Return To Homes In Two Lands

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., April 30—An autumnal romance was blasted here last week; a 60-year-old man of Peterborough, Ont., and a 52-year-old widow, of Kingston, N.Y., being the principals in the romance that failed to end in marriage. The Canadian-American romance had developed over a period of six months, during which time Mrs. —— and Mr.—— had exchanged many letters, after being brought together through a Cleveland, Ohio, companion ship agency. Plans were made for their wedding. Mrs. —— came to the Falls, but was not admitted to Canada because she could not satisfy Dominion immigration authorities of her intention to return to the United States. Mr. —— was communicated with at Toronto and came to Niagara Falls, Ont. If his bride-to-be would not be admitted to his country, he would come to hers, he declared, but the United States immigration authorities held he could not comply with the American laws and refused to admit him, and consequently Mrs. —— went back to Kingston, N.Y., and Mr. —— back to his Canadian home in Peterborough, Ont.

New York Welcomes Atlantic Aviators

NEW YORK, April 30.— (Canadian Press.)—Three trans-Atlantic fliers from foreign shores were taken to the city's heart today and given a tumultuous welcome. The occasion was the official welcome to the crew of the Bremen and it was a welcome in which all the city seemed to be participating.

After a triumphant tour of the harbor, during which Capt. Fitzmaurice, like a boy at play, amused himself by manipulating the city tug's siren in answer to the shrill salutes of a hundred flag-decked craft, the fliers were led through the deep canyons of lower city by ten thousand troops for their official welcome by the Mayor. Waiting for their husbands at the City Hall were the wives of Major Fitzmaurice and Capt. Koehl and the Major's seven year old daughter Patsy, just landed from a liner from Europe.

DEMOCRACY IS WELL OUTLINED FOR ROTARIANS

Rotarian R. F. Downey Delivers Thoughtful Address to Club Members.

CANADA'S NEEDS.

Speaker Pays Tribute to the School Teachers of the Province.

"There may be a few wrong ones among them, but in the main they are good citizens," declared Rotarian R. F. Downey to the Rotary Club today in a tribute to Ontario's 18,500 school teachers in the course of a thoughtful and eloquent address on "Democracy." Mr. Downey stressed the fact that the school teachers of the Province were playing a big part in bringing about the democracy he was picturing.

Owing to the Rotary district convention in Toronto, for which some of the local Rotarians had already left, the attendance to-day was not as large as usual. Rotarian Andrew Brown presided, and among the guests were His Lordship Bishop Sweeny of Toronto, Rev. T. O'Conor-Fenton of Norwood, and Rev. J. D. Paterson of All Saints', Peterborough.

Rotarian Downey, who was introduced by Rotarian John Crane, remarked democracy was not the rule of the common people as opposed to the aristocrats, nor a geographical area, nor a political organization, nor government of the people by the people for the people, although that made a good election slogan. Democracy meant the sharing of common interests not only among its own members, but also among other forms of association. Here the speaker quoted the American writery Dewey to the effect that democracy was characterized by two essential traits,

CONFIRMATION ADMINISTERED TO 106 PERSONS

Bishop Sweeny Officiates at Three of City's Anglican Churches Yesterday.

GIVES GOOD ADVICE.

Sermons at Three Services Are of Most Helpful and Instructive Nature.

One hundred and six members of the Anglican Church, mostly young people, received the Apostolic rite of Confirmation at the hands of the Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeny, Lord Bishop of Toronto, in three local churches yesterday. Large classes had been prepared by the clergy and large numbers of parents and friends gathered in the churches for the services. His Lordship gave helpful advice to the candidates confirmed in his addresses at the three churches.

St. John's Church.

St. John's Church was the scene of a most impressive service on Sunday morning, some twenty-eight persons receiving confirmation through the laying-on of hands by His Lordship Bishop Sweeny, of Toronto.

The congregation was a large one, every pew being filled. The choir, up to full strength, took a splendid part in the service, being in charge of Frederick G. Mann, organist and choir master. Following is a list of names of those confirmed during the service:

Adults.—Clara Fredenburg, Edith Moffatt, Caroline Touchbourne, Mildred Walton, Alice Rutter, Anne Gore, J. G. Livingstone, Charles C. Willison, Ethel M. Willison.

Children—Gladys Sage, Sylvia Vollans, Gladys Dafoe, Margaret Dainton, Charles Coleman, George Matthews, Nelson Stanger, Bob Darcy, Charles Travers, Jack Strickland, James Turner, Jack Comstock, Kenneth Fox, Muriel Preston, Dorothy Pitchford, Helen Rogers, Kenneth Whatley, Max Comstock, Faith Farthing.

Following the confirmation, His Lordship spoke briefly, taking as his text Roman 6. 4: "Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in the newness of life." Particularly he stressed the meaning of "Walk in the newness of life" speaking to the newly-confirmed ones. He urged them to follow the Lord each day and to maintain the high standards set for them through this day of confirmation.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH.

Twenty-three candidates received confirmation at St. George's Church, where the rite was administered in the afternoon before a congregation which taxed the capacity of the pretty little church. There were seven boys and sixteen girls and women in the class presented by the rector, Rev. J. L. Hughes.

"How much owest thou unto my lord?" part of the fifth verse of the sixteenth chapter of St. Luke's Gospel, was the text chosen by His Lord-

Great Lakes Grain Steamers Breaking Away From Winter Ports—Channels Still Frozen

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., April 30 (Canadian Press).—Leaving the Soo at six yesterday morning, the steamer Lake Chelan experienced little trouble in getting down the river. She passed Detour at eleven o'clock. The Lake Chelan was the first of the wintering grain fleet to leave for lower lake ports. Following advice that she had made the run, the steamer Grammer set sail at one o'clock yesterday. There is little trouble anticipated in the lower river except that the up-bound channel at Sailors' Encampment is still solid with ice. The Dixon tried to make it on Saturday, but found it too hard, so she and the Atterbury came up the down-bound channel. The balance of the fleet here are preparing to get away to-day. No attempts have been made to proceed further by th Dixon or Atterbury.

Whitefish reports indicate very little change and it is generally thought it will be four or five days yet before it will be possible for any boat to get through to Lake Superior even by forcing a channel. Weather yesterday was warm, with a light south wind, which will have an appreciable effect on the heavy ice.

DEFENCE OPENS ARGUMENT IN CURRIE ACTION

Mr. Regan Declares Plaintiff Must Have Known Armistice Was Coming.

CASUALTIES SUFFERED.

Headquarters Glorified By Capture of Mons and Parade Held Through City.

(By Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, April 30. — When the hearing of the $50,000 libel suit was resumed before the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose in the court here at 1.30 this afternoon, T. F. Hall, K.C., Cobourg, counsel for the defense, rose to submit to His Lordship that the serving of the notice on his client, F. W. Wilson, had been irregular with respect to the time limit within which such notice was required by law to be served.

His Lordship ruled that the Act did not require a notice when the statement was made in public as this statement had been.

A brief discussion ensued as to what might or might no be used in the addresses to the jury by counsel.

Mr. Regan Speaks First.

Mr. Regan began his address by asking the forgiveness of His Lordship for having tried his patience during the long session. He employed the words of Gen. McBrien to say that the case was between General Currie and all the other officers on the one hand and Mr. Wilson and Mr Preston on the other hand. To Mr. Tilley, Mr. Regan paid the compliment of referring to him as a leader of the Canadian Bar Association. He also thanked Mr. Tilley for his courtesy throughout the trial.

Referring then to the original article, Mr. Regan pointed out how the Canadians had suffered casualties at Mons, how it was impossible to actually issue an order for the capture of a city at the last minute. The order was issued in the dying hours of the war.

"Who was glorified by the capture of Mons? Not only Sir Arthur Currie, Mr. Regan claimed, but the officers who had attended the court as spectators and witnesses, the Canadian Headquarters Staff. It was these men who ordered the advance sounded on the retreating Germans. The troops were sent on ahead. Headquarters did bring up the rear. Headquarters got into motor cars and fled for their lives, Mr. Regan quoted, and continued to say there was no doubt as to who was meant by the article. The world knew that Sir Arthur Currie held his parade in Mons that afternoon.

"There were two parades held in Mons, one at 11.00 and other at 3.30. The world knows Sir Arthur Currie was there. He has brought to this court pictures which have upheld our viewpoint.

"Gen. Currie says there was no attack on Mons; there was no loss of life on the last day of the war. What does Mr. Wilson say? There was an attack on Mons; there was a loss of life.

"Sir Arthur says he took his orders from Foch and 'if I had not obeyed I would have been a traitor.' Mr. Wilson says there was no order from Foch and therefore he would not have been a traitor.

"But where the whole trouble comes in is at the conference between Sir Arthur Currie and General Horne, who commanded the First Army on November 9th," Mr. Regan continued. At this, he declared, the Generals decided it was necessary to advance the line to a point east of Mons in order to protect their men who would be billeted there. Therefore all the losses along that sector were directly attributed to Mons.

Should Weigh Facts.

"Before a battle chief enters a battle he should weigh the facts. He says he did not know of an armistice. We say he did, and before he commenced the fight he knew peace was coming." After reading an article from the London Times, Mr. Regan pointed out how it was necessary for Gen. Currie to keep posted on the political situation and therefore he should have known that the armistice would be signed.

"I say to you anyone reading the London Times, which paper was delivered at Sir Arthur's headquarters, could not help knowing the Germans were broken. There also was a message coming down from Foch to let envoys through. Can anyone say from that, that an armistice was impending and that Sir Arthur knew what was happening?

"Take Sir Arthur's own story as given to the Toronto Star, when he said after Cambrai, 'We knew the end was near.'

"Take the war diary of the 42nd Division of November 7th. Take the First Army report." Mr. Regan pointed out on page four of the latter, that since the first day of November all ranks had known that an armistice would be signed in the next few days. These significant words appeared. There were others of a similar nature on page 2 of the same article.

"In addition to that," he said, "we had the evidence of one of the wit-

Canadian Packers Hold Convention

MONTREAL, Que., April 30.—(Canadian Press.) — That the idea of unifying the four largest packing companies in Eastern Canada by the formation of Canada Packers Limited, has been successful during the first eight months was the statement of J. J. McLean, president of Canada Packers, Limited, at a convention of the company's eastern salesmen held here Saturday. The four firms comprised in Canada Packers Limited are the Harris Abattoir Co., the Wm. Davies Company, the Canadian Packing Company, and Gunns Limited. Over five hundred representatives from Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Bruckwick and Prince Edward Island attended the convention.

Mr. McLean stated that for the trading period just closed a volume of business at the rate of over $10,000,000 and a tonnage of over 800,000,000 pounds a year had been transacted.

CURRIE ACTION IN LAST STAGE

Story of Mons Has Been Retold By Privates, Brass Hats, and Non-Combatants.

DRAMATIC SCENES.

COBOURG, April 30. — After 12 days, the last witness in the famous $50,000 libel suit which General Sir Arthur W. Currie has brought against W. T. R. Preston and the Port Hope Guide, stepped out of the witness box, and W. N. Tilley, K.C., Toronto, Sir Arthur's counsel, informed His Lordship, the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose, that that was all of the evidence in the case. Thus, from the cleaner and presser in Port Hope to the chaplain that had been in Mons, all up and down the scale from a private in the front line trenches to the upper circles of the "Brass Hats" the story of the Canadians' activities during the last hours of the war was told and retold from every possible angle.

The jury has heard the evidence it by bit, and then the case reopens at one-thirty this afternoon, will hear it summed up by the lawyers for both sides, and by W. T. R. Preston himself. His Lordship has intimated that he will take precedence from the "Irish case," and allow Mr. Preston to address the jury on his own behalf. Frank Regan of Toronto, who has conducted the defense for F. W. Wilson, publisher of the article "Mons," will be the first to speak. He stated to His Lordship that he would not require a great deal of time, perhaps an hour. W. T. R. Preston agreed that he would not in all probability require more than the same length of time, but did not agree to hold himself down to that length of time. W. N. Tilley, K.C., who has conducted the case for the plaintiff, intimated that he would be brief in his remarks, and expressed a strong desire to end the case on Monday. At various stages of the proceedings he has endeavored to speed up the evidence. "My client can not afford to keep up this sort of thing indefinitely," he said at one stage of the case.

It is apparent that even in the courts of law drama plays an important part. Just as Mons began and ended the war so far as the British armies in the western front were concerned, so it began and ended the case in the court at Cobourg. The last witness to enter the witness box was the Rev. George Kilpatrick, Ottawa, who was the Chaplain who officiated at the funeral held in Mons, Nov. 13, 1918 when the citizens of that town paid tribute to the Canadian dead.

While the chaplain was giving his evidence the court sat in respectful silence and listened to the details of the funeral which had been so frequently discussed during the proceedings. His quotations from the speech of the burgomaster of Mons, was uttered amid a silence which could fairly be heard.

"There are those in your country who sorrow to-day," he began, and with the words, lawyers and audience alike leaned forward, anxious lest they miss the slightest sound of his voice. Reporters bent lower over their copy paper, writing with lightning speed in order to get the dramatic ending verbatim. Whether or not any of the press men were at Mons may only be supposed, but practically every one of them is an ex-service man. A sigh passed through the entire court at the last words of the chaplain, "Part of Belgium which is forever Canada." This is the way in which the Burgomaster of Mons referred to the grave in which the Canadians had been buried, Frank Regan, when the words had been spoken told the chaplain and the court that both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Preston agreed with everything that had been said. He spoke with a tone of deep reverence.

It is not money that General Sir

OCEAN FLIERS PLAN ROUND TRIP FLIGHT

Hope to Fly Bremen to New York Within Two Weeks.

INSTAL NEW INSTRUMENTS.

Aviators Reply to Welcome of Americans Through Broadcasting Station.

NEW YORK, April 30. — The first men to fly the North Atlantic from East to West may attempt to add a round trip across the ocean to their laurels, they announced last night.

A return flight from Mitchel Field to Baldonnel field in Ireland, from where they hopped off, is contemplated by the crew of the monoplane Bremen, Captain Koehl said. The three fliers, he said, hope to return to Greenely Island, where they left the Bremen, and fly it to New York in two weeks.

After the ship has been brought to Mitchell Field and additional instruments, including a sextant installed, the return flight is a possibility, Koehl said "Flying over the ocean is not finished," Koehl told the newspapermen. "It is possible that we may fly back but many things have to be settled first. We realize that we will need more instruments to fly back and land at Baldonnel Field.

"The compasses on the Bremen worked very well until we got off Labrador, then the magnetic disturbance interfered with it and we were thrown far from our course."

Regarding the fate of the Bremen still on Greenely Island, Captain Koehl said:

"We hope to go up to it and get it in about 14 days and fly back to Mitchel Field. In the meantime a mechanic will be sent up to look it over."

Motor in Perfect Condition.

Neither the motor nor the ship needs overhauling. "The motor is in perfect condition but needs tuning up," he explained.

A return trip from Greenely Island Major Fitzmaurice explained to interviewers was not considered because of the surrounding wilderness. "If we started to fly back from the island and got forced down we might be a long time getting out because of the desolate nature of the country up there."

From a station in their hotel the fliers went "on the air." Baron von Huenefeld spoke in the microphone in English: "We are so happy to be here at last," he said, "and we are grateful for the hearty welcome we are receiving. We will always remember the brave men and women who flew here before us."

"We can never forget such a splendid example as that given by the brave Americans whose planes crossed the Atlantic ocean, and we are proud to bring you by airplane the good wishes of Germany."

Captain Koehl spoke his greeting to America in German.

Then Mayor Walker introduced Major Fitzmaurice.

"Here we are at last," the Irish pilot said. "All the way over the first half to Greenely Island then to Murray Bay, and then we fell into Long Island. And, mind you, we're most happy.

"The Canadian people were most awfully sweet, and we hated to leave them, but here we are again and I cannot tell you how wonderful it is."

DELEGATES NAMED FOR CONVENTION

Mrs. Cottrell and Mrs. Loomis to Represent 57th Regimental Chapter.

Mrs. R. Cottrell, regent of the 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E., and Mrs. D. A. Loomis, were appointed representatives of the Chapter at the National I.O.D.E. convention to be held in Toronto commencing May 28th.

At the regular meeting, presided over by Mrs. Cottrell, arrangements were also made for the annual decoration of soldiers' graves on Empire Day, May 23rd. The next regular meeting will be held on May 31st, as the holiday (May 24th) falls on the regular meeting date.

A letter asking for a small donation towards the expenses of a party of British girls touring the Dominion this summer, was read and the sum of $2 was voted.

A collection was taken up at the meeting and the proceeds were sent to a local family whose bread winner ill in the Christie street hospital in Toronto.

The Regent Mrs. R. Cottrell, gave a brief report of the sessions of the recent provincial meeting of the I.O.D.E. in Hamilton.

It is decided to hold a bridge party at the armouries on May 16.

YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT PLAY

"The Path Across the Hill" Staged By Members of St. Andrew's.

AT BURNBRAE.

BURNBRAE, April 30. — Two questions were answered by St. Andrew's young people on Thursday evening at the first performances of the three-act play, "The Path Across the Hill." "Should a woman propose?" was given the affirmative answer when grandma led grandpa right up to the question mark, and they were supremely happy. "Does it pay to marry in haste?" Certainly not! This was the experience of Dr. Jimmie Reid and Flo, the pretty New York lady, who had ample time to repent their rash act.

As the story of the play unfolded, the crowd were treated to acting of a high order, as well as listening to a production of a splendid moral nature. The heroine of the cast, Ruth, grandpa's girl, after being cast aside by her boyhood lover, Dr. Reid, learns to love a splendid young fellow, Robert Post, who holds the fear of the law for a past sin over grandpa. Ruth's father, who is dead, was the real criminal, and Robert's love for Ruth overcomes his desire ofr justice and revenge. Ruth finds time also to lavish her care and affection on her grandpa and her wayward brother, Walter, a young scamp, whose love affair with Lutie, is very funny. Zuzu, the darky servant, provided much merriment especially in the handling of her newly, acquired husband, Salamander, a negro chauffeur.

The cast was as follows: Grandpa Crawford, Robert Matthews; Ruth, his granddaughter, Emma Bennett; Walter, his grandson, Fred Bennett; Grandma Davis, Helen Oddie; Lutie, her granddaughter, Emily Craighead; Flo, Ruth's cousin from the city, Hazel McKenzie; Dr. Jimmie Reid, Grant Thain; Robert Post, also from the city, Francis Collingwood; Zuzu, the maid, Nettie Hay; Salamander, her husband, Mack Little.

In spite of the fact that this was the first play presented by this group, most of whom had had no previous experience on the stage, the acting was splendid and the whole performance showed careful practice. Outstanding among the cast was Robert Matthews and Helen Oddie in their roles as the aged lovers, but each one played so well that it would be impossible to pick any particular star from the group.

During the intermissions Albert Gifford sang some vocal selections, while John Storrie sang a number of the latest comic hits and Mrs. Storie and Miss Dorothy Watson provided piano music.

The basement of the church was filled to the doors with an appreciative audience gathered from all over the district. Several from Campbellford and Stirling were among those present.

FARMERS BEGIN TO SOW GRAIN

Men in Stirling and Millbrook Districts Are Getting Crops in Ground.

FALL GRAIN KILLED.

STIRLING, April 30.—Messrs. Arthur and Ed. Pyear, who reside in the 9th Concession of Sidney, about three miles west of Stirling, are the first to sow any grain in that vicinity having each sown eight acres of oats on Friday, April 27th.

George McCurdy, out the Ridge road, near the Huntingdon boundary, is the first to commence seeding in that direction. No doubt the work will become more general this week. There has been some complain that a great deal of clover seeding was destroyed by the continued freezing weather at night.

Sow Mixed Grain

MILLBROOK, April 30. — George Bonner and Harold Tait, Fourth Line, Cavan, began seeding on Friday afternoon sowing a mixed grain, oats and peas; as far as can be learned this is the first seeding to be done in the township, though several farmers have been working on the land plowing and, in some cases, cultivating.

Fall wheat, which wintered exceptionally well, is now reported as "about half a crop," and killed out entirely on some farms; one man who sowed thirt-five acres believes the whole of this land will have to be plowed under, as the grain is destroyed. Several fields of clover are said to be looking well, but in one section, at least, the alfalfa has been so badly heaved with the frosts in recent weeks, it is apparently completely killed.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports were received, the latter showing a neat balance in the treasury. Correspondence was read by the secretary, which included letters of appreciation for flowers sent during illness. A motion was carried that a letter of appreciation be extended to Mrs. M. D. Earle for the generous donation of the pretty flowered chintz which adorns the windows of the Sunday School. New blinds are to be purchased for the windows, also some renovating done to the infant classroom. The cleaning and re-decorating of the basement was discussed, and a committee of three ladies was appointed to get estimates on the cost. Mrs. E. Bradburn and Mrs. W. —Charm of youth

"that schoolgirl complexion"

The simple rule in daily skin care to follow if you seek it

THE woman of today knows one goal above all others in beauty care. And that is to keep her Youth. For she knows how tragically difficult, once lost, it is to regain.

Soap and water have become the Youth preservation rule of the world. Used properly, it is surprising what it does. The thousands of youthful women, long past their first youth, seen on every side today, prove the point beyond question.

Urged by leading skin specialists, that rule is based on keeping the skin and pores clean of age-inviting accumulations. Its whole secret is the KIND of soap one uses. A true complexion soap is meant, a soap like Palmolive, made for one purpose only; to safeguard the complexion. Others may prove too harsh.

The rule to follow if guarding a good complexion is your goal

So, largely on expert advice, more and more thousands of women turn to the balmy lather of Palmolive, used this way.

Wash your face gently with soothing Palmolive Soap, massaging the lather softly into the skin. Rinse thoroughly, first with warm water, then with cold.

If your skin is inclined to be dry, apply a touch of good cold cream—that is all. Do this regularly, and particularly in the evening.

Use powder and rouge if you wish. But never leave them on over night. They clog the pores, often enlarge them. Blackheads and disfigurements often follow. They must be washed away.

Avoid this mistake

Do not use ordinary soaps in the treatment given above. Do not think any green soap, or one represented as of olive and palm oils, is the same as Palmolive.

And it costs but 10c the cake! So little that millions let it do for their bodies what it does for their faces. Obtain a cake—then note the difference one week makes.

Retail Price 10c MADE IN CANADA

Palmolive Soap is untouched by human hands until you break the wrapper—it is never sold unwrapped

YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT PLAY

"The Path Across the Hill" Staged By Members of St. Andrew's.

AT BURNBRAE.

BURNBRAE, April 30. — Two questions were answered by St. Andrew's young people on Thursday evening at the first performances of the three-act play, "The Path Across the Hill." "Should a woman propose?" was given the affirmative answer when grandma led grandpa right up to the question mark, and they were supremely happy. "Does it pay to marry in haste?" Certainly not! This was the experience of Dr. Jimmie Reid and Flo, the pretty New York lady, who had ample time to repent their rash act.

As the story of the play unfolded, the crowd were treated to acting of a high order, as well as listening to a production of a splendid moral nature. The heroine of the cast, Ruth, grandpa's girl, after being cast aside by her boyhood lover, Dr. Reid, learns to love a splendid young fellow, Robert Post, who holds the fear of the law for a past sin over grandpa. Ruth's father, who is dead, was the real criminal, and Robert's love for Ruth overcomes his desire ofr justice and revenge. Ruth finds time also to lavish her care and affection on her grandpa and her wayward brother, Walter, a young scamp, whose love affair with Lutie, is very funny. Zuzu, the darky servant, provided much merriment especially in the handling of her newly acquired husband, Salamander, a negro chauffeur.

The cast was as follows: Grandpa Crawford, Robert Matthews; Ruth, his granddaughter, Emma Bennett; Walter, his grandson, Fred Bennett; Grandma Davis, Helen Oddie; Lutie, her granddaughter, Emily Craighead; Flo, Ruth's cousin from the city, Hazel McKenzie; Dr. Jimmie Reid, Grant Thain; Robert Post, also from the city, Francis Collingwood; Zuzu, the maid, Nettie Hay; Salamander, her husband, Mack Little.

In spite of the fact that this was the first play presented by this group, most of whom had had no previous experience on the stage, the acting was splendid and the whole performance showed careful practice. Outstanding among the cast was Robert Matthews and Helen Oddie in their roles as the aged lovers, but each one played so well that it would be impossible to pick any particular star from the group.

During the intermissions Albert Gifford sang some vocal selections, while John Storrie sang a number of the latest comic hits and Mrs. Storie and Miss Dorothy Watson provided piano music.

The basement of the church was filled to the doors with an appreciative audience gathered from all over the district. Several from Campbellford and Stirling were among those present.

FARMERS BEGIN TO SOW GRAIN

Men in Stirling and Millbrook Districts Are Getting Crops in Ground.

FALL GRAIN KILLED

STIRLING, April 30.—Messrs. Arthur and Ed. Pyear, who reside in the 9th Concession of Sidney, about three miles west of Stirling, are the first to sow any grain in that vicinity having each sown eight acres of oats on Friday, April 27th.

George McCurdy, out the Ridge road, near the Huntingdon boundary, is the first to commence seeding in that direction. No doubt the work will become more general this week. There has been some complain that a great deal of clover seeding was destroyed by the continued freezing weather at night.

Sow Mixed Grain

MILLBROOK, April 30. — George Bonner and Harold Tait, Fourth Line, Cavan, began seeding on Friday afternoon sowing a mixed grain, oats and peas; as far as can be learned this is the first seeding to be done in the township, though several farmers have been working on the land plowing and, in some cases, cultivating.

Fall wheat, which wintered exceptionally well, is now reported as "about half a crop," and killed out entirely on some farms; one man who sowed thirt-five acres believes the whole of this land will have to be plowed under, as the grain is destroyed. Several fields of clover are said to be looking well, but in one section, at least, the alfalfa has been so badly heaved with the frosts in recent weeks, it is apparently completely killed.

LADIES' AID MEETS.

Reports Read at Meeting of Omemee United Church Society.

OMEMEE, April 30. — The sum of twenty-five dollars was voted to the Young People's Union for the purchase of a lantern by the Ladies' Aid of Trinity United Church at its meeting held on Thursday afternoon. The Scriptural lesson found in Psalm 65, was read by Mrs. E. Bradburn, followed by prayer by Mrs. R. Foast. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were received, the latter showing a neat balance in the treasury. Correspondence was read by the secretary, which included letters of appreciation for flowers sent during illness. A motion was carried that a letter of appreciation be extended to Mrs. M. D. Earle for the generous donation of the pretty flowered chintz which adorns the windows of the Sunday School. New blinds are to be purchased for the windows, also some renovating done to the infant classroom. The cleaning and re-decorating of the basement was discussed, and a committee of three ladies was appointed to get estimates on the cost. Mrs. E. Bradburn and Mrs. W. Moncrief consented to act as a Flower Committee to be responsible for the placing of plants or flowers in the church each Sunday as soon as they are available.

BELL TELEPHONE 48TH ANNIVERSARY

Flag Flying Over Local Office Marks Date—Business Growing.

As the forty-eighth anniversary of the incorporation of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada came yesterday, the Bell System figt was flown from the top of the building on Hunter Street over the week-end.

"We feel that it is not inappropriate to celebrate by flying our flag" said W. C. Beamer to The Examiner this morning. "When we reflect on the growth of our system and the number of people who now make our service a vital part of their business and social life, we find some grounds for congratulations.

"Telephones in service within the local exchange area now number 5309. In Ontario and Quebec there are upwards of 670,000. Long distance transmission has been so perfected that practically every town and hamlet on the North American continent is within range of the human voice, and by means of the recently extended Trans-Atlantic service several of the more important European countries may be reached".

—Charm of youth

"that schoolgirl complexion"

The simple rule in daily skin care to follow if you seek it

THE woman of today knows one goal above all others in beauty care. And that is to keep her Youth. For she knows how tragically difficult, once lost, it is to regain.

Soap and water have become the Youth preservation rule of the world. Used properly, it is surprising what it does. The thousands of youthful women, long past their first youth, seen on every side today, prove the point beyond question.

Urged by leading skin specialists, that rule is based on keeping the skin and pores clean of age-inviting accumulations. Its whole secret is the KIND of soap one uses. A true complexion soap is meant, a soap like Palmolive, made for one purpose only; to safeguard the complexion. Others may prove too harsh.

The rule to follow if guarding a good complexion is your goal

So, largely on expert advice, more and more thousands of women turn to the balmy lather of Palmolive, used this way.

Wash your face gently with soothing Palmolive Soap, massaging the lather softly into the skin. Rinse thoroughly, first with warm water, then with cold.

If your skin is inclined to be dry, apply a touch of good cold cream—that is all. Do this regularly, and particularly in the evening.

Use powder and rouge if you wish. But never leave them on over night. They clog the pores, often enlarge them. Blackheads and disfigurements often follow. They must be washed away.

Avoid this mistake

Do not use ordinary soaps in the treatment given above. Do not think any green soap, or one represented as of olive and palm oils, is the same as Palmolive.

And it costs but 10c the cake! So little that millions let it do for their bodies what it does for their faces. Obtain a cake—then note the difference one week makes.

Retail Price 10c MADE IN CANADA

Palmolive Soap is untouched by human hands until you break the wrapper—it is never sold unwrapped

PRESENTATION MADE BY YOUNG PEOPLE

Miss Olive Hartshorn Leaving to Enter Kingston Hospital For Training.

On Thursday evening the young people of Gospel Hall gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hartshorn, 10 Victoria avenue, in honor of the departure of Miss Olive Hartshorn to Kingston General Hospital. The many friends of Miss Hartshorn are sorry to hear of her departure, but wish her every success. Miss Hartshorn was the recipient of a very beautiful parasol, a token of the friendship and esteem in which she was held while a resident of Peterborough.

The address was read by Miss Helen Mulligan and the gift was presented by George Butcher.

Miss Hartshorn replied with a few words of appreciation for the expression of friendship shown in such a tangible way and that she would retain happy memories of her many acquaintances that she was so sorry to leave behind.

A very enjoyable evening was spent followed by refreshments.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

The new type of bathing suit cut low at the back. This model is of printed silk with narrow shoulder straps.

If you follow the fashion of wearing evening gowns cut low at the back—or if you plan to do so next autumn—choose your bathing suit for this summer's holidays with care. It should either be cut extremely low in the back, or high enough to give protection to neck and shoulders. I might add that if you are a brunette you are better entitled to the former choice. The high-cut bathing costumes are a better choice for blonds. That ought not to be an unwelcome bit of advise because the high-cut bathing suits are every bit as smart—even extreme—as those that are cut with an extremely low decolletage.

Last summer the extremely low-backed bathing costumes made their appearance at smart French bathing beaches—and frequently the low cut was not part of the original designing. Women had simply found that while a back entirely sunburned was decidedly smart beneath the low decolletage of the new evening gowns, a back unburned only down to the shoulder blades was quite the reverse. So they slashed down their bathing costumes to suit these new requirements.

Fashion now sets a premium on a nicely sunburned skin or rather on what we know in this country as a well-tanned skin, but it is one thing to have a smooth, even coat of tan, and another thing to have a skin blistered and parched by the effects of the sun's rays. By taking the most usual sort of precautions the brunette French woman's skin shows no such irritation from the effect of sun and seashore. There is enough brunette in most American women to make it possible for them to show the same fashionable tone of skin. But the true blond doesn't tan at all—her skin merely reddens, blisters, becomes parched and then peels. And for such women the high-necked bathing costume should be chosen.

HOROSCOPE
The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

FOR TUESDAY, MAY 1, 1928.

Astrologers read this as rather a threatening day in which adverse planetary influences are strong.

It is a day not auspicious for traveling or for moving, since surprising experiences may be expected.

Wisdom lingers under this sway, it is asserted by the seers, and for this reason it is well to delay important decisions.

Under this direction of the stars it is easy to be deceived and persons may be cheated in unforeseen ways.

The rule is not favorable to aviation since accidents may be more numerous than usual.

All the signs appear to presage much befuddling of the public mind over political issues. Voters will grope with unusual blindness.

While this rule prevails there may be an inclination toward excessive weariness, especially among intellectual workers.

Inasmuch as this month is strongly influenced by Neptune there is likely to be even more political propaganda extant than is common in presidential years.

Women now come under a rule making for ambition to reach legislative positions, but they appear to be subject to disappointing aspects of the stars.

The stars appear to be friendly to workers and to their political preferences.

Democracy will gain headway in the British Isles and social lines will vanish in other European countries, it is foretold.

Engineers are subject to the best possible influences at this time when many will achieve great success.

Persons whose birthdate it is may expect journeys and changes in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be inventive and able to realize on their brain products.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE SEARCH FOR THE TALISMEN

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Ever since man emerged from the jungle he has been looking for the talisman that will make him healthy, happy, and wise without any effort on his part.

The ancients actually set out on such grandiose quests as the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, the fountain of youth, and the philosopher's stone by means of which they hoped to turn everything into gold. Objectives that were calculated to make them rich or famous or beautiful or youthful.

We are inclined to laugh at these Old Timers as misguided, ignorant old fogies who lived in the dark ages and were merely children in their mental capacity. Yet we are no less eager to find a short cut to health, happiness, and success.

The quest for the talisman represents the flight from reality. It is a form of daydreaming in which we get all we want by the mere wishing. In the world of everyday life the things we cherish are not easily attained. In fact we usually fail entirely. Hence we hope and trust to find an easy way through some sort of hocus pocus.

We know that this is absurd. We are too enlightened to believe in magic and yet we keep right on acting as though we believed in it, that somehow or other things are going to break right for us. This is one way of keeping up our courage and maintaining our morale.

It is more than that. It does give us what we want, in our imagination. All too frequently this is about as close as we shall ever come to attaining our heart's desire.

The dope fiend has found a substitute for his talisman. The rest of us employ milder means to secure the same ends. The motive is identical. We are all searching for the talisman.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THINK OF THE FLAG

Think of the flag as something more
Than something men in battle bore;
Think of the red, red
Blood they shed
To keep it waving overhead;
But think of the blue, blue
Heavens, too—
The gifts of peace it gives to you!

Think of the flag as something fine;
Not only yours, not only mine:
Think of the bright, bright
Stars of white
That shine for all the world tonight—
Not you, not me,
But all the free,
Whatever race their race may be!

Think of the flag as something dear;
Not something far but something near:
Think of the brave, brave
Men who gave
Their lives, their all, that flag to save—
The emblem of
A thing to love;
This good old land it floats above!

SHOPPING IN THE EMPIRE.

Empire Shopping Week is over, but the lesson it was designed to teach should remain in the minds of our citizens, even although as a community we failed in some respects to embrace the opportunity of making the campaign of real educational value in regard to Empire-made goods.

We at least must have learned some things we didn't know about the quality and variety of Peterborough-manufactured articles, the displays made by local industries being distinctly creditable, and while the merit of goods made in other parts of the Empire was not accentuated as much as The Examiner hoped it would, the campaign at all events will do some good, and another occasion of the same kind may produce more general co-operation.

Our trade returns indicate that there was every justification for seeking to arouse in this country an interest in the products of the Empire.

From foreign countries last year, we imported $800,000,000 worth of goods, a large part of which might have been bought at home or from some other country in the Empire.

That in itself is a condition that should cause some thought, and it is to be hoped that the week that has just closed has done something to offset this state of affairs.

BRING UP BRITISH PERCENTAGE

Of 2,095 immigrants landed in Winnipeg by the Canadian National Railways up to March 16 this year but 300 were British.

In Saskatchewan, since March 1, the British settlers out of 855 new arrivals numbered but 100.

The Canadan Pacific Railway carried into Winnipeg in three days 170 Britishers and 1,680 aliens, most of them from Southern Europe.

At Prince Albert, between March 1 and April 21, there were only 18 British among 225 arrivals.

These startling figures, called to public attention by Bishop Lloyd of Saskatchewan, will serve to emphasize The Examiner's reference on Saturday to the need of restricting foreign immigration in accordance with British arrivals of the previous year, as recommended by the Social Service Council of Canada.

Can we afford to go on peopling the Western Provinces with German, Hungarians, Poles, Ruthenians, Dukhobors, Russian and Mennonites at the rate of ten aliens to every new British settler?

Why are we not getting more immigrants from the British Isles?

And how was it possible for Australia, much further away from the Motherland, to attract 93,000 British settlers last year out of a total immigration of 113,000 people?

Australia is determined to remain British, and has no trouble apparently in building up her population of British stock; in view of the figures in regard to new arrivals in Western Canada, we in this city may well ask ourselves where we are drifting?

TAX HIGHER THAN AMERICAN PRICE.

The present prices of cigarettes in the United States, where consumers are enjoying the experience of buying at a record low mark, stresses the absurdity of the burdensome tax on cigarettes in this country, from which no relief was afforded by the Budget brought down during the present session.

Surely it is a ridiculous state of affairs that across the international line cigarette consumers can purchase standard brands of cigarettes for less than we in Canada have to pay in cigarette tax alone.

The new wholesale price to large retail chain stores in the United States, according to the Financial Post, is 10.58 cents per package of 20 cigarettes, and the same authority declares that the A. and P. stores will sell these cigarettes at two packages for 23 cents, or 11½ cents for 20 cigarettes.

And here the excise tax is 12 cents for a package of 20 cigarettes.

How any justification can be found for keeping in force a Canadian tax that is higher than the total United States retail price on the same commodity is a mystery to most people.

The disparity in prices cannot fail to increase the smuggling of cigarettes, by which not only the Canadian manufacturers, wholesale and retail handlers of cigarettes but the Dominion Treasury will suffer.

The Canadian consumer can see nothing fair in paying 12 cents in taxes on an article that is selling just across the border for 11½ cents.

OUR PIONEERS' OVERSIGHT.

If we have one fault to find with our pioneer ancestors it is that they lacked the vision to provide sufficient roads for this motor age. While they were clearing the land and wresting a livelihood from its fertility, with such recreation as the fashioning of durable fences from pine stumps and huge boulders, why could they not have foreseen the day, not so remote from their own after all, when the roads they marked out for us would be intolerably cluttered with swift automobiles impatient of enforced slowth.

Most of our inheritance has been a goodly possession, although much of it has disappeared in disuse. But our highways are deep set in macadam, and their permanence is being made more secure by the paving art of modern engineers. Here and there we may round off an angle and straighten out an S "jog," but for the most part we follow the lines our forefathers laid down for us.

In the corduroy era travel could hardly have been a comfort. Certainly there was no taint of luxury in such a combination as a bumping buckboard and a corduroy road, and if there hadn't been taverns every five miles or so, there must needs have been some other kind of rest stations. It may indeed be that the carriages of those days were regarded as luxuries beyond the means of the struggling farmer and townsman. Such values and ideas should be known in the light of their own generations. To have heard the late Sheriff Hall describe his stage coach journeys from Toronto through Cobourg to Peterborough was to have envied him those youthful pleasures of humanity and sentiment which have been supplanted by the mechanical excitements which we welcome not as a substitute but a vast improvement in the fine art of living.

At any rate we find ourselves with a scarcity of motor roads, and as each member of the family drives his own and the automobile manufacturer's bogey of super-saturation finally overtakes him, the tangles and vexations of traffic will not grow less. In that respect the pioneers of this country failed us. If travel was a hardship to them they probably felt that they could do with less rather than more of it. Hence the long fyles of Sunday motorists, strung along so closely on the ribbon of road that cutting out may be penalized.

Walking may yet be restored to its former place as a relaxation instead of being merely an exercise for sedentary workers, or those strange folk who like to swing along feeling the sod beneath their feet, the yielding of pine needles to their stout boots and the quiet of the age-old countryside lulling their wearied spirits.

NO CUT IN TAX BILL.

The average cost of government to a family of five in Canadian cities is over $471 a year. It varies between $275 in Charlottetown to $620 in Victoria. Thus the cost of government must be recognized as a very considerable factor in the average family's cost of living.

There is no distinct downward trend in the cost of government in Canada. In most of the cities studied by the Citizens' Research Institute in its annual survey of costs of government in Canada, the cost of government citizens' tax bill—including municipal, provincial and federal expenditures—increased in 1926 over 1925. The average for all cities was down very slightly.

The disturbing feature of the current tendency in governmental costs in Canada is that the Provinces and municipalities show no particular dispositon to curb their expenses. As rapidly as the central authority at Ottawa has reduced the burden of taxation, the smaller governmental units have piled up new accounts to offset any gain that might have been achieved. Cities and towns have been on a spending spree in Canada since the end of the war. A luxury scale of municipal living has been indulged in. Prosperity, with consequent growth in urban populations, will no doubt save us from serious after-results, but the problem of finding the money to pay city taxes has been intense in recent years for many business concerns and economically middle-class folk. The tax bill on one $10,000 home in Toronto is over $400 this year. And there are many cities in Canada where it would be higher.

We can not count on very serious reductions in the per capita total of federal expenditures. The war debt is gradually being paid off or refunded at a saving in interest costs; some other war charges are also falling. The national railways are less of a burden in the tax bill than formerly. Some further improvement in these directions may be anticipated, but it would be safe to assume that as they are effected the money will find other governmental uses. Any reductions in tax rates that we are allowed to enjoy, will ensue from expanding customs duties, sales tax and income tax revenues, following in the wake of good business, rather than from serious efforts to reduce the scale of governmental expense.

In fairness to the federal government, it should be pointed out that, apart from war expenditures, the cost of government at Ottawa has not increased as rapidly as the cost of wages, salaries and all other services and commodities that the government buys. Allowing for higher prices, and excluding war expenditures, Ottawa is spending less today than before the war. Thus we have taken up some slack in our ordinary expenditures in order to meet the emergency expenditures of the great calamity. Any thrifty family would do the same thing. If it were called upon to pay an especially large hospital bill, let us say, it would cut down on its scale of living. Ottawa has done that, although our Provinces and municipalities have not.

There are many directions in which the federal government service requires expansion. Our growing export trade will require advertising campaigns, grading and marketing assistance, more trade commissionerships, even perhaps some steamship subsidies, etc. The rise of the aeroplane will mean some expense to adapt it to the use of the postoffice. The desire to promote key industries by means other than the tariff, which is too much the subject of controversy, will bring into the realm of practical politics proposals for subsidies such as are now given on bituminous coal, on Maritme Provinces, merchandise moving on the railways and on copper bars. Iron and steel, iron ore and some other commodities may be the subject of such bounties.

If we are going to have real tax reduction, the cities will have to play an important part in doing the job.—Financial Post.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., April 30 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here Saturday was extremely dull, there being practically no demand from foreign buyers. The trade in car lots in the domestic market was also of a limited character, but the undertone was firm.

A moderate amount of business was done in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour and prices were firmly maintained.

The trade in all lines of millfeed continued active under a good demand from the United States and prices were firm. Little business was done in standard grades of rolled oats, but values were steady. A fairly active business was done in eggs in a jobbing way and prices were unchanged. The receipts Saturday were 896 cases.

The demand for butter was again confined to small lots to meet immediate wants. The undertone was easy but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 1,156 cases.

Extreme dullness again marked the trade in cheese, but prices ruled stead. The receipts were 421 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Ills., April 30 (Canadian Press).—Immense buying of future deliveries of wheat overwhelmed the influence of big profit-taking sales Saturday and the market outbid itself smashing high price records. Unfavorable crop reports from Europe added to the effect of domestic crop troubles, which included dust storms over sections both of Nebraska and of Kansas as well.

Closing quotations on wheat were buoyant, 3 to 3¾ cents net higher at the day's top level, with corn unchanged to ⅝ cent down; oats varying from ½c decline to an equal advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 10 cents.

Although fluctuating rapidly at times, the wheat market here showed a general upward trend right from the start, regardless of the fact that Liverpool prices were laggard. It promptly developed that Chicago houses with European connections were among the most active buyers, and this was apparently explained later when crop damage reports came from Austria, Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia. Meanwhile, in addition to news of Nebraska and Kansas dust storms, a persistent absence of rain continued to be reported from the greater forecast not only gave scant hope of any appreciable moisture soon where needed but suggested likelihood of abnormal high temperatures instead.

Impetus for the upward swing of the wheat market Saturday was also furnished by Washington advices early in the day that European crops had probably suffered injury from severe cold weather accompanied by frosts, snow and heavy rains. In particular, it was stated that concern was felt for Polish and French crops which had already suffered from too much moisture. The Washington reports said likewise that late Spring in Russia had been unfavorable, and that in the Steppes region there had been considerable Winter killing, necessitating immediate aid for re-seeding.

Corn action most of the time was the reverse of that in wheat, warmer weather forecast for this week was expected to promote corn planting. Oats derived relative strength from frost reports, unfavorable for the new oats crop.

Provisions averaged easier, sympathizing with weakness of hog values and of corn.

GOD'S MINUTE

My prayer is unto Thee, O Lord. Ps. 69:13.

O God, our Father, give us Thy blessing in these moments of spiritual communion with Thee. We come before Thee in a deep sense of our own unworthiness. We have sinned in thought and word and deed. Yet hear us, as we turn to Thee [illegible] grant us again Thy peace. And give us grace to serve Thee in newness of life, to the glory of Thy Name. We thank Thee for Thy constant goodness; for the bounty which has supplied our wants for the providence which has kept us from harm; for the love which has redeemed us from sin; for the grace which has helped us to serve Thee on earth; and for the promise of an inheritance in Heaven.

Keep us from the evil in ourselves from the evil in the world about us; from the selfish, unkind, and impure thoughts; from all hard and bitter words; from doing that which we ought not to do, and from leaving undone that which we ought to do. Keep us in the constant sense of our membership in Christ; in the thought that we are His disciples and followers in the love of our Father's house, and in the hope of our eternal home. We ask all in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

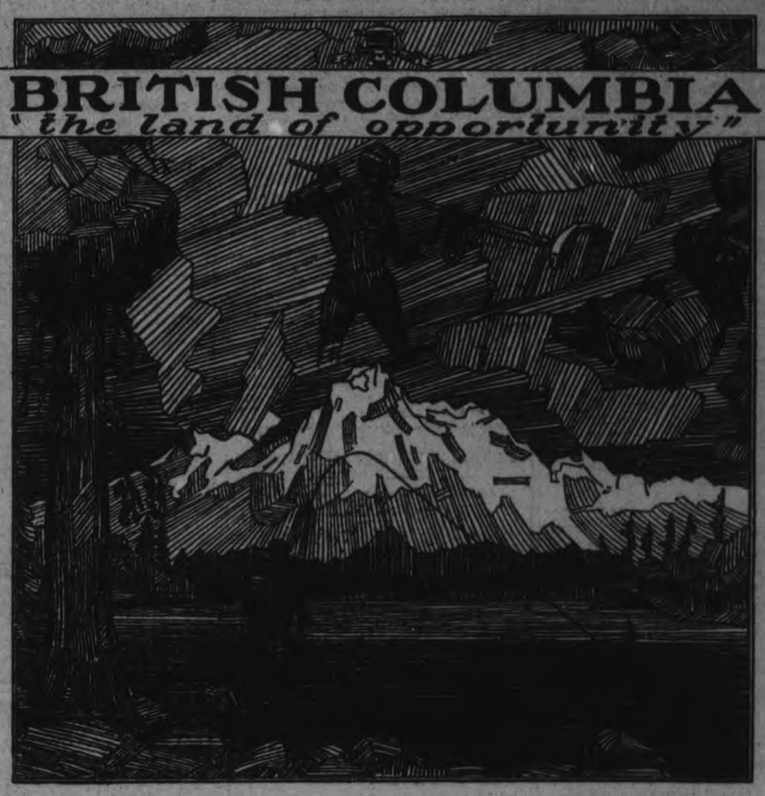
BRITISH COLUMBIA
"the land of opportunity"



The Sportsman's Paradise

WITH a coast line of over 7,000 miles, rivers great and small, and myriad fresh-water lakes, it is not surprising that British Columbia has the greatest wealth of game fish in Canada . . . and is in fact known as the greatest fresh and salt water fishing area on the whole continent! What the State of Maine and the Province of New Brunswick have been to the eastern United States and Canada, British Columbia is to Western Canada. But, New Brunswick and Maine could be tucked away in one corner of British Columbia, and immense fishing and game territories still be left! Thousands of streams have never rippled to the cast of an artificial fly . . . lusty trout lurk in the depths of lakes on which canoes have never floated nor spoons ever spun. Without knowledge of the existence of the white man, a great variety of wild game, ranging in size from chattering chipmunk to noble caribou, roam primeval forests. Truly the Sportsman's Paradise!

SALMON FISHING

Upwards of 40-million salmon a year . . . Spring or "Tyee" and coho . . . are bred and captured in the waters of British Columbia. A great many of these game salmon, weighing from three pounds to sixty-odd, are taken every year by anglers in the salt-water reaches along Vancouver Island and the Mainland. At some seasons of the year they are to be caught in every estuary, and at the mouth of almost every river in the Province . . . but the best months are from July to September.

TROUT FISHING

The trout of British Columbia comprise most of the recognized varieties, though varying greatly in coloring and markings, and in size from a few ounces to as large as thirty pounds . . . Rainbow, Cut-throat, Steelhead . . . game fish, all.

EASILY ACCESSIBLE

Most of the fishing waters of the Province are easily accessible by steamer, rail or stage . . . often within an hour or so of the city. Wagon roads and trails are exceptionally good, and even the practically unfished waters of the Cassiar and Cariboo districts are within easy distance to the man who wishes first-class sport on unfrequented waterways. The non-resident license fee is $10.00.

GAME SEASONS

The season for moose, bear, mountain sheep and goats, in most hunting districts of British Columbia opens September 1st. Others follow shortly. Game birds . . . geese, ducks, grouse, partridge, ptarmigan, pheasants, quail, brant and shore birds, abound.

GOLF ON FAMOUS FAIRWAYS

The grand old game of golf is one of British Columbia's most popular recreations. Its sporty evergreen fairways, famed throughout golfdom, stretch along high valleys cradled in the mountain tops . . . undulating benchlands beside some crystal lake . . . verdant slopes nestling in evergreen forest fringes . . . and sweeping vistas beside the sea.

MOTORWAYS OF DELIGHT

One of the most enjoyable ways to explore the highways and by-ways of beautiful British Columbia, is by motor. Splendid highways intersect the whole interior . . . including the thrilling new motorway into the Cariboo country.

OBITUARY

MRS. MICHAEL GALLIVAN.

STIRLING, April 30.—The death occurred at her home on the Ninth Concession of Sidney, near Stirling, of Mrs. Michael Gallivan, on Thursday afternoon, as the result of a stroke she suffered from a short time ago. Mrs. Gallivan was born in Tyendinaga Township, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Leary, but had lived in this vicinity the most of her life. She was a devout member of St. James' Roman Catholic Church, at Stirling.

She is survived by a husband, one son, John at home, and six daughters: Mrs. Harry Stapley and Miss Lizzie Gallivan of Stirling, Mrs. Herbert Critchford, Mrs. Homer Chastin, Mrs. Robert Farricy of Syracuse, N.Y., and Mrs. Lawrence Kehoe of Detroit, Michigan. The funeral will be held on Monday morning, interment to be made in the Catholic Cemetery, Edward Street.

MRS. MARY J. CASKEY.

STIRLING, April 30.—Mrs. Mary J. Caskey, widow of John Caskey, of Madoc, who has resided with her daughter, Mrs. Robert Reid, on the Second Concession of Rawdon, died on Wednesday, April 25. She had been in poor health for some time, having reached the advanced age of 85 years and 10 months.

The funeral service was held at her late residence, on Friday afternoon, the Rev. C. W. Barrett of St. Paul's United Church being in charge. Interment was made in Lakeview Cemetery, Madoc. Those left to mourn her loss are her son James, on the Madoc homestead; Mrs. Reid, with whom she lived, and who so devotedly cared for her, and Mrs. John Ketcheson, of Belleville.

ROBERT M. GRAHAM.

LAKEFIELD, April 30.—The death occurred early on Sunday morning, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, of Robert Menzies Graham, fourth son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham, of Lakefield, after a short illness.

Mr. Graham was born in Peterborough sixty-seven years ago, but in 1864 he removed with his parents to Lakefield, where he spent the remainder of his life. Following his father's death in 1917 he made his home with his brother, the late William M. Graham and his family. His quiet, refined nature and steadfast uprightness of character won him many friends in the community who will regret his passing.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. B. A. Huckell, his sister-in-law, Mrs. W. M. Graham, and niece, Miss Blanche Graham, with whom he made his home.

A staunch Liberal in politics, he was a Presbyterian in religion, entering the union with Knix church.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late residence and proceed to Lakefield cemetery for interment.

MRS. SAMUEL COVERT.

After an illness of over two years' duration, Mrs. Rachel E. Covert, widow of the late Samuel Covert, passed away on April 20th, at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. John R. Wood, Warkworth.

Mrs. Covert was born May 3rd, 1855, and had been a resident of Percy township, Northumberland county, for fifty years. She was the daughter of Amos and Mary Ann Storey, who were early pioneers of the Enterprise section, Camden township, Addington county.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. John R. Wood, and a son, F. A. Covert, of Montreal, also two sisters, Mrs. A. B. German of Hastings, and Mrs. John Waters of Trent River, and three brothers, Peter and Thomas Storey of Napanee, and Benjamin Storey of Niagara Falls, Ont., and one granddaughter, Miss M. E. Covert, of Montreal, Quebec.

After a short service at the home, conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, St. Paul's United church (Methodist) Warkworth, the remains were laid to rest in Warkworth cemetery on April 22nd.

Mrs. Covert was highly respected by her neighbors and friends, and her death is deeply regretted. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved ones, especially Grace (Mrs. John R. Wood) who tenderly cared for her mother through her declining days.

BARON DE ROPPE

Cottagers at Upper Stoney Lake, who met the Baron Nicholas de Roppe, when he was the guest of Harry Grubbe a year ago, will regret to hear of his sudden death in Chicago three days ago.

The Baron Nicholas de Roppe was born in Russia, a son of the Count de Roppe, and educated at St. Petersburg at the great military college there. He became an officer in the Russian Army in the Great War and was wounded. The family estates were lost and after many hardships he came to Canada to begin life again. After his visit to Stoney Lake, he was sent to Brantford, Ont., by the Massey Harris Company, and while on a business trip to Chicago he developed pneumonia and died after an illness of three days.

Canada has easily the finest inland fishing in the world but our splendid food and game fish require plenty of clean, cold water in order to ensure prolific reproduction. A condition which cannot exist if forest fires are allowed to strip the land, causing drought, erosion, and lack of shade.

"WHY WASHING TAKES SO MUCH OF YOUR TIME"

by HILDA DORAN ROSS
Home Economics Counselor

SOME housewives divide their washing—the regular washing and the fine things which need special care. This makes two washings—twice as much work.

"As Home Economics Counselor, I have found that this is one of the most common mistakes made by housewives. They know that ordinary laundry soap ruins fine, dainty clothes. But they do not know that they can get a fine, pure soap which is cheap enough to use for everything—and which will not hurt filmy silks and laces if they can be washed in water at all.

"It has been part of my work for many years to study soap. Finally, I discovered Princess Soap Flakes. They are fine pure soap in thin flakes which dissolve almost instantly. They contain no harsh chemical filler or harmful free caustic, which are the elements in soap so ruinous to clothes and so hard on your hands. My tests proved that Princess Soap Flakes are best for any type of washing. And they have the added advantage of being economical. A little of this pure soap makes mountains of foaming suds, wonderfully effective for any washing or cleaning task."

DON'T HAVE RED HANDS

Arthur Currie seeks. It is to have the stories of Mons which have been circulating during the last ten years set right. "Fifty thousand dollars or five times fifty thousand dollars could not compensate me if I lose this case," he told the court from the witness box when Mr. Preston asked him why he had not sued one of the papers that had copied the article and which was owned by a multi-millionaire. He would have some chance of getting his money from such a paper as that. But Sir Arthur replied that Mr. Preston and Mr. Wilson had been the first to put the story in print and had added an extra sting, and therefore he had entered an action against them when they had not retracted the statement after he had asked them to do so.

From beginning to end, the court room has been jammed with interested auditors who were anxious to hear the case which will, in all probability go down in Canadian history. Four men from the historical records section of the Department of National Defense, Ottawa, have attended the entire proceedings with piles of documents referring to the case. Frequently they were requested to secure more of them and these were wired for to Ottawa. A copy of an order issued by Field Marshal Foch was secured from the United States Department of War at Washington. There was not a copy of the order in Ottawa and there was no time to secure one from the department in England.

A special map of huge proportions occupied a prominent position at the right hand of Justice Rose during the last few days of the proceedings. It showed the area around Mons where the Canadians were operating when hostilities ceased. An ordinary, red-colored yard stick was the "weapon" used to re-direct the movements of the corps. This time, even the private soldier had the opportunity of outlining the operations all along the front so far as the map showed and he was capable of doing.

Was Unable to Get Good Nights Sleep

Manitoba Lady Highly Praises Dodd's Kidney Pills

"Without Dodd's Kidney Pills, I feel life would be a burden," writes Mrs. Mary McMillan of Austin, Man. "I always keep a box in the house. I am very much troubled with my kidneys, being bothered with Backache, Headache and Urinary Troubles. Was unable to sleep at night, but after taking Dodd's Kidney Pills feel completely relieved."

Many women suffer periodically with Backache and, as middle age approaches, the pain grows more severe. Rest may give temporary relief, but Dodd's Kidney Pills strengthen the Weak Kidneys and remove the cause of the pain. A trial will surely convince you.

ROTARY DISTRICT CONFERENCE OPENS

Members of More Than Fifty Clubs Meeting To-day in Toronto.

On April 30th and May 1st there will be held in Toronto, Canada, a members of Clubs in what is known as the Twenty-seventh District.

The local Rotary Club together with some fifty-four other Clubs in Ontario, Northern New York State and a small section of the State of Pennsylvania, comprise the 27th District. The District Conference is a high spot in the Rotary year. It ranks second only to the International Convention in importance. Fifty-two of these gatherings are being held in the United States and Canada this Spring. It is estimated that the total attendance for the series will be well over fifty thousand. In the Twenty-seventh District there are approximately thirty-five hundred members and of this number at least ten or twelve hundred together with some four or five hundred of their ladies, are expected to attend the coming Conference in Toronto.

The International Officer supervisenor. In the Twenty-seventh ing the District is the District Gov-District the Governor is selected alternately from a Club on each side of the International boundary. The Governor of the Twenty-seventh District this year is David M. Wright of Stratford, Ontario, and at one time a member of the Dominion Parliament.

The Conference in Toronto will last two days and will consist of general sessions, round table discussions and entertainment features. The discussions will include such subjects as Ethical Business Methods, Rotary Extension, the Relief of Crippled Children, Boys' Work, Civic Responsibilities of Rotarians, etc.

The Rotary movement has shown a most unusual and interesting growth in recent years. Starting with one Club in Chicago, Ill., in 1905 it showed little progress until 1910 when the first Convention was held and an association was formed. At that time there were but sixteen Clubs with a total membership of less than two thousand.

Shortly after the formation of the organization known as Rotary International, Clubs were organized in Canada and England and the work of extension has gone on until now there are more than twenty-seven hundred Clubs, located in forty-four countries, conducting their meetings in various languages, but all alike in the ideals and principles and in the fact that weekly meetings are held and good fellowship prevails.

The members of the Rotary Club of Toronto have been engaged for several week in the task of planning the arrangements for the business sessions as well as entertainment for the Rotarians and their ladies who will attend the Conference. The Toronto Club is one of the largest in the District and the facilities for entertaining a group of this size in Toronto are unexcelled. The members from all parts of the District are anticipating a most interesting and profitable Conference in Toronto.

Gnawing
the very roots of health
...Yet easily prevented

THERE are women whose beauty fades—men who just fall short of success because, gnawing at the very roots of their well-being, is that dread scourge: Constipation.

Well does the medical profession know that Constipation "is the mother of most illness". Over and over the physician will tell you that insufficient roughage in the diet is a chief cause of constipation.

Post's Bran Flakes provides roughage of the regular kind in the diet—is not only good for you, but good to eat—and, taken regularly, will nearly always bring relief.

Make this two weeks' test and note the difference

It is dangerous to experiment with patent medicines and drug laxatives. They bring only temporary relief and may make matters much worse. Ordinary cases of constipation caused by too little roughage in the diet should yield to Post's Bran Flakes. If your case is abnormal, don't experiment. Consult a competent physician.

Constipation must not be neglected. Start a two weeks' test now. Order a package of Post's Bran Flakes from your grocer.

Start by eating a dish of Post's Bran Flakes for breakfast. Eat it as a cereal with milk or cream. You will be delighted with the crispness and the delicious flavor. You will find it as good as any cereal you ever tasted. Do this every day for two weeks. We predict you will find a real difference in the way you feel and that you have been "regular" all the time. But don't stop at the end of two weeks. Eat Post's Bran Flakes every morning for health and regularity. Post's Bran Flakes is sold by all grocers in a wax-wrapped package. Ready to eat.

MUSKRAT PELTS FAIRLY PLENTIFUL

Tom Curvin Hears Tales of Poaching During Fall and Winter.

Muskrat pelts bought by Tom Curvin this week average up to $2.20. He said yesterday that he had bought about 10,000 skins in this district, Tweed being the farthest point of delivery.

"Counting express and others items, the pelts cost $2.20", said Mr. Curvin. "I got quite a few Rice Lake rats, and the Tweed rat was exceptionally good this year. Taking the pelts as they come in, I find that they are a pretty fair sample this year."

Several trappers in the city during the week reported that they had found numerous evidences of what they called "poaching", that is catching rats out of season. Some of them were taken in the fall, and others in the winter. The evidence of the fall catch is the rat's house that is only partly completed, and the winter poaching is indicated by the "houses" that were broken into. Poachers seem to have been fairly active in some of the remoter marshes last fall, one trapper informed The Examiner.

HELPFUL SERIES OF TALKS GIVEN

John Tully's Lectures Continue For Some Time Yet at Legion Hall.

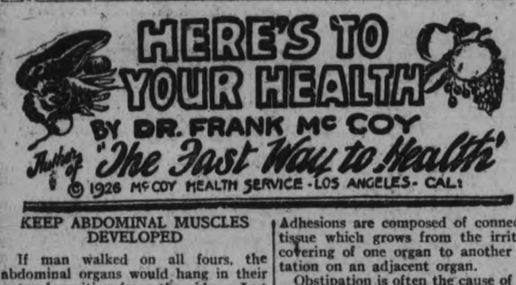
Is the amendment to an amendment amendable?

Where is the sale first made?

These are sample questions which will come up in John Tully's course of lectures on effective speaking, parliamentary procedure and the rules of debate, also in the art and practice of salesmanship, beginning next Wednesday evening. Character analysis, and mental healing are other branches of the personal work which Mr. Tully will direct to the class now forming at the Canadian Legion Hall. The general subject of his course might be summed up in the title "Character Analysis and Application of Psychological Principles."

The class which is still open to the public has so far consisted of ten free lectures that are usually paid for. These will be followed by the intensive course of twelve personal lessons with the full written text in the four subjects already enumerated. The attendance has averaged more than 150 men and women who have been so impressed by the instructiveness and practicability of the course that they have been recruiting agents among their friends.

Next Wednesday evening's address is for men only, and the address in the afternoon is for women only. Mr. Tully, as a result of his long experience in this work, wastes no words in the presentation of his themes.



KEEP ABDOMINAL MUSCLES DEVELOPED

If man walked on all fours, the abdominal organs would hang in their natural position from the sides. Just because he has learned to walk erect, these organs easily sag down and lie on each other in the lower abdominal cavity. The stomach and intestines lie upon the lower organs of the pelvis, pushing them out of position down to the very basin of the pelvis. The consequence is that many faulty positions of these organs are developed.

One of the commonest troubles from prolapsus of the abdominal organs is that caused by kinks in the colon. These may occur in the large colon or in the small intestine, and are due either to a prolapsus of these organs, or to adhesions which pull some part of the intestine out of its normal position. Adhesions are composed of connective tissue which grows from the irritated covering of one organ to another irritation on an adjacent organ.

Obstipation is often the cause of constipation, and means obstruction of the intestines. Without prolapsus or inflammation of these organs, such obstipation could not exist, but the fact that it does exist shows that prolapsus is very common.

Weakening of the abdominal muscles can be cited as the principal cause of any gastro-enteroptosis. (That sounds terrible, doesn't it?) That large word simply means prolapsus of the stomach and intestines.

Few people keep their abdominal muscles well enough developed so that their abdomens are flat, but allow a bay window to develop, with a sagging belly which distorts their whole anatomical structure. This protrusion of the abdomen is unlovely to the sight, but more than that, it is positively dangerous to health, as it indicates an unhealthy condition of all of the organs of the abdomen. As this bay window protrudes and sags down, it is evidence of the gradual weakening of the muscular tone of the entire alimentary canal. Constipation and costiveness must result from this sagging.

There is no way you can restore these organs to their normal tone and bring them back to their proper position except by taking vigorous exercise for the abdominal muscles. Those exercises taken while lying on the back called the "setting up" exercises are the best for this purpose, and you can develop these muscles equally as well as the prize fighter or wrestler.

Do not make the mistake of thinking that athletes are born with any better opportunity for developing their muscles than you have. If you will develop the washboard muscles of the abdomen of the prize fighter, you can rest assured that you will not suffer from any kind of prolapsus.

Do not waste your time taking exercises while standing, as these exercises have no appreciable effect upon the abdominal muscles. Take all of your exercises while lying on your back on the floor. Practice the exercises slowly at first, and gradually increase until you can do them vigorously for at least fifteen minutes a day.

The flatter your abdomen becomes, the greater your degree of strength and health, with a decrease in weight, and an added buoyancy to your walk.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Ethel D. asks: "Could you tell me a remedy for my fingers. They get extremely cold, then they start swelling first in the joints and then work up to the fingertips. The soreness starts by small lumps forming under the skin, then becoming real red. By touching anything cold my fingers get blue and numb. Would like to find a cure, as I have to work for a living."

Answer: Probably you are having some kind of functional heart trouble. Your physician should be able to tell you whether my guess is correct. Send for special articles on heart derangements and poor circulation.

Question: Mrs. R. W. writes: "Please tell me if you consider rhubarb a good food."

Answer: If rhubarb could be made palatable without the addition of so much sugar in its preparation, my answer would be "yes," but as it does require this excessive amount of sugar, I never recommend it.

Question: J. K. H. writes: "Four years ago I was operated on for frontal sinus trouble. All went well till this past month, since when the incision in my nose and part of my eyebrow has been breaking open about every week, with a discharge of pus and bloody serum. What causes this, and how can it be stopped?"

Answer: Operations for sinus and antrum trouble are usually disappointing, as one operation follows the other in an attempt to get rid of the pus condition which can be cured only through cleaning up the blood stream. A ten day fast should clear up your trouble, and if you will then live on a suitable diet it should not return. I have written a special article called A GOOD CLEANSING DIET which tells you exactly how to take a short fast followed by a cleansing diet. Send a large, self-addressed envelope with your request for this article.

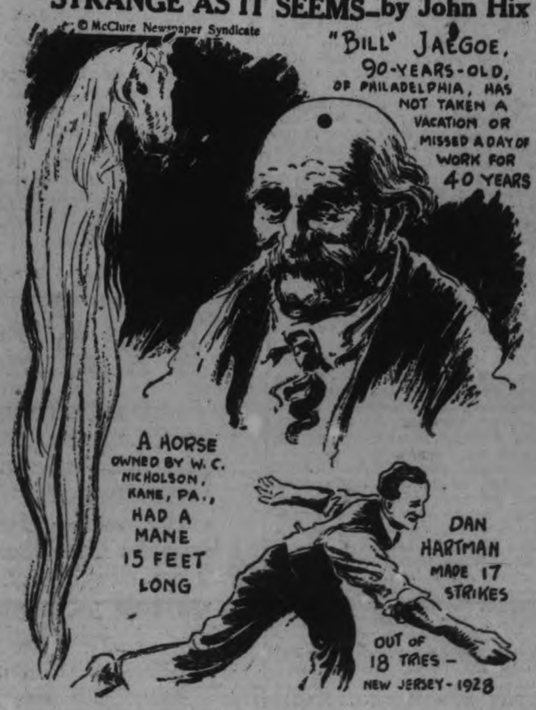
STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—by John Hix



CONTENDERS in the 1928 Trap Shooting Events are Misses Longworth and Bailey. Their marksmanship has proved as faultless as their smiles which Pepsodent keeps bright.

It's Film on Teeth

that makes them lustreless, "off color." You must remove it. It fosters serious tooth and gum disorders.

IT'S film that makes teeth ugly. That turns them gray and dulls their brilliance. And to film are traced most of the commoner tooth and gum disorders of the day.

You can feel film with your tongue—a slippery, viscous coating. It clings so stubbornly that ordinary brushing fails to remove it successfully. Germs breed in it, and they, plus tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

To remove film, dentists prescribe the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent. It will make an amazing difference in the whiteness of your smile.

ACTRESS MAKES HIT AS LADY TEAZLE

Jean Forbes-Robertson Gives Fine Presentation in "School for Scandal."

LONDON, April 28 (Canadian Press). — The recent appearance of Miss Jean Forbes Robertson, daughter of Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, in the role of Lady Teazle at the "Old Vic." theatre here has led a London dramatic critic to remark that she "has in her the making of a fine, perhaps a great, actress." He says:

"Lady Teazle may be regarded as a touchstone of Jean Forbes-Robertson's art. We know that she can simulate a wan tragic beauty and bring ethereal on to the stage, but hardly been tested. In "The School for Scandal" she played the famous part superbly. She brought to Lady Teazle a roguish sense of comedy that never finish and style in her acting, and in the screen scene a stern and telling sincerity.

"'It was a good production and one sufficiently unhackneyed to dispense with the needless minuet at the end of the first act. Andrews Leigh introduced many charming touches that improved the quality of the scenes between Sir Peter and Lady Teazle. The play was set with dignity by John Garside, who also gave a clever performance as Sir Peter. Eric Portman made a frank and bouyant Charles and Ernest Milton a good Joseph Surface.

Right Kind of Hat Would Restore Hope

TORONTO, Ont. April 28.—(Canadian Press).—The observant editor of the women's page on the Mail and Empire says:

Do you know what we should like to do, if we have plenty of time? Make friends with all the city's tired charwomen and then take them off to a sympathetic milliner and let her coax them into buying a hat—the very most becoming hat possible.

So many sad-faced women, old before forty some of them, trudge the streets at sundown. No hope in their eyes, no hope in their step—too weary to care. To them there are only the tomorrows that "shall be as this day." What do they care if that hat they are wearing is flat, when crowns are high, or velvet, when the smart people are wearing felt?

Ah, but, being women, they do care—underneath. If only they could have a new hat, just the right sort of hat, how the life would course through them, how quickly they would feel the freshening pulses of the Spring!

Ancient Seals and Legal Papers Used to Illustrate. Lecture.

MONTREAL, Que., April 28.—(Canadian Press).—An exhibit illustrating the various types of manuscripts including the hand-written, the illuminated and the printed, in different countries and in different ages, has been arranged by Dr. G. R. Lomer, McGill University librarian, at the Redpath Library, and is accessible to the public. The immediate purpose of the exhibit is to illustrate a lecture on "The History of the Book". One case contains a fine selection of original documents dating back as early as 1369. Among these is a vellum document, the will of "Madona Nicholosa," witnessed by Petrus de Compostellis, a notary of Venice, bearing the date 1372. There is also a document given by a Venetian judge on September 18, 1369, regarding a judgment respecting disputed property, and a document dated February 11, 1380, involving an award with regard to the inheritance of an estate.

There is a very fine collection of 52 papal seals in lead dating from the time of Innocent 11, 1130, down to the time of Pius X. These leaden discs were affixed by a string or vellum to the Papal Bulls and have the effigy of the Pope on one side and his name on the other. The explanatory note attached to the seals points out that it is a question if a similar collection has ever been offered.

Included in the exhibit is a vellum document with the seal of King George III. There is a document of Queen Mary I. with the great seal attached, being the Royal Letters Patent creating Sir John Bridges a baron. The great seal of Queen Elizabeth and Queen Victoria are also among the specimens.

FOREST GROWTH RATE

The popular conception that Canada's forests are growing rapidly is entirely erroneous. In Europe, by intensive cultural treatment, some forests may yield as high as 3 per cent annual growth but in the Dominion, with out unregu'ated and seriously depleted forests, it is very doubtful whether the rate of accretion is even 1 per cent.

Paddock Sets New Record For 175 Yard Dash

BEATS OWN TIME RECORD

Makes Dash in 17 2-5 Seconds at the Pennsylvania Carnival.

WALL COLLAPSES.

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, April 30. — The combination of a semi-freezing rain, and mud inches deep, and the collapse of a section of the stadium's brick walls that spilled two score or more spectators on the track failed on Saturday to keep Charley Paddock from smashing the world's racord for 175 yards in the relay carnival.

As the bark of the gun sent Paddock and three rivals flying through the mud and rain, a thirty foot section of the retaining wall at the edge of the track yielded to the force of the crowd's push, spilled a ton of bricks and a wild jumble of spectators, including many girls, out on the cinder path

The flashing baby blue clad figure of Paddock, out in front, swept into view at the height of the confusion. Enough of the track was left clear of the jumble for the blonde California flier to swerve and dash by. On sped Paddock, knees pumping high and arms flying, to break the tape six yards in front of Bolwell Scull, Penn. Track captain, and shatter his own world's record.

Paddock's time, after an official parley, was fixed at 17 2-5 seconds, 2-5 of a second faster than the 175-yard mark he set at Salt Lake City last year.

The decathlon championship ended in a victory for Tony Planksy, the husky former Georgetown star, who beat out his nearest rival, Kenneth Doherty, of Detroit, by about 100 points in the two day all-round battle.

This decathlon was an official Olympic test, the finish of which devolved into a sensational duel between Planksy and Doherty.

The former Georgetown star, now representing the St. Alphonsus A.A., of Boston, own three of the ten events, while Doherty captured only one. Planksy compiled a total of 7142.273 points, and Doherty amassed 7041.338.

Ohio state with a flashy array of sorinters and hurdlers, carried off the major honors in relay championships and other features of the closing day's struggle in the mud, rain and chilling atmosphere.

GIANTS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

Braves Win First Game 5-3 New York Take Second 12-8.

ROBINS WIN TWIN.

NEW YORK, April 30.—(Canadian Press).—Boston and New York divided yesterday's double header, the Braves winning the first game 5 to 3 by an eighth inning spurt, and the Giants the second, 12 to 8.

The second game was a slow contest in which many batters were hit hard. The hurlers freely mixed passes with the 23 hits the two teams got.

Barnes weakened after holding the Braves safe for seven innings in the first game. Boston's eight-inning rally was topped off by a homer by Brown. Homers by Terry and Ott accounted for all of the New York runs.

Strengthens Hold on First

The Robins strengthened their hold on first place by beating the Phillies twice at Brooklyn by scores of 3 to 1 and 3 to 0. Great pitching by McWeeny and Clark for the Robins featured the season's first double bill, witnessed by a capacity crowd of 28,000. McWeeny gave the Phils three hits in the opener and Clark plastered them with a five-hit shutout in the nightcap.

Thompson's bad throw while trying to complete a double play in the fourth inning of the first game gave the Robins two runs. Bissonnette accounted for the third marker when he hit the ball over the right field fence in the eighth. Hendrick's homer with Bancroft on base gave the Robins a running start in the first inning of the 2nd game.

Cincinnati at home won a tight game from Pittsburgh, 3 to 2. In the ninth inning, the visitors' first two batters singled, but Rixey bore down and got himself out of a hole. Both Rixey and Kremer were in good shape, but the Reds pecked away at Kremer and scored three runs off him. One of them was a gift by Lloyd Waner, who let Ford's single go through him in the second inning permitting Dawson, who had walked, to score.

Mike Gonzales' single in the twelfth inning, scoring Heathcote, gave the Cubs a 6 to 5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals at Chicago before 30,000 fans.

With Sheriff Blake on the mound at the start, the Cubs took a five run lead in the first three innings, only to see it melt away in the seventh and ninth innings when the Cards tied the score.

St. Louis used six pitchers and a total of 18 players. Alexander started for St. Louis but was hit hard in the two innings he pitched. Charlie Root, who finished for the Cubs, pitched excellent ball and was given credit for his first win of the season.

Heathcote saved the game for the Bruins in the eleventh inning when he speared Frisch's drive near the right field bleachers. One man was on base at the time.

STAR BEATEN AT EVERY TURN

Final Round of 72 Hole Affair Consisted of Only One Hole.

PLAYED INSPIRED GOLF.

MOORE PARK, England, April 30 (A.P.).—A golfing St George in the person of Archie Compston, big, tousel-headed, blonde Englishman, rose yesterday to slay one of the American dragons who has been feeding steadily on the choicest tidbits of British golf since war time days

Compston gave Walter Hagen, sleek United States professional and former British open champion, one of the most decisive drubbings ever administered an opponent in a big challenge match when he chopped their contest short Saturday with an 18 up and 17 hole to play victory.

Against the man known as the worlds finest match player, one who had beaten Bobby Jones 11 and 9, trounced Abe Mitchell decisively, and added the scalps of all other great players to his collection, the tall, loose-limbed Compston piled up such a score that the final round of the 72-hole affair consisted of only one hole. Compston outplayed Hagen at every turn.

After nearly every drive of the 55 holes, the American flag trailed the Union Jack that marked Compston's ball and usually Hagen was behind on shots to the greens. Hagen lost hole after hole on the carpets, where he is supposed to outrank any living golfer.

Compston played inspired golf in two rounds of 18 holes Friday, sending Hagen home to rest at a disadvantage of 14 holes with blazing rounds of 67 and 66. The American's was 72 and 76, not bad golf under ordinary conditions, but the simple stroking of a normal duffer when confronted with the superb control of the lanky Englishman.

Although Hagen shot a 74 on the first 18 Saturday, Compston maintained his supremacy with another brilliant 70 that matched par for the course. In the three full rounds, Compston clipped seven strokes off par and was 14 under fours for the distance. Hagen was seven over par and one over fours. Probably no living golfer could have weathered the gale of pars and birdies Compston launched at Hagen.

Britain, taking its golf with a seriousness justified by the fact that the game was born within the Isles, found in Hagen's debacle the moral that even a golfer as great as the American cannot flaunt the jealous gods of the game that demand constant practice.

Although he came 5,000 miles to play Compston for a purse of £750, Hagen played but one practice game.

Compston is a glutton for practice and has been at it for months preparing for this match. They say he has worn all the turf off the village common at Penn, his home, drilling on the putts and chips that contributed so largely to his victory.

Saturday and Friday the Englishmen reaped the harvest of this practice and as a result he will enter the British open championship at 7 to 5 co-favorite with Abe Mitchell. Hagen expects to spend a week on the links making up for lost time before entering the classic.

The story of the final round, which left Compston dormie 18 at lunch time with only 18 holes to play, was as the tale of Friday's play. "The Haig" lost 3 holes on the outward nine, two of them by loose putting. He dropped the ninth as a direct result of two ragged putts.

At the short tenth, Hagen missed a yard putt for a birdie two. He said that at this point he gave up all hope of doing anything right, but he won the eleventh with a stymie—the only plus mark on his card. Hagen lost two more and halved the remaining five homeward. A half in fours on the first hole of the final gave Compston the match.

Cards for the first 18 holes were:

First Nine:

Compston.. .. .. ..443444344—34
Hagen.. .. ..444444445—37

Second Nine:

Compston.. .. .. ..353454543—36—70

Barnard Disallows White Sox Protest

CHICAGO, Ills., April 30.—(Canadian Press).—President E. S. Barnard of the American League has disallowed the protest of the Chicago-Detroit game on April 25.

Manager Ray Schalk of the White Sox protested the game after Umpire van Grafian had called out a batter for interfering with the catcher's attempt to throw a White Sox runner out at second. President Barnard ruled that only the umpire's judgment was at issue and no question was raised.

RUTH GETS FOURTH HOMER

Senators Sent to Sixth Straight Defeat 7-5 at Washington.

TIGERS WIN 7-6.

NEW YORK, April 30.—(Canadian Press).—Babe Ruth's fourth home run of the season—a looping smash over the high and far-away right field wall, sent Washington to its sixth straight defeat at the capital yesterday, 7 to 5.

New York had a one-run lead and two men were on base when the Babe connected. Lisenbee, who was the victim of two of Ruth's homers, was pitching. Pennock yielded eleven hits, but never was in serious danger after Ruth's drive.

The Detroit Tigers won the final game of the series at Cleveland 7 to 6 in ten innings. The game was bitterly fought before 22,000 persons. The Indians routed Gibson in the fifth while Miller was relieved at the end of the eighth. Van Gilder and Harder finished the game out.

The Browns pounded Adkins and Connally at St. Louis yesterday to trim Chicago, 5 to 2, for the final game of the series.

Ogden, who has been feeling ill, almost collapsed after hitting a two bagger in the sixth and was relieved by Gray, who held the White Sox scoreless the rest of the game.

Plants Potatoes In Local Garden

Eight days later than last year, Johnny Williams, the market gardener in North Monaghan, planted his first potatoes on Thursday, April 19th. His earliest planting was on April 7th six or seven years ago, three weeks ahead of his start this year. Mr. Williams found the sloping ground at the south end of his property in fairly suitable condition for work, and on Thursday he decided that he had waited long enough. His schedule usually calls for the marketing of some of his new crop prior to July 12th, which date this year is exactly eleven weeks from the day of his first seeding.

Ping-pong, or table tennis, as played nowadays, has become such a fast game that anyone over forty years of age is regarded as being too old for first-class playing.

C.G.E. DEFEATED QUAKER OATS IN LEAGUE GAME

Dawson, Burgess and Hutton Were the Marksmen in the First Half.

C.G.E. 3; QUAKERS 0.

Quakers Failed To Accept Scoring Opportunites Around the Goal.

A large crowd of soccer fans witnessed the C.G.E. team defeat the Quaker Oats eleven by three goals to nil, in the opening league fixture on Saturday afternoon at King Edward Park. Owing to the wind blowing across the pitch, the players had difficulty in controlling the ball at times which forced them to adopt tactics suitable for the conditions prevailing.

THE GAME.

The spin of the coin did not favor any team, because the wind was blowing across the pitch. Quakers were first to become dangerous, and the timely intervention of Blowers nullified their efforts inside the shooting distance. Play thereafter was confined to mid-field which made the half-backs come into prominence through smart tackles against the forwards.

James-Burgess Goal.

It was from one of these manoeuvres that James gained the ball. He drew the defence close to himself, then banged it across to Burgess on the vacant left wing. Quick as a flash, the left winger evaded the full-backs to let drive five yards out. Curtis saved the shot, but had to concede defeat because there was too much force behind it. This reverse did not discourage the losers, in fact they came back with more vigour than usual to keep the C.G.E. full-backs busy, who were aided by the half-backs in close checking. Mann carried the sphere up the field again to have a try for goal, which hit the cross-bar and saved a counter. A few minutes later James scored, but Wade was adjudged offsides.

Dawson First Timer.

Exchanges continued even until a break-away by Hutton increased the C.G.E. account, when a corner-kick was the downfall of the opposing citadel. The right-winger failed to lift the ball, James sending it back to him and the former centred quickly to let Dawson bang the ball into the goal for number two.

No matter what the Quakers endeavored to carry out, their plans never materialised around the goal. In fact Foster, time and again, worked inside the defence to swing the ball in front of the goal, but nobody was present to aid it through. Just before half-time the Quakers' full-backs offset all the attacks in an easy fashion. Buchan on this occasion beat his man nicely, then indulged in some fancy play that culminated in 'Pete' Hutton giving him the legitimate shoulder inside the goal area and in the fraction of a second, landed the ball inside the uprights for the C.G.E. registered goal. Play was in mid-field when half-time arrived. C.G.E. 3, Quakers 0.

HALF TIME.

After the usual respite both teams visited the goal-keepers in rotation without any danger being caused. The pace was hard and fast at this stage, in which free-kicks and throw-ins were the main feature. Eventually the Quaker forwards caused some excitement when the forwards gained the ball around the C.G.E. goal, Henshaw being called upon to save twice in succession from Rankin and Logan.

Quick as a flash, Wade beat back to the other end with the ball at his foot. T. Wilson stopped the progress, the C.G.E. inside left picking it up nicely to be stopped when in the act of shooting. Wade, standing awaiting the outcome, received the ball to his liking and banged for goal. Curtis saving the fast drive amid a round of applause from the fans. As time travelled on, it was very noticeable that the players lacked the necessary training to keep up the fast stride at the opening period. The closing minutes of this half were uninteresting except for the stout resistance that the C.G.E. defence was displaying under heavy Quaker pressure. Full time, C.G.E. 3, Quakers 0.

Goal scorers— C.G.E.: Burgess, Dawson and Hutton. Quakers—Nil.

Quakers—W. Curtis goal, H. Curtis and Buchan, full backs; Carmichael, T. Wilson and Rankin, halves; A. Wilson, G. Logan, Craig, T. Wilson and Foster, forwards.

C.G.E. — Henshaw, goal; Mitchell and Blowers, full-backs; Mann, Robb and Laidler, halves; Hutton, James, Wade, Dawson and Burgess, forwards.

Referee—Alex. McKinley.

EVERTON RETAINS LEAGUE POSITION

Huddersfield Town Putting Up Desperate Battle to Gain Championship.

LONDON, Eng., April 30.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—With cricket already started in England and with the weather most propitious for the summer the followers of soccer are still being held in suspense by the unprecedented condition of affairs in the first and second division of the English League. Judging by the crowds which attended games Saturday, played in boiling heat, there is as much interest in the matches now, with only one week of the season remaining, as there was at the beginning. In the first division Everton, who looked in the mid-season to be making a runaway affair of the championship, and who afterwards slumped badly, are now playing up in their best style. They are in the lead in the standing. Huddersfield Town, who lost the English cup, are fighting hard to get the League championship and are in second place with more games to play than Everton. One of the startling developments has been the collapse of Tottenham Hotspurs, are in danger of pleted their schedule and, though they are reputed to be the richest club in England, are in danger of relegation to the second division. There is an unprecedented tangle at the bottom of the table, which must be straightened out this week, probably by goal averages.

In their game with Burnley yesterday Everton again got remarkable assistance from Dean, their International centre forward, who scored four goals. This player found the net in the first minute of play. Page and Peel then registered for Burnley. Dean equalized and put his team ahead just before half time by completing the hat-trick. Peel tallied again and tied up the score. Martin and Dean scored for Everton before the finish to keep Everton ahead in the League struggle.

On Even Terms in First.

Leicester City and Huddersfield Town battled along on even terms in the first half. Carr, Leicester and Jackson, Huddersfield, each scored Barkas got the winning point for Huddersfield on a penalty when Carr handled.

Arsenal, even though they were playing on their own grounds at Highbury, could not beat the lowly Mancheser United. Rawlings potted the one goal by which the United won in the thirty-eighth minute of play. He scored with a low left-footer.

The Wednesday, seeing demotion in the offing, were in a fighting mood against Sunderland. Halliday registered twice for the Sunderland team, while Hooper and Trotter hit the target for the Wednesday. All this scoring took place in the first half. Hooper later put in the winning shot.

It was the wins of The Wednesday and Manchester United which has made such a muddle of the lower end of the standing Tottenham Hotspurs themselves helped by losing to Liverpool. Brownilow scored Liverpool's lone tally in the first minute of play.

Picking Up.

Blackburn Rovers, who at one time looked as if they might win the English Cup and yet be relegated to the second division, have been picking up points. Yesterday against Sheffield United they played like the champions they are. Partirdge, Sheffield, opened the scoring and then Mitchell and Roscamp of Blackburn scored, the former twice. Opening the second half well in the lead the Rovers took things easy. Phillipson scored for Sheffield in the dying moments of the game.

West Ham United looked to have their match wel in hand at half time, when they went two goals up through scores by Barrett and Loughlin. Barrett scored again soon after the turn round. Then Birmingham re-arranged their forward line with the consequence that Bradford scored twice and Briggs got the equalizer.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"BEN-HUR" THE MIGHTY SPECTACLE WILL BE AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, WITH DAILY MATINEES.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in arrangement with A. L. Erlanger, Charles Dillingham and F. Ziegfield, Jr., offers the world's mightiest attraction at the Capitol Theatre to-night, Tuesday and Wednesday, with daily matinees in the celebrated picture version of "Ben-Hur", to which all New York has crowded for many months and which equally delighted Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia in as many record-breaking runs. This wonderful picturization cost $4,000,000, three years' time and the labors of 150,000 persons in Italy and California.

It culminated in the construction of the gigantic Circus Maximus and race-course of Antioch and in the filming thereon of the thrilling chariot race. Instead of eight horses and the old-time mechanical illusion of the stage show, the new and greater "Ben-Hur" shows twelve teams of four horses.

The details of General Lew Wallace's famous "Tale of the Christ" have been reverently followed. Not only that, the picture heightens the powerful melodramatic and love interest of the play, centering in the four romantic characters of Ben-Hur, Messala, Esther and Iras, enacted by Ramon Novarro, Francis X. Bushman, May McAvoy and Carmel Myers.

AT THE REGENT.

A motion picture unique in that its story was in effect, constructed according to the psychological reactions of the players during the making of the production, is "White Gold," Jetta Goudal's latest star picture directed by William K. Howard for De Mille Pictures Corporation. It will be the big feature for Regent Theatre on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday.

It has another claim to novelty, having been made in the same sequence in which it will appear on the screen. In other words Director Howard started at the opening scene and shot his story straight through, without any of the usual jumping back and forth.

Story of Girl and Drought.

The story briefly is of a girl, accustomed to the excitement of dance hall life, who falls in love with a sheep rancher and finds herself on his ranch in the midst of a terrible drought, her only company being her husband and his father. The father resents the marriage and hates the girl. The drought has brought the two men close to financial ruin. If rain does not come their sheep will die. They have no other interest. They talk and dream sheep, and the girl is neglected and completely alone. Her nerves begin to quiver. The creaking of an unoiled "patent rocker," the honing of a knife, the bleating of the thirsty sheep and above all the terrible, devastating monotony, of hearing only "sheep, sheep, sheep," drive her almost mad.

Another man comes to the ranch with stories of the cities. She is interested. The father successfully capitalizes this interest to arouse the suspicion of the husband. The other man is killed. There is an impasse — the husband's suspicions backed by the father, against the love for the wife.

Players Lived the Story.

"There was only one thing to do," said Mr. Howard, "that was to have the players live the story, to put on the screen their own mental processes as the story ran along. The result was that out of the vague, shadowy outline that we had had came a story of immense drama. It unfolded with amazing rapidity.

"The players were not acting the story, they were living it. How they did it, why each was so inspired, I cannot tell. The fact remains they did. They lost all that inflexibility all that sense of acting that is apparent in so many pictures, and actually were the characters in the story they were creating.

May Upset old Methods.

Of course when shotting a picture in this manner we are forced to start at the beginning and carry it straight along, because each scene gave the cue and the inspiration for the scene to follow. The players were never called upon to jump from drama to comedy and then pick up the drama again. So the main idea never left their minds and they never lost interest. I believe that the result will upset some of the accepted methods of motion picture directing."

ALD. ACKERMAN TO VISIT MINES

Has Interests in Many Important Developments in North Country.

GOING TO MANITOBA.

Alderman C. H. Ackerman's expanding mining interests will take him this week on an extensive trip into Northern Manitoba. To-day he is attending a meeting of the Waite-Ackerman-Montgomery Board in Toronto. He will then proceed west to La Pas, and on his return trip he will spend some time in the Sudbury basin. In this latter connection, Ald. Ackerman is a member of the board of the Chelmsford Mining Corporation, which has received its charter and will be publicly announced next week. This new company has 1,300 acres adjoining the famous Alaska-Tredwell property and an additional 3,300 acres on the north side of the Basin, near the Green holding. Persons who have closely followed the mining market and especially the estimates of the Basin values which have been published by reliable and conservative financial journals will appreciate the significance of the position of the Chelmsford Mining Corporation properties.

Alderman Ackerman has connections in the Manitoba field which will be very extensively employed in exploration and prospecting work this year as soon as the season opens. He is associated with the head of a trading company, which is second only in importance to the Hudson Bay Company. The trading company's trappers and other field force are receiving an intensive, if short, instruction in prospecting, are being sent into mineralized areas of the province. They are waiting only for the departure of winter in that section, and from all accounts the arrival of spring conditions will be the signal for a veritable invasion of prospectors in the Manitoba field. Headquarters will be at La Pas. Tom Montgomery, the man who discovered the Waite-Ackerman mine in the Rouyn district of Quebec, is going to Manitoba to supervise the field work, and will be accompanied by his son.

SEVEN STORES IN SEVEN YEARS

Splendid Record of Mr. H. J. Boyle Since Starting Business in Peterborough.

An example of shrewd business acumen, stick-to-it-iveness and nerve is the record of Mr. H. J. Boyle in Peterborough's business world.

Starting with the one store on Charlotte street, Mr. Boyle has expanded his business till in the short period of seven years, he has now seven stores and a central warehouse from which his chain of cash and carry establishments are supplied.

The last store to be added to his list is that of A. N. Steer, at the corner of Reid and Sherbrooke. This well-known store is being re-stocked with the standard Boyle lines, and its regular customers and all who in future avail themselves of its service, are assured of first quality and closest prices.

Seven stores in seven years is a good enough increase for most men, and whether the annual expansion can be maintained remains to be seen.

Eight and one-half million women workers are employed in the United States in all but thirty-five of the 572 gainful occupations listed.

betterment until we recognize that the root principle is the same in every case.

"This portion of the Word of God presents a social problem. In it we see a bread line long before the 20th century. And the context suggests to us that there are two ways of dealing with such a problem.

Do Nothing.

"In those days the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called His disciples unto Him ,and saith unto them, 'I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat. And if I send them away fasting to their own homes, they will faint by the way, for divers of them came from afar.' And His disciples answered Him, 'From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness?'

"With regard to many of the problems of our time about all that is done is that men and women read about them so that they may talk intelligently about them in societies whose aim is a social uplift. But it is mostly talk. Precious little effort is put forth to give some practical help.

"Very often when an application is made for help the question is asked: 'Is it a deserving case?' If such a question were stripped of all its trappings and looked at in the light of the spirit that prompted it, and then could be shown to those who asked it I don't believe that they would ever ask it again. Who is really a deserving case either in relation to God or men? If God had treated us on that basis there would have been no ray of light to give us the afflict mankind.

Do as Jesus Did.

"Interest yourself in all problems that afflict the human race. Cease to live an aimless, thoughtless kind of a life. Take a practical, sympathetic interest in all the ills that afflict mankind.

"Have, and don't be afraid to show, sympathy for all suffering. Jesus said 'I have compassion for the multitude.' In another place we are told he wac moved with compassion.'And I may add that the only kind of compassion that counts is the sort that 'moves' us to action. The compassion of some folks is at so low a condition of compression that it is only a name. Yet compassion is what men are famishing for. Not kid gloved, scented with rose water or lavender, but a compassion that moves men to Christ like actions.

"To get this you must get Christ's view point. He looked out upon mankind from the cross. That cross was the measure of man's need and the expression of God' love. It holds within it the solution of every social problem; and until we recognize this we are at the best only tinkering with the surface of things and getting nowhere. When we understand the cross we understand the real nature of all problems and are on the highway to a satisfactory solution.

Take Stock of your Assets.

"And He asked them, 'How many loaves have ye?' And they said, 'Seven.' And they had a few small fishes.

"Lay them all at His feet and get His blessing upon them and see how they will be multiplied and used to help those who are in need.

"You will never know your resources till Jesus says to you 'What have you?'

"Lay your mind, your money, and your influence at the feet of Jesus, and see what He will do with them."

JUDGE RESIGNS.

GENEVA. April 30.—(Canadian Press.)—John Bassett Moore, American Judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice since 1921, announced his resignation to-day.

SPECIAL DIVIDEND SETS PRECEDENT

Mutual Life First in Canada to Make Such a Payment.

George Gibbons, district representative of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of Canada, returned on Saturday from a business trip through Prince Edward and Hastings Counties, and referred to the company's recent announcement of a special cash dividend, the advertisement of which appeared in The Examiner while he was absent from the city. Mr. Gibbons remarked that this was the first special dividend ever distributed by a Canadian insurance company. Every policyholder who carries Mutual Participating insurance will share in the special dividend. The allotment is on the basis of the duration of the policies, and ranges from 10 per cent to 25 per cent. of the current dividend. All participating policies which will receive the regular dividend this year are entitled to the special dividend.

Mr. Gibbons said that this special dividend was an indication of the soundness of the mutual principle and a testimony of the ability and economy of the Mutual Life management. It was also due to a very large extent to the facts that the company's investments were entirely in Canada and enjoying a share of Canadian prosperity, and further that the policy holders were confined exclusively to Canadians and to the people of Newfoundland, who had the advantage of the envigorating and healthful climate of the temperate zone of this continent These were circumstances which all Mutual Life policy - holders are aware of, Mr. Gibbons said, and their effect was realized in the present special dividend issue.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

A Republication of the Book by Permission of the Author, Jack Miner of Kingsville, Ont.

Two years ago a gentleman in Peterborough, Ontario, engaged me to come for two days; I went to each school and talked as best I could. The following spring this dear man gave birdhouse prizes to the same children.

Now to those who think it not worth while: You are depriving yourself of a pleasure that is knocking at every man's door. God left the wild life in our care, and it is not a question of what we can have, but the question is, Will we have?

Just close your eyes and ears and abandon all of nature's sights and sounds; what extra attractions would spring have for you? On the other hand, just multiply the present attractions tenfold. Can it be done? Yes; "come over into Macedonia and help us," is my message to you.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Creating a Bird Sanctuary.

A bird sanctuary is a suitable area of ground set aside for the birds to congregate in for shelter, food and protection, where their natural enemies are destroyed, and where neither rich nor poor dare molest them, "nor thieves break through and steal."

Here the birds will congregate in countless numbers, especially during their migration, and hold their great annual picnic and vocal contest, which enables each to select the best sweetheart. As soon as she consents to fly in a double harness with him and he says "I will, so help me Sun, Moon and Stars," they are off together, some for life, others for one season only. Now as soon as God's wireless says to them "The weather is O.K. at your nesting grounds," they join in a sort of a God-be-with-you-till-we-meet-again chorus and rise high on the evening air, and before the stars close their eyes again, these winged creatures are one thousand miles farther on, and the rising sun finds them singing on the same old perch of last year, right near their nesting place. I said evening air, because most birds migrate during the night.

The non-migratory birds will winter in this same sanctuary. Last winter, the eighth winter my sanctuary was set out, I fed over one-half bushel of wheat daily to the Bob White quail that wintered in there. As soon as spring came, these quail all left, and are now scttered over at least a two-mile area of the very best farming country, breeding on nearly every farm. And best of all, I have wheat ready to feed a bigger flock next winter.

The sanctuary plan is the only way I know of to control the two-legged cannibal, he who apparently will not allow his heart nor brain to act at all but simply lets his murderous trigger finger control his whole carcass. It may sound strange to the reader that I speak so harshly of this class of being, but it is personal knowledge that causes it. Being in the woods so much through life, depending as a hunter does, largely on my hearing, my ear drums have been kept exceptionally active, and up until the last few years I could almost hear a gnatfly sneeze; the result is I have heard a whole lot of things that would have sounded better had I been totally deaf.

One day a man came here with two or three younger fellows, including one of his own boys. After showing them around, I came to the park and called the pheasants, and three beautiful Golden Pheasants came out and just spread their gorgeous plumage. As they strutted across the green lawn, all fairly held their breath at such an eye-feast. I turned to go to the house, made a few steps and changed my mind. The boy said, "Oh father, just wouldn't they look nice in our woods?" The father switched his cud over and said, "I'd like to see them in the woods when I had my old No. 10 shotgun."

Years ago I stocked this township with Ringnecked pheasants, and all the power I had was "Please don't shoot the pheasants." A hunter got on the street car three miles north of my house, and as he quieted down he slapped his hand on his gamesack and remarked, "I've got five of them in here the red-headed blank-blank will never see again!" Now this man is hardly acquainted with me and I know he has nothing particular against me; only he just wanted to curse the man that had given him such a good day's sport.

There is another man in this township that apparently sent word to me in a roundabout way that he had three duck-tags, and if I would give him a dollar each for them, as I did the Esquimaux, I could have the tags. Now these tags were put on young ducks that I raised here, and owing to the water drying up in the north pond that summer, they left early in September and went to this nearby water. But if this man lives until I give him a dollar each for the three tags off these hand-raised pets, he will sure hold the world's record for longevity.

One of the common questions asked around my home is: "How do you understand the birds so well?" Really, the birds are an open book. The quesiton is how to understand humanity. Seventy-five per cent. of the hunters that shoot the overflow of birds from my bird sanctuary can easily be called my enemies, while the fact remains they would never see a goose, let alone shoot one, if I did not feed, pet and harbor them here. But I have this consolation: If I met with their approval—Well, 'nuff said!

This makes me think of Ikie and Jakie. Jakie had apparently been imposed upon. Ikie, trying to console him, said, "Jackie, don't worry. Our Saviour had enemies." "Yes," replied Jakie, "but my Got, look vat they done to him!"

A sanctuary where one expects to entertain water fowl should, of course, be quite a large area of land and water; the reader can plainly see this point; and a natural marsh is, of course, the proper place. But a sanctuary for the non-water birds can be made anywhere in the country or suburbs of a town; possibly a ravine with a small stream running through it would be preferable. A great many sites can be chosen where the trees and shrubbery are already grown. Personally, I prefer growing my own trees, it is such a pleasure. Five acres makes a nice sanctuary. I would sooner have two five-acre sanctuaries, a mile or a mile and a half apart, on three thousand acres, than one fifteen-acre sanctuary, for the same area of land. These sanctuaries should be on or near the public highway so that the game-keeper could drive to and from them, the same as the mail carrier to the country mail box. This would enable him to visit an almost unlimited number of them every three days. What an enjoyable occupation this certainly would be for him, knowing that during the severe storms every bird in the country was in there, safely under his care. "I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Or I would sooner be a gamekeeper, caring for the birds in these little sanctuaries, than I would dwell in the Waldorf Astoria, free of charge.

If you contemplate planting one, first summer-fallow the land for one year. Plant evergreen trees, seven feet apart, eight rods wide all around the outside, leaving twelve to fifteen rods square in the centre. Here you will build your feed-racks and feed-bungalows. Set this out with all kinds of fruit-bearing shrubs and vines. Now, with a dog-and-cat-proof fence around the outside, your eyes will be opened as to what you can do with the birds.

I got my trees from the Ontario Forestry Department, costing me less than one dollar per thousand; I cultivated them for five years. The eighth year my trees were so thick you couldn't see a box-car a rod from you.

The fifth-year one pair of mourning doves came and built; the ninth year doves nested by the hundreds, and their sweet, cooing voices continue from early daybreak until the stars appear again. Of course, to grow a sanctuary from seedlings—trees that are no bigger than ordinary tomato-plants—takes time; but remember, the Great Provider, Himself, couldn't make a four-year-old jackass in ten minutes. All of these things take a little time; but time well spent. Every golf course in America should be a bird sanctuary; just a small clump of shrubs here and there does the trick and brings the songs that you golfers cannot afford to be without.

"Oh, but how can we get the birds to come?" is the great cry. Please leave this to the birds. Don't you worry about them, nor don't run all over America to take care of them. Just build the sanctuary and let them come to you to be taken care of. My experiments here have proven that they will come clear across the continent to be cared for, and that the sanctuary plan is a sure preventive of our birds becoming annihilated by their enemies. Just the other day as I walked through my jungle four beautiful woodcocks flushed from under the boughs that I pressed back. After an absence of over forty years the dear old woodcock is back on the same soil!

Yes, the sanctuary plan will permit us to have Bob White quail all along southern Canada. Quail in such a place will stand almost any kind of winter. It is simply up to us to take more pleasure in doing such things. It is no longer a question of what can we have, but a question of what will we have.

Remember, you can sit in your parlor with the best piano in America, and if some one doesn't reach out and touch the keys, that instrument will remain dormant, and you will be deprived of the lovely music it is capable of producing.

IN POLICE COURT

A local man pleaded guilty to stealing from B. F. Ackerman Son and Co., Limited, taking pieces of leather and other articles to the amount of $150.

The petty pilfering has been going on for over two years. V. J. McElderry appeared for the accused, and asked for suspended sentence on account of his client's mental condition. He classed his as a kleptomaniac. He claimed that no end would be met by punishing the man and he suggested that medical evidence be heard.

G. W. Hatton, K.C., for the Crown, took the opposite attitude. He declared that the stealing had been planned beforehand and that there was no proof that he had not sold any of the goods for such articles were offered for sale on the market every Saturday.

"It is not that we want to punish this man, but we want to have on record for employees to know that when they are trusted by their employers they must not carry away articles, or the law will deal severely with them," said Mr. Hatton.

Two splits making up a half hide were exhibited, and Mr. Hatton was unable to see how the prisoner could carry home such articles in his dinner pail, as he claimed. It required two cars to carry the articles from the prisoner's home.

His Worship held out little hope of suspended sentence and remanded the prisoner for one week.

Walter Herbert Alford and Edward A. Alford mistook Chief Newhall yesterday for an ordinary citizen, with the result that they found themselves behind the bars; one charged with speeding and the other for conducting himself in a very disorderly manner in a public place.

At 6.40 last evening Chief Constable S. Newhall was investigating an auto accident at the corner of Water and Hilliard streets when a car approached at a rapid rate of speed. Chief Newhall took the number and later the offenders returned to the scene of the accident. He went to arrest the men and they immediately showed fight and wanted to know what authority he had.

Both pleaded guilty this morning and were fined $10 and costs.

ship for his address to the candidates, and he gave a helpful talk on the good things which God gives, and what He expects in return. Every honest man, he said, dislikes to be in debt, and tries his best to repay what he owes.

The text was taken from the parable of the unjust steward, and His Lordship pointed out that this is one of a group of three parables, the others being that of the debtor and two creditors and that of the man taking account of his servants. The steward was about to lose his position, and called his master's debtors and reduced the amounts of their bills, thereby making himself friends and getting for his master at least some of what was owed him. For this he was commended.

"It is not possible for us to attempt to pay all the debt we owe to God," continued His Lordship. "We are not to be discouraged at its immensity, but should make some attempt to pay it back.' He recounted the many things God gives; life itself, the means to sustain it in health and strength, protection and shelter, skill and intellect which enable men to rank high, all come from God. The debt piles up, and every thought of God's goodness adds to it, for He is in everything. And He does not only care for the physical side, because He gives spiritual strength and provision.

The reverend speaker went on to tell how some of this debt can be repaid. The health, strength, and talents that God gives can be used in His service. He urged all those present, particularly the newly confirmed ,to offer to do something to help in the work of the parish. Not all the strength that God gives should be used in sport and social pleasures. The talents that God gives should be used. No two persons are alike, but each has talents that God expects to be used and must answer for them at the judgment day. If the talents have not been used for self-improvement, for God's service, for the good of the community, or nation, the edict will be, 'Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. Education is really for the discovery of the talents of a child, so that they may be used rightly.

Time, too, is a talent, continued the speaker, and must be used rightly. People put things off until to-morrow, or next year, or for ten years, but what guarantee have they that they will live even this day out? God is going to demand how time has been used, for it is a talent, and so are money and speech. God asks for some part of each day, to be spent in prayer and reading His Word. He asks for one day each week. Sunday was not made as a day of physical enjoyment alone. The Bishop pointed out that he is not a believer in "Blue Sunday," as Sunday should be joyous, but does not think that people should attend only one service and steal the rest of the day.

God wants one-seventh of a person's time, declared His Lordship, and one-tenth of his substance. He recounted the story of Jacob, who promised to give God one-tenth of all he had, a practice continued by his descendants, and urged his hearers to do the same, giving cheerfully and willingly, for "the Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

In conclusion the speaker remarked that he had tried to give practical address as he felt sure that the rector had given the candidates instruction in spiritual matters. He suggested that they should all try to memorize two hymns, "My God, accept my heart this day" and "Take my life and let it be."

Those confirmed were: Hilda Victoria Curtis, Marjorie Victoria Sims, Hilda Houghton, Frances Louise Simmons, Marjory McCormick, Nellie Matilda Butler, Beatrice Ellen Curtis, Irene Sturgeon, Hazel Elsie Jones, Dorothy Lillian Churchill, Barbara Simmons, Margaret Doris Dunford, Grace Henderson, Verna Roberts, Dorothy Rosaline Chamberlain, Selina Sheward, Harold Hutchinson Sowden, Andrew Rippon Joiner, William Edward Parks, John Byron Adamson, George Hugh Houghton, James Muir Brownlie, and George Whitfield Robinson.

All Saints' Church.

"Rooted and built up in Him and stabilized in the faith," was the text chosen by Bishop Sweeny for his sermon at All Saints' church where the Rector, the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, presented 55 candidates for confirmation last night. The text was part of the seventh verse of the second chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Colossians, and the address was based on the collect, epistle, and gospel for St. Mark's day, April 25.

Twice, said the speaker, does St. Paul use the expression rooted, for in Ephesians is founded "Rooted and grounded in love," and he went on to explain that the subject of his address would be stability. The collect for St. Mark's day prays: "Give us grace, that, being not like children carried away with every blast of vain doctrine, we may be established in the truth of the holy Gospel."

To those familiar with the Acts of the Apostles, continued his lordship, this needs no explanation. He went on to tell the story of Mark, who turned back when difficulties beset the path of Paul nad Barnabas, with whom he was going on a missionary journey, and with whom Paul was not reconciled for many years. The collect came from the pen of a reformer, appearing in the first English Prayer Book, that of Edward Sixth issued in 1549, and is based on the epistle for St. Mark's day.

The Bishop pointed out that the collect permits of a standard analysis, as it can be divided into the invocation, the extension of the invocation, the petition, and the plea, and he urged the newly confirmed, as a devotional exercise, to analyse the collect for the day in this manner.

There are three similies mentioned in the collect. The first is that of a child, which can be easily misled and is influenced by the last to teach it. There is a great responsibility on those having charge of children to see that they are not misinformed, but that sweet and lovely foundations are prepared on which the child may build well in the years to come. In the Epistle for the day, Paul, writing to the Ephesians, says: "Unto every one of us is given grace—that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of man and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive, but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into Him in all things, which is the head, even Christ."

The Bishop compared the character of a child to the wax, which may be moulded while it is hot, or to the clay, which may be fashioned while it is wet. That, he said, is why the church teaches her young people and prepares them for confirmation early, when they may be directed more easily into proper living.

Another simile in the collect is that of the wind, which is fickle, blowing "where it listeth." Christians are not to be changeable like the wind, but to be stabilized in the truth of Christ.

There would seem to be a paradox, remarked his lordship, in that Paul advises against being like children, while the Master said that it is necessary to become as a child. The Master meant that people must become like children, teachable, pure, and innocent, but when they have put away childish things and grown up in the faith they are not to be tossed about hither and thither.

Paul says it is necessary to be rooted and grounded in love and the truth of the gospel. Love comes first. Christians must be rooted and grounded in love for God, their fellowmen, the cause of Christ; then they may be rooted and grounded in the truth of the gospel.

At the present time it is necessary that people should be rooted and grounded in the gospel, said the speaker, because many things are happening now that would not happen if all were rooted and grounded in love and the truth of the gospel which cannot be moved.

The church does a great deal to help her people. There is the great sacrifice of love, the Holy Communion, when the church makes it possible to answer love by love, by offering themselves in return for Christ's sacrifice.

The church makes provision for her people to be grounded in truth. The truth of the gospel is crystallised in her creeds and in the thirty-nine articles that people may be rooted and grounded in. His Lordship advised against permitting any person to persuade them not to read the articles and longer creeds. "They are yours. You have a great heritage in them" he declared. "They are the provision the church has made that her children may be rooted and grounded in the truth of the gospel." All the work of the church, through the Sunday school and other organization, is but auxiliary to this in helping teach the people and establish them in the faith so that they may go out and stand firm and contend for the faith which changes not through all the centuries. There are those who say the gospel must be made to conform to society and the world of to-day, but it is rather society and the world which must conform to the gospel which was given once for all by the Master.

His Lordship turned for a moment in conclusion to the Gospel of St. Mark's day, the parable of the vine and branches. The branches cannot survive unless they are attached to the vine, which is firmly established.

His final exhortation to the candidates was a quotation from this passage: "Herein is My Father glorified that ye bear much fruit."

Before the confirmation the Rector announced to the Bishop and people that the forward movement undertaken two years ago, when the Bishop was present and gave it his blessing, has reduced the debt on the church from $12,800 to $1800. His Lordship expressed his warmest congratulations on this effort equalled by so few congregations, and hoped that the comparatively small sum remaining might be wiped off during the summer so that next All Saints' day (Nov. 1) he might consecrate the church.

The processional hymn "Onward Christion Soldiers," was sung in honor of a former chorister, Herbert Hopley, who died for his country at St. Julien, April 26, 1915.

The anthem was the "Gloria in Excelsis" from Mozart's Twelfth Mass.

DEFENCE COUNSEL OPENS ARGUMENT

nesses of the plaintiff that an armistice was being discussed. We also have the evidence from Major Nickel that he received a message ordering headquarters to send no more troops and supplies to France. We have the evidence of his master saying he never received it. Why did he not? Because it did not go through the proper channels and hence for once missed the red tape. And I am going to ask you gentlemen if this is not one time when red tape might have been departed from." Mr. Regan said he thought Major Nickle's evidence was compatible with the words of the First Army order. In the words of Lingard, the signaller, the same belief is upheld. He received messages which bore out the words of the army reports.

"In face of all that these men go in the witness-box and declare point blank that they did not know of the armistice until the morning of the eleventh. They deny the statement of the First Army. I asked them about the Dunham House, that military college, a place where they had access to the numerous records, and in face of all that they denied having gone over these records. Some of them said they have talked evidence over with Mr. Tilley or Mr. Parmenter.

"And if you accept the evidence, you will know that the plaintiff knew the war was over on Nov. 9th when he and Horne got together and planned the advance on the objectives east of Mons, Mr. Regan declared. "According to the evidence of the officer of the Princess Pats, the German retreat was nothing but a rout. "With all this knowledge, what does Sir Arthur Currie do? On Nov. 9 he gets an order from the First Army telling him to advance towards the Maubege-Mons line and the corps to continue the operation. He knows the Germans crossed the lines, he is in conference with General Horne, who issues orders to take the high ground east of Mons with mounted troops pushing forward to keep in contact with the enemy. He said the 2nd Division will capture the high ground in Q-16. The Third Division will capture the high ground in Q-4 and the suburbs of Nimy," said Mr. Regan, pointing out these positions on the map.

Could Have Gone Round

He also pointed out that the Canadians could have gone around north of Mons with comparatively no loss of life and held Mons on the flank.

"You gentlemen will understand what that would have meant later," he said. "If they had gone around south it would have been a different proposition, according to Col. Hooper, and I accept his evidence in full. He told us that was an area for a German machine gun school. Even then the Second Corps on the night of the 10th had reached its objective and enflanked Mons.

"Then Mons, in the language of Sir Arthur Currie, would have fallen without a shot having been fired, but they didn't do that," said Mr. Regan, and pointed out how the Canadians had been held up by machine guns. Thus the evidence as given by the witnesses for the plaintiff was not consistent with the records of the units that were there, he said. The plans of the R.C.R. and 42nd were changed at the last moment and they were to attrack Mons from the north and east. These facts, Mr. Regan read from various military orders. This, he claimed, was not in keeping with the original plans, and the evidence produced in court by Gen. Currie's witness.

Mr. Regan then gave the movements and orders of the R.C.R., taking pains to point that here was an organized attack on Mons. The war diary of the Princess Pats and of the 7th Infantry Brigade all tell the same story." That is the situation prior to our troops getting into Mons," he said. "Now, let us see the real truth of how they got in. Officer after officer has come here and said there was no attack and they marched into Mons with rifles on their shoulders.

"I am not going to deal with the evidence of each witness, but you know that every man that the plaintiff put in the witness box said that there was no fighting getting into Mons and none after they got in." Mr. Regan combated by saying that such was the plaintiff's case. Then he turned his attention to the story of the defence. In corroboration of their version, Mr. Regan read from the war diary of the 42nd Canadian Infantry Battalion and the war diary of the 2nd Canadian Division.

FAVORS RELAXATION IN PENSION RULES

House Committee Reports Recommending Many Changes in Regulations.

OTTAWA, April 30. — (C. P.) — Important recommendations respecting pensions and returned soldiers' problems are set out in the report tabled in the House of Commons to-day. The report was presented by Major Power (Liberal, Quebec South), chairman of the special committee appointed by Parliament early in February.

The recommendations made by the committee include:

1. The removal of the time limit for filing applications for pensions.

2. Establishment of a new class of pensioners to make eligible widows who married soldiers after the appearance of disability.

3. Extension of the returned soldiers' insurance act so that applications may be receivable until 1933.

4. Enlargement of the class of dependent parents or those in place of parents who are entitled to receive pensions.

5. Broadening of the application or meritorious clause and alternation in departmental machinery so that pensions may be paid in meritorious cases on decision of the Board of Pension Commissioners alone, or, on appeal, on the ruling of the Federal Appeal Board.

6. Pensions to dependents where aggravation substantially contributed to death.

7. Formulation of a policy to give immediate relief of pressing cases of unemployment and investigation by a Commission or otherwise of the methods in use in Canada or other countries for dealing with ex-soldiers' unemployment by way of institutional care or otherwise.

8. Distribution of the $130,000 canteen fund profits of canteens in the depot battalions in Canada, Siberia, and Lucia on the same basis as the larger canteen fund, but to permit participation by all ex-members of the C.E.F. who served in Canada.

9. A yearly share of ten thousand dollars to the Dominion Executive Council of the Canadian Legion, British Empire Service League.

10. Larger jurisdiction given to the Federal Appeal Board to give General Appellate jurisdiction except on assessment and matters involving discretion.

DEMOCRACY IS WELL OUTLINED

(1) How numerous and how varied are the interests consciously shared, (2) How full and free is the interplay with other forms of association.

Democracy, too, was a mode of associated living, ethically and spiritually constituted. It was a mobile organism, undergoing constant reconstruction and developing its members along line of personal initiative and adaptability.

Education, the speaker stressed, played a big part in improving upon man's original endowments and helping him to do better the things he would do any way. In this connection Rotarian Downey emphasized the splendid service rendered by Ontario's teachers. "I don't know of 18,500 people who do so much and advertise so little," declared the speaker.

Democracy was concerned with every phase of associated living, but primarily with time, self-realization, and self-expression, and some of its objectives were shared activities for all, equality of opportunity, the greatest good to the greatest number, the franchise for all, individual capacity, free intercourse and discussion and education for all.

Only by the using of the vast variety of individual gifts could democracy develop a progressive and mobile character. Democracy recognized a partnership of individuals for the building up of society.

The speaker found Canada well on its way toward such a democracy, and mentioned among other proofs of this condition that this country with some reservations possessed free education, responsible government, the franchise, an unenlightened electorate, no class distinctions. On the other hand Canada needed, the speaker argued, a purified press, better and freer means of communication, the abolition of privileged justice, its best men in politics, a better national understanding, and tolerance in religion.

The home, the church, and the school were named as means by which true democracy could be developed, and speaking of the schools, Rotarian Downey pointed out that some of the needs were a real education rather training, the elimination of waste, better work for necessitous children, diversified schools and courses, and better equipment. In regard to rural schools, the speaker was emphatic in endorsing the Township School Board plan.

"I may say, and you can carry my message with you," said Rotarian Downey, "that I am heartily in favor of the Minister of Education's Township Board plan."

The speaker was given a hearty vote of thanks by the club.

On motion of Rotarians J. H. Seels and S. R. Armstrong, a vote of thanks was also passed to the Rotary-Annes for their fine program last week.

BELANGER VICTOR IN BOUT FOR TITLE

Defeats Durand Easily in Flyweight Match in Toronto.

TORONTO, April 30. — Albert "Frenchy" Belanger, former world's flyweight titleholder, brought another Canadian championship to Toronto when he clearly outpointed Clovis Durand, the clever and hard-hitting flyweight from Montreal, in a ten-round affair at the Arena Gardens, and in deciding the holder of the title, which has been held in abeyance for some time, the local lad gave the most convincing display that he has ever shown in a local ring, or any other for that matter. There was no doubt as to the winner, and Durand, while Announcer Frank Brady was collecting the slips from the judges, walked across to Belanger's corner and lifted the local lad's right arm as an admission that Belanger had won. The referee and judges were of the same opinion and so were the spectators, in fact it was the most unanimous decision of the season.

Mine Market Weaker With Trading Heavy

TORONTO, April 30 (Canadian Press).—Barry Hollinger led another weak market on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, when trading nearly touched the million share mark. On a turnover of a fifth of the total volume, Barry slumped 13 to 90. The Kirkland Lakes uniformly softened, with Wright Hargreaves at 445, Lake Shore at 23.25, Kirkland Lake at 1.78, and Teck Hughes at 930. Other weak spots in the general list were Nipissing, down 9 at 4.01, Malartic, five lower at 1.17, Howey, also five lower at 85, Bidgood, down four at 1.05, and Amulet, ten lower at 335. The coast issues shared in the general weakness, Pend Oreille losing more than a dollar at 19.00 after temporarily soaring to 20.50. Mint Ore at 27 and Mandy at 266 were slightly lower. Hudson Bay and the other Manitoba issue, Sheriff, firmed slightly at 18.50 and 6.20 respectively.

Obituary

W. H. DUFF.

The following extract taken from the Rouleau (Sask.) Enterprise is of interest to many Lakefield readers who knew the late Mr. W. H. Duff to whom the article refers:

"Mr. W. H. Duff, who was born in Smith Township 68 years ago, died at his home in Drinkwater, Sask., on April 5th, 1928. He was married twenty-nine years ago to Miss Mary Rae of Thedford, Ontario, and for some time lived in Carberry, Man., moving to Drinkwater in 1904, where he opened a general store. He was appointed postmaster the same year, and held the office until his death. He was one of the leaders in establishing a Presbyterian Church in his new home town, holding the office of secretary-treasurer for years. He went into the United Church, being a member of the Official Board and also an elder of the church. He was a charter member of the Drinkwater I.O.O.F. and the first member of the Drinkwater A.F. and A.M., and he was also a Royal Arch Mason. He took a deep interest in the community life also, he was the first secretary of Community Club, and school trustee, and also served on the Municipal Council for a number of years. During his long illness he retained his cheery personality and his passing marks the close of the life of a Christian gentleman, a devoted husband and father, and an outstanding citizen. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Ray Peck, of Corretionville, Iowa, Mrs. W. L. Kelly at home, five grandchildren, one brother Robert of Lakefield, and three sisters, Miss I. Duff, Mrs. L. Hunter, and Mrs. A. Quinn, also of Lakefield.

The funeral service was held on April 7 from the United Church, which was filled to capacity, Rev. W. J. King officiating. Interment was made in the Fairview Cemetery. The pall-bearers were: J. A. Jamieson and H. A. Elder, representing the Session: J. H. Bolton and C.J. Strayer, of the I.O.O.F., and F G. Strayer and G. C. Fosnot, of the Masons. There was a large number of floral tributes

General Currie Awarded $500 By Jury Today

CURRIE LIBEL SUIT NEARS END; COUNSEL FINISH ARGUMENTS; JUDGE GIVES ADDRESS TO-DAY

Impassioned Oratory Marks Address To Jury on Part of W. T. R. Preston.

EVIDENCE REVIEWED.

Jury Likely to Bring in Verdict To-day—Mr. Justice Rose Will Sum Up Case.

(By Staff Reporter).

COBOURG, May 1.—The stage is all set at the Sir Arthur Currie-Wilson-Preston libel suit for Hon. Mr. Justice Rose to charge the jury and to sum up the evidence that it has taken two weeks to hear. The summing-up was to be the first thing this morning, and then the case will be given to the jury for them to give their final word.

All yesterday afternoon counsel for plaintiff and defence and W. T. R. Preston argued their cases before the jury. The court-room was crowded with the largest crowd since the trial commenced, and as W. N. Tilley, K.C., closed a most eloquent appeal for Sir Arthur Currie, a handclap was heard amongst the spectators. Five hours were taken up in argument with Frank Regan and W. T. R. Preston taking two hours each, and W. N. Tilley requiring one hour and a quarter.

Mr. Preston, in closing his address, which in places had been full of eloquence, with touches of oratory impeached Sir Arthur before the bar on behalf of the widows, mothers and fathers, who had lost their dear ones overseas with heedless, reckless, needless war waste of life in this attack on Mons.

In Mr. Regan's condemnation of Sir Arthur, he charged that the results of the attack on Mons had been battle honors for the officers and graves for the privates.

Mr. Tilley, in his address, reviewed the libel article and the evidence and concluded that not one statement in the article that had a sting to it could be justified by either Mr. Regan or Mr. Preston. He declared the statement that the Canadian Headquarters Staff had to flee to escape the wrath of the troops was "the meanest thing that could be said by a mean man."

"Gentlemen of the jury just imagine what it means to rush enemy machine guns without having artillery support. That is what they did just to protect the property of the citizens of Mons. They would rather waste the life of our gallant men", exclaimed Mr. Regan, turning to the evidence for the defence.

Reading from the report of the first army, Mr. Regan said there was no pause during the night of November 10 and that the enemy machine guns continued to fire heavily on all advances on the town. These were all effectively silenced later and their crews killed or captured. Mr. Regan was unable to use the report of Sir Douglas Haig since it had not been admitted as an exhibit.

Then taking the report of Sir Arthur made by himself to the government of Ottawa, Mr. Regan emphasized where it says stubborn resistance was overcome in Mons at six a.m. on the eleventh. In the face of that, he said, witness after witness goes into the box and says they are not right and in evidence of one witness described as fiction.

"I am going to ask you, gentlemen of the jury, to believe these reports because they were written at the time the events took place", Mr. Regan said. "Can we, in the face of these reports, battalion, brigade, division, army, and last but not least, of the plaintiff himself, can we in the face of all these believe that Mons was captured without a loss. What a monsterous misconception of Mons has been given to the world during the last ten years.

"Can we in the face of all these believe what he is telling to the world for first time that there was no fighting, no casualties.

"If we believe these reports what is bound to follow? Is it possible there were no casualties. I cannot see how it can be believed that the German machine gunners were shot down and there were no casualties in our ranks.

"What was the purpose of entering upon November 9th, the casualties of November 10 and 11, unless they were ashamed to face the world and tell them there was a great loss of life in a conflict which was not ordered.

Entered for Ninth.

"That's why these casualties for November 10th and 11th have been entered up under November 9th. I can understand the casualties for November 11th being entered upon say the 15th, but not on November 9th. That is not fair. Where did these casualties take place. They took place in the capture of the high ground east of Mons.

Mr. Regan continued to point out how the witnesses of the defense had not been officers and pointed out that General Currie's had been be-

Live Stock Men To Meet At Ottawa

OTTAWA, Ont., May 1.—(Canadian Press.)—An Eastern Canada conference on problems concerning preventable losses in live stock shipments during transportation will be held in Ottawa on May 16. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday at the Department of Agriculture. A further conference will be held in Western Canada at a later date.

Representatives of the various live stock interests and the railways will be invited to meet officials of the government at next month's meeting.

Transportation of live stock has been a very large factor in the Canadian marketing system; and many losses have been suffered during transportation due to harmful practices. It is hoped as a result of the coming conference to correct the existing injuring practices.

G. A. STEVENS HOLDS LUCKY CAR NUMBER

9406 Wins Whippet Car Given Away in Mason Groceteria Campaign.

THREE OTHER PRIZES.

Mayor Denne Makes Draw Before Large Crowd in Market Square.

Drawn from the large, old-fashioned tea mixer from among fifty thousand or more of its kind, by His Worship Mayor Denne, 9406 was the lucky number of George Stevens, 364 Mark Street, East City.

It won for him the Whippet car, given as a first prize in the E. F. Mason Groceteria campaign which had just closed. Hundreds of people, many of them from outside the city, gathered in the Market Square at seven-thirty, the time set for the draw, and when the name of Mr. Stevens was called out, a round of applause was accorded him.

While the tea mixer was being assembled, an ideal mixer of the tickets, H. H. Lush announced the object of the campaign, telling of the fifty years of progress enjoyed by Mr. Mason while in the grocery and groceteria business. On behalf of the donor, he thanked the public for patronage in the past, and announced that Mayor Denne would draw the lucky ticket, as well as three or four extras to designate the winners of three special prizes of $5.00 in groceries.

The tickets, taken a handful at a time from each of the seven or eight metal boxes, were placed in the mixer, the trap carefully closed by Mr. Mason himself, and then were thoroughly shaken up.

"Who wants the car?" called Mayor Denne as he reached into the box, and the chorus of answers which greeted his question suddenly ceased, for his Worship held the ticket in his hand. With full appreciation of the suspense of that moment, he deliberately paused to carefully put on his spectacles and then came his announcement: "Ticket 9406 wins the Whippet car!"

Mayor Denne also announced the numbers of four other tickets, three of which would mean prizes of $5.00 in groceries to the holders. They were: Number 10,706, held by Mrs. J. G. Stewart, Apartment 16C, Bank of Commerce; Number 33,706, held by Mrs. George A. Renwick of Westwood, Ontario; Number 37,089, held by Clifford Colmer, of 497 Bolivar Street, and Number 32,635, held by Mrs. S. J. Black, of 648 George Street.

Conservatives Retain St. Mary Lebon Seat

LONDON, May 1 (Associated Press).—The Conservatives retained the seat in the by-election in St. Mary Lebon yesterday which Sir Rennel Rodd won. He received 12,859 votes as compared with 6,721 for David Ross, the Labor candidate, and 3,318 polled by Bacil Murray, who was the first Liberal in 18 years to enter the field in this Conservative stronghold. The election was occasioned by the recent elevation of Sir Douglas Hogg, the Attorney-General, now Lord Halisham, to the post of Lord Chancellor, held by the late Viscount Cave.

House of Commons Instals Time Clock

OTTAWA, May 1. — An electric clock with four dials and which will indicate the time taken up by each speech will be installed in the House of Commons, it was stated yesterday. The clock was invented by a Port Arthur man for use in hockey matches, and is claimed to have worked in a very satisfactory manner. It will be controlled by the clerk or assistant clerk.

With the new rule limiting speeches to 40 minutes in the House, suggestions have been made by several members that there be some system of advising the member speaking how much time he had left. At present Mr. Speaker keeps record of the time.

MORE BUILDING IN PAST MONTH

Permits Fewer in Number Than in April, 1927, But For Greater Expenditure.

FIVE NEW DWELLINGS.

Building in Peterborough last month increased several thousand dollars over the same month in 1927, although fewer permits were issued by the City Engineer. Permits were taken out for four service stations which when erected will be valued at $14,050, for five dwellings estimated to cost $17,800, eighteen private garages costing $1,485, and twenty-six miscellaneous permits requiring fixtures amounting to $5,492.

The total number of permits issued during the month was 53, valued at $38,827.00 and the total amount of building for the first four months of this year is $67,647.00. In April, 1927, there were 59 permits issued, involving an amount of $35,915 and the total for the four months was $62,760.00.

During the last week in April Alderman Walter Stocker took out a permit to build a two story dwelling on Homewood avenue at an estimated cost of $5,000. Last year Alderman Stocker built two fine homes on Gilmour street. The house on Homewood avenue will have eight rooms and will be finished in oak and basswood, with a fireplace and hot air heating system. Date of completion will be about September 1st.

Bradburn Ltd. have let the contract to George Sloan and Son to make alerations to the house at 302 Aylmer. The estimated cost being $500.

William Howe is going to erect a story and a half dwelling on Bolivar street, at an estimated cost of $2000, which will be finished about September 1st.

S. H. Abbott is erecting a house on Lansdowne street which will be completed about August 1st. It will be a brick-stucco, one story dwelling, heated with hot air and having a pine lumber finish, estimated to cost $1,800.

EGYPT RETURNS SOFT ANSWER

Will Not Proceed With Bill, But Denies Britain's Right to Interfere.

HOPES TO END FRICTION..

CAIRO, May 1. — Canadian Press. —The Egyptian reply to Great Britain probably will be presented this afternoon. It is understood to be couched in friendliest terms, and expresses Egypt's inability to admit the right of Great Britain, or any other power, to interfere with the independent legislation of the Egyptian parliament, but in order to demonstrate Egypt's good will and her desire to maintain friendly relations with Great Britain, the assemblies bill was not proceeded with last night as intended, but will be held over until the next parliamentary session.

The Egyptian government expresses the hope that in the meantime a basis of better understanding will be reached, permitting the removal of the present difficulties. It trusts that the manner in which the reply is worded will convince Great Britain of Egypt's desire to avoid friction and that Great Britain will accept the Egyptian action as a satisfactory response to her ultimatum.

FIRE BRIGADE TO COST MORE THAN FIGURED

Aldermen Told Extra Men Authorized Will Run Up Expense About $1,200.

UNIFORMS ORDERED.

Grafton and Company Again Successful Tenderers—Three Committees Meet.

The extra men authorized by the council for the fire brigade will cause an overdraft of about $1,200 in the Fire, Water, and Light Committee's estimates, Chairman Ald. Cotton reported at last night's meeting of the committee. Four of the older men are being retired, two of them however being retained until after the holiday season, while the new men have been engaged and have been at work for several weeks.

The committee decided that all that can be done is to deal carefully with the other parts of the estimates, trying to save money there and hold down the overdraft as much as possible. Ald. McIntyre asked if the holidays could not be got over in less time, but the Chief pointed out that with two men off each day because of the day off in seven he cannot let more than one man go at a time.

Last night was tender night for three city council committees. The Fire, Water and Light Committe had coal and uniforms; the Property Committee had coal to buy and the Parks Committee had to hire a caretaker for James Stevenson Park.

The coal was first disposed of. McCarthy and Johnson had the lowest tender, $7.10 a ton for 40 tons of coal for the Isolation Hospital, 35 tons for the fire hall, and 45 tons for the city buildings. Some of the firms which tendered made a difference in their prices for the three buildings, depending apparently on the length of the haul and allowing for the possibility of being given only part of the contract, but the McCarthy and Johnson tender for all three was equal to the lowest quoted by any of these dealers and they were given the contract. The figures follow:

	Hospital.	Fire Hall.	City Hall.
H. B. Taylor and Son—
Pocahontas. . .	$9.60	.....	.....

The Fire, Water, and Light Committee's decision to accept the tender of McCarthy and Johnston was concurred in by the Property Committee.

The firemen's uniforms will be made by Grafton and Company. Mayor Denne, Aldermen Cotton and Phelan, and Chief Gimblett went over the goods and prices submitted by various firms and picked out the same materials as were supplied by this firm last year. The price quoted this year is somewhat lower, and the order will be placed for 21 suits, cloth 848A, $24.81, with extra pants costing $6.58 for the men and two suits, cloth 359, costing $28.19, with extra pants costing $8.05, for the chief and assistant.

Riley and Hickey will supply 72 shirts, some blue railroad shirts for the men and some white ones for the officers, at $1.85 each.

The purchase of the shirts precipitated the usual argument. Ald. Greene reiterated his opposition to their purchase at all, but Ald. Stocker attacked the project from a different angle. Four shirts a year is too much for any man, he asserted. They can't wear out more than three." As the basis for his knowledge, he remarked that he had been wearing shirts for sixty years, but he was quick to deny the implication conveyed when Ald. Lowe asked, "The same shirt?"

Ald. Greene of the Parks Comhittee will choose among three applicants for the position of caretaker of James Stevenson Park. Those tendering were John Laroque, $26 a week; John Creighton, last year's caretaker, $22 50 a week, and William Rogers, the current wages. John Laroque lives outside the city and his appointment was therefore objected to by all the aldermen present.

Ald. McIntyre, who is acting chair-

SESSION SEEMS TO BE NEARING A CONCLUSION

Little Business Left for the Ottawa House To Transact.

SEVERAL AMENDMENTS.

Most of Bills Dealt With—Expect Prorogation Within Three Weeks.

OTTAWA, May 1. — At the opening of this week there are signs that the session of Parliament is approaching the end.

The report circulates strongly that prorogation is planned for on May 19, but if not possible then, on the eve of the 24th. The order paper is getting very thin, nearly all the Bills having been passed or adopted in some stage, but what does remain is a very heavy accumulation of estimates. Morning sittings of the House will probably begin next Monday, and may also extend into Saturdays. The Government side's normal desire of getting through speedily is apparently shared by the Opposition, but, nevertheless, they intend to discuss the estimates somewhat extremely.

Several Amendments.

Two or three amendments to supply are to be moved. One will condemn the Government for not making public and acting upon the report of the Reparations Commissioner. Another promised by Dr. Edwards will bring up the question of returning to the Prairie Provinces their natural resources. Conservatives will criticize many items in the estimates, including the proposed exchange of Ministers with Japan. In addition to the unappropriated votes of the main estimates, all of the supplementaries are to come. The Pensions Committee is winding up its work and will report to the House a variety of adjustments in the Pensions Act. As the report is likely to be unanimous in the committee it will not be contentious in the House. The inquiry into the Immigration Department will conclude within ten days. Several recommendations are looked for, but these, it is thought, can be given effect to by regulation rather than calling for any amendment to the Act.

Waterways.

The St. Lawrence question does not enter into the Legislature program of the session, and it is doubtful if in the House there is additional discussion, although in the Senate considerable activity about it is displayed.

Everything now points to prorogation within three weeks.

BONFIRE RULE TO BE ENFORCED

Chief Gimblett Issues Warning to Citizens About Burning Rubbish.

MUST HAVE PERMISSION.

The large number of grass fires and others resulting from carelessnes in burning rubbish within the past week or so, has provoked from Fire Chieff Gimblett a warning to all citizens that further infractions of the bylaw governing fires within the city limits will result in prosecution unless proper permission is secured from him.

The Chief is also anxious that the people of the city co-operate with his department by clearing away all rubbish and inflammable debris from their property, thus making Peterborough a cleaner, safer city to live in.

FATHER AND SON GET 10-YEAR TERM

Toronto Men Sentenced For Robbery and Assault—Younger Man to be Whipped.

TORONTO, May 1 (Canadian Press). — Pleading guilty to charges of assault and robbery, Herbert and Howard Osborne, father and son, in the Police Court to-day were sentenced to ten years in Portsmouth Penitentiary each. In addition, the son was sentenced to fifteen strokes of the strap. The charges were laid in connection with a hold-up of the cashier of a dairy company here in March, when $1,900 was stolen. Subsequently, most of this amount was recovered. A driver for the company who was implicated in the affair, turned King's evidence.

Labor Situation Is Debated By Commons

LONDON, May 1. —(Canadian Press Cable.)—On a motion to reduce the salary of the minister of labor, which was defeated, the House of Commons yesterday debated the unemployment situation. The speakers were mostly Labor members who condemned the "inaction" of the government. There was no labor prejudice against emigration, they said, but they objected to the government wanting to shovel people out of the country so as to end their responsibility.

Town-bred emigrants were useless to the dominions, declared W. Wellock, Labor, Stourbridge, who said he had seen 10,000 men with nowhere else to go pouring into cities along the Canadian wheat belt after the harvest. Neil McLean, Labor, Govan, declared that unemployment was rampant in Canada.

BIG INCREASE MADE IN BIRTHS

Marriages Fail to Show Gain, Although This is Leap Year.

DEATHS UP SLIGHTLY.

The month of April showed a decided increase in the number of births in this city over the corresponding month one year ago. Marriages, although it is leap year, decreased one and deaths also showed a favorable decrease. During last month there were 44 births, 13 marriages, and 29 deaths, while in April, 1927, there were 33 births, 14 marriages, and 32 deaths.

Last year, according to the vital statistics, the city's population increased one during the month, but a much better record is shown this year when there is an increase of 15.

MEREDITH SHOP BEING DIVIDED

Metropolitan Store Property on George Street to be Made Into Two Stores.

LOCAL MEN DO WORK.

A building permit was issued by City Engineer Parsons this morning to A. A. McIntyre and F. Barret to renovate the store formerly occupied by W. H. Meredith and owned by the Metropolitan Stores Limited. The large store will be made into two small stores with a street frontage of 11 feet 5 inches and a depth of 80 feet. The estimated cost is $500.

Over a year ago the Metropolitan Stores purchased the property occupied by W. H. Meredith, J. A. McNabb, Bert McLeod and A. A. Fowler. Mr. Meredith's lease expired this spring and he moved to 404 George street, but the other leases have some time to run.

This move on the part of the owners of the store makes it appear that the yare not coming to this city for some time yet.

O'NEIL FACES TRIAL TO-DAY

Farm Hand Appears For Preliminary Hearing After Twelve Remands.

RECOVERED FROM WOUND.

BARRIE Ont., May 1.— After twelve remands, George O'Neill, former Tottenham farm hand, appeared in court to-day for preliminary hearing on two charges of murder and one of attempted suicide. The charges are in connection with the death of A. Robertson, aged farmer, and his married daughter in a barn on the Robertson farm, destroyed by fire some months ago. O'Neil was arrested as a result of the findings of a coroner's jury. He appeared fully recovered from the wounds in the throat which he inflicted on himself while in jail.

Dog Catcher Is Out On Job This Morning

The city dog catcher, Mark Pengelly, began his work for the season this morning, so that owners of dogs within the city limits should be prompt in obtaining licenses and take care that their pets do not stray.

Jury Requires Over Three Hours To Reach Verdict

Case Which Has Engaged Attention of Whole World For Past Two Weeks Comes To End at 3.30 This Afternoon—Jury Out Since 11.47.

ARTICLE IN THE PORT HOPE GUIDE WAS CAUSE OF FAMOUS LIBEL SUIT

Generals, Colonels, and Down to Privates Tell of Last Days of War—Defendants and Plaintiff Called Many Witnesses During Fourteen Days.

(By Staff Reporters)

COBOURG, Ont., May 1. — On behalf of the jury, I beg to submit the finding that the defendants are guilty of libel, and that an award of five hundred dollars be given to the plaintiff.

This was the verdict brought in by the foreman of the jury in the fifty thousand dollar libel action instituted by Sir Arthur Currie against W. T. R. Preston and F. W. Wilson, received at 3.30 (standard time) this afternoon.

The jury had been out from 11.47 to 3.20 considering the evidence and arguments submitted during the fourteen days of the trial which created world-wide interest. Some of the Dominion's most eminent counsel had been engaged and soldiers of the Great War from generals to privates testified.

The last operations of the Canadian corps in France in and about Mons have been recounted even to the smallest details. Soldiers from other fronts and other wars have listened eagerly to the entire case. From the very first days, the spectators have included many fashionably dressed women, who for various reasons have displayed a marked interest in the proceedings.

Yesterday afternoon the jury heard the addresses of the counsel and of W. T. R. Preston, who has conducted his own defense throughout, Frank Regan, counsel for F. W. Wilson, editor of The Port Hope Guide, which published the article responsible for this action, was the first to deliver his address. W. T. R. Preston followed immediately with his remarks. His Lordship having taken precedent from the "Irish case' and allowed him to address the jury. W. N. Tilley, K.C., Toronto, counsel for General Sir Arthur Currie, had the privilege of delivering the last of the three addresses.

This morning, as soon as the opening formalities had been disposed of, His Lordship, the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose, began his charge to the jury. He completed his remarks at 11.47 and the jury filed out to deliberate on the point in issue.

Frank Regan rose to object to some of the points of the evidence and also to some of the remarks which His Lordship had made during his charge. He also intimated that Justice Rose had favored the plaintiff in his remarks and thought it only fair that the evidence of both sides be dealt with. To this His Lordship replied, "I agree with you, Mr. Regan."

Bring Lunch to Court

For the first time since the opening of the case, court has not been adjourned for the usual noon recess. Some officials have gone to snatch a bite of lunch, but all are in readiness to appear should the jury return at any moment.

Spectators who are anxious to be present when the verdict is brought in and judgment given accordingly, have provided themselves with various forms of lunches so that they will not be obliged to give up their seats which are at a premium.

Every available seat in the court room was occupied this morning when the court assembled for the next to the final step of the Currie libel suit, His Lordship's charge to the jury.

Gentlemen of the jury: When you entered upon this duty you took an oath to well and truly try the issue between the two parties, said His Lordship, and continued to say that he wished to refer to that oath again. He had referred to it before during the case, he said. The jurors must, said His Lordship, try the issue at stake and nothing else. They must try it upon the evidence heard in court and not on any opinion which they might have had before coming here. The jury and judge are part of the institution set up for the administration of justice. The judge may tell the jury the law. He might,

DISCUSSION ON ASSEMBLY BILL IS POSTPONED

Motions For Postponement Adopted By Egyptian Chamber and Assembly.

OBJECTION TO TERMS.

Apparent Demands Made By British Ultimatum Met By Cairo Parliament.

CAIRO, May 1 (Associated Press). —Motions to postpone further discussion of the Assemblies Bill until November were adopted by both the Egyptian Chamber and Senate in secret session last night.

This action by the Egyptian Parliament apparently met the demands of the British ultimatum, delivered Sunday night, that the Assemblies Bill which it found so objectionable be withdrawn by Wednesday night. The clauses in the bill to which Britain registered such emphatic objection would bar the police from interference in any meeting unless there were actual disorders and providing severe penalties on police who might violate the law.

UNIONTOWN, Penn., May 1 (Canadian Press).—Eight persons were drowned early to-day when a small boat overturned in the Monongahela River between Masontown and Greensboro. UNKNOWN MAN ATTACKS GIRL

Brutal Assault Committed in North End of City Near Chemong Road.

ASSAILANT ESCAPES.

An Aberdeen avenue girl was brutally attacked by an unknown man last night just at the entrance of the Chemong Road. The girl was returning home at the time when the assault was made, and although she put up a game fight she suffered many bodily injuries. Her mother heard her screams and a passer-by picked her up and took her home, but no trace of the man could be found. A police search under the direction of Chief Constable S. Newhall, who rushed to the scene of the attack, was immediately instigated.

FARMERS FORCED TO PURCHASE FEED

Late Season Works Hardship on Havelock District—Work Lags.

HAVELOCK, May 1.—Owing to the late season a number of farmers in this district have run out of feed for their stock and are forced to buy until there is sufficient growth for pasture. Plowing and a little cultivating on high land is all that has been done so far, while last year at this time nearly all of the spring's work was completed and there was plenty of pasture for the young cattle.

C. G. I. T. GROUP PRESENTS PLAY

"Daughter of the Desert" Scores Hit at Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, May 1. — A breezy Western play entitled "The Daughter of the Desert" scored an instant hit with a large audience in the Lakefield Memorial Hall on Friday evening. The play was given under the auspices of the C.G.I.T. group of the Regent Street United Church, and was by far the most ambitious of their efforts to date. The girls were assisted by A. B. Burrows, and a number of the Katchewanookan Tuxis Square, and the combined forces of the two groups produced the first western play ever given by amateurs in Lakefield.

The scene was laid in Arizona about 1882 and the entire four acts bristled with action and with fun. Enough melodrama to give the plot

"Resolved that country life is more to be desired than city life", were Misses Jean Burnham, Jean Stinson, Flossie McMahon, and Wilma Fallis.

According to present arrangements the debate will take place on Thursday, May 10, with a social time following. I. O. O. F. MARCH TO STIRLING CHURCH

Hundred and Ninth Anniversary is Marked at St. Andrew's Church.

STIRLING, May 1.—Stirling Lodge No. 239, Stirling Encampment No. 80, and Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211, of the I.O.O.F. observed the 109th anniversary of the founding of the order in America by gathering in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon for Divine service. Members of the order were present from Frankford, Thomasburg, Tweed, Madock, Belleville, Springbrook and Campbellford. More than eighty were in the line which was led by the Stirling band of twenty pieces, and about twenty members of the Belleville Canton No. 8, Patriarchs Militant.

The Rev. A. N. Reid, B.A., minister of the church was the speaker, his subject being "Christian Leadership." Psalm LXXIV was read, while the responsive reading was of the XCVI Psalm, the second lesson was in Luke X, from which the text was taken, the 37th verse, the first part of which was based on the action of the good samaritan bringing out the fact which should be emphasized "The Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man". A great many would do the good samaritan act if the inn wasn't too far away. The second part of the sermon dealt with the motto of the Oddfellows, "Friendship, Love and Truth." Although Mr. Reid is not a member of the order, he handled his subject in a very pleasing manner to the members, and could not help but benefit any one present.

Mr. B. M. Richmond, of Madoc Lodge No. 179 had the distinctive honor of being the only one present wearing a veteran jewel for fifty years service in the Order.

Stores Remain Open

Beginning on Tuesday, May 1, the stores will open for business three nights each week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

ORIGINAL POEM MARKS MEETING

Mrs. R. Bonny Demonstrates Poetical Ability at Havelock W. I.

A LIVE BRANCH.

HAVELOCK May 1.—Mrs. R. Bonny gave an interesting address at the second meeting of the Women's Institute of Havelock on "How to make puff paste easily" which included a receipe for delicious biscuits originated by her and one of her favorite receips. In a poem which was composed by her and which was very appropriate for the occasion

Judging from the large attendance and the interest taken in the work by the members, this branch, which has only been organized a month promises to be one of the most progressive in the district, the membership being nearly doubled at this meeting. The president, Mrs. W. Whitton presided. The meetings are to be held in the town hall on the fourth Thursday of each month, a ten cent tea to be served at each meeting and members from neighboring branches being cordially invited to attend.

Plans were made to form girl's class in connection with the institute, a leader to be appointed at a later date. It was also decided to ask the department for flower seeds to distribute among the children, a prize to be given to the child who produces the best flower plot. During the afternoon Mrs. F. Bacchus and Mrs J. Bedford favored the gathering with well chosen vocal solos accompanied by Miss Jean Anderson, who also give a piano solo. At the close of the meeting a dainty lunch was served by the officers of the society.

The following is Mrs. Bonny's poem:

Things that Count

It is not the deeds of greatness

Mr. Daniel, followed with discussion; music by Miss Evelyn Barnum, and Fred Barnum; vocal solo, Thomas Fry; reading, Miss Gladys Petherick; current news, Earl Fairman, and the literary topic, Miss Gladys Simpson.

With the return of good roads, the interest in the league meetings is increasing and a splendid summer's program is being mapped out.

Industrial progress is a great factor in modern life. You find it exemplified in the advertisements from day to day. Read these advertisements and keep up with the history of your own times.

WARSAW LADIES ARE INTERTAINED

Mrs. Thomas Clement is Hostess at Gathering—Interesting Program.

WARSAW, May 1.—Mrs. Thomas Clement was hostess to the United Church Ladies' Aid on Thursday afternoon. A large number of ladies were present, with Mrs. Herrington in the chair, who impressed on those present the necessity of calling upon the sick and asked for reports of such calls to be given at the meeting.

The result of the auto race for the new members was that the Ford car, run by Mrs. Rufus Payne and Mrs. McIlivena had forty-three names with fifteen dollars and twenty-five cents; and the Chrysler run by Mrs. W. S. Anderson, and Mrs. George Weller, had forty-five names with seventeen dollars and fifty-cents. This money goes to the piano fund. There was also an nest egg of ten dollars, so the piano fund has a start of forty-two dollars and seventy-five cents. As a result of this race, a social evening will be held soon, with Mesdames R. Payne, W. S. Anderson, George Weller, O. B. Ivens; Arthur Edwards and Harry Digweed, as a committee to arrange for the evening

So few had been able to attend the special Easter service of the W. M. S. that Mrs. Herrington used the program again for the aid, and gave a short Easter talk, in which she stressed the part the woman took at the time of the Crucifixion, Burial and Resurrection; and of the need who do not know of Jesus.

Mrs. Arthur Edwards read "The Two Mary's at the Tomb"; Mrs. Rufus Payne sang "Somewhere the Sun is Shining"; Mrs. Robert Matthews read "Our Girls and their responsibilities" and Mrs. Roland Payne gave an instrumental selection.

Mr Trotter, a commercial traveller who was in Mr. Clement's store donated a dollar to the piano fund and also sent ice cream for the ladies when refreshments were served.

Mail Boxes Not Turned.

Some people forget to turn their mail boxes after removing mail, so that the couriers have to turn in to the box and stop, just to find that nothing is in it. It is not much, but it does make a little more work and if it happens several times when the roads are bad, it makes a great difference, and still more, if the mud is deep at the box he has to get out to look into the box.

Roads are Drying

Thursday's wind and sunshine dried the roads considerably. They really are fairly good except in a few places. The Dummer road is in very good condition, with the exception of a few very bad places.

Sap Finished

The syrup season is over and sap buckets will all be in soon.

CURRIE LIBEL SUIT NEARS CONCLUSION

cause he had fought their battles. "If you gentlemen want to know what Major-General MacBrien did to bring about contempt of the court on himself ask His Lordship. That statement he made in Ottawa about Sir Arthur Currie fighting the battles of the Canadian corps, made to influence the public, was contempt of court. Sir Arthur Currie gave the Star an article after the action had been taken. That was contempt of court. The pages of history will be silent on the death of these men who gave up their lives for the glorification of the plaintiff." He also recalled that the Rev. Major Kilpatrick had stated he had seen the dead bodies of the Canadians covered with flowers, that another witness had seen a dead Canadian pulled from the canal in Mons, and another saw a Belgian woman walk over and kick a dead German whose body lay in the gutter a few feet from a dead Canadian.

"Another witness says, 'Yes, I remember dead soldiers. I saw them pulling one out of the canal.' Another says, 'I remember seeing dying Canadians in Mons on the public square.' Another witness said he saw dead Canadian soldiers, for the Belgian populace showed them to him in an old shed. All in all there are thirty-nine dead soldiers in Mons. Gentlemen, I ask you where are the casualty lists of these thirty-nine men.

Privates for Defence.

"You will recall that all our witnesses with but one or two exceptions were privates and had to stand in the box and face their corps commander. Any of you gentlemen who have been in the army and know what discipline is will know what it means," said Mr. Regan. He also pointed out how with regard to the Pritchards, the evidence of defense witnesses had differed from that of the records from Ottawa.

"I'm going to ask you gentlemen to pay no attention to these reports brought from Ottawa. I am going to ask you gentlemen to pay no attention to these documents Ottawa has brought, when they set back casualties taking place on 11th to ninth. What about Joyce? He was killed at three minutes to eleven, riddled with machine gun bullets. Just what would you expect would happen when men are ordered to clean out machine gun nests without being supported by artillery?

"It is these coincidences in the evidence that I submit you prove by and all doubt that the casualties shown by these reports from Ottawa were wrong", Regan said.

Regarding the evidence of Col. Gow, Mr. Regan declared that the Colonel had agreed with the article written by Major General Morrison, an outstanding soldier and a gentleman. After thus introducing the article to the jury, Mr. Regan read parts of General Morrison's account of the capture and entry into Mons. "No bloodless victory. The enemy dead were thick in the suburbs. Captured in only six hours, one of the wonders of this war how men will entry along the streets, garnished netry along the streets, garnished with dead, followed by his battle standard. Sir Arthur's admission that he saw one dead German. All these were read from the documents, and yet they say there was no fighting", said Mr. Regan in a low pitched voice.

"Sir Arthur says he saw one dead German. At Ottawa is a picture eight by twelve showing the capture of Mons and in it is one dead soldier. In spite of all this I ask you are you going to find that there was no fighting in Mons and no dead.

Men Denied Credit.

"To think that those men who were buried in Mons by the Belgian citizens are denied the right to say that they gave up their life in the capture of Mons. Is it a fair deal for those dead men? That's all old man Wilson, brave man that he is, has said in his article that these dead men be given their due", pleaded Mr. Regan.

"Now then, one more thing and I'm through", he said. "I say the fighting in Mons was not justified. The lives of men who died were not justified. I wonder who is a traitor to his country. The man who stands up and says he will not advance at 10.00 o'clock in the morning or the man who orders his men forward fighting until the first minute. No wonder when Sir Arthur Currie stood in the witness box he said, 'Poor Price.' Were the officers of that naval division traitors when they would not go forward up till eleven o'clock. The British naval officer is just as noble, just as true, just as loyal, as any officer in the world. Yet they would not order their men to go forward. Were those officers traitors. The plaintiff has brought officers here who are a credit to any nation. I am proud to be connected with a case with which they are associated, and one of these is Col. Ewing who ordered his men to stop when he got the message. I wonder who was the traitor to his country."

Mr. Regan continued to explain that there had been orders issued not to shell the enemy machine gun positions but to carry them by hand.

"Sir Arthur Currie," said Mr. Regan, "claimed he had no discretion in the matter. He had but to obey his orders. It is true we hear of the glories of Mons", said Mr. Regan, recalling that there had been a celebration there and no where else along the whole front.

Nothing but Glory.

"That's the result of Mons. Nothing but glory, nothing but adulation for those who conceived the mad idea," declared Mr. Regan, continuing to claim that there was nothing for those who had died in the taking of Mons." They were even denied the honor and glory of having their names connected with the operation. Because the defendant had attempted to gain a little honor for these men, Sir Arthur Currie had come to him demanding $50,000.

"Marshal Foch, Field Marshall Haig, and Gen. Horne never dreamed there were enough men to conceive such an idea as to order troops forward at a quarter past ten, knowing the armistice came into effect at eleven o'clock," Mr. Regan asserted.

"Here is an article in this little Port Hope Guide, with perhaps 1,000 circulation. Some friend sent him this article. Here's the Ottawa Citizen publishes same story. Here's the St. Catharines Standard publishes the same story and Sir Arthur chooses to fight the little Port Hope Guide.

"Why did he not pick on something his own size?

"Don't you give him a dollar, for a dollar will probably mean $15,000 in costs.

"We tried to do our duty to the living, we have tried to do our duty to the dead, and because we dared to say some one failed to do his duty we are forced to put up $50,000.

"Gentlemen of the jury, I'm through. That is our story. I ask you to give him not a dollar, and General McBrien, give him the answer you would give any British subject who dared to stand in that witness box and give the answers which he gave", were the closing words of Mr. Regan's plea.

Wishes He Was a Lawyer.

W. T. R. Preston arose and commenced his address as Mr. Regan sat down. "I as a layman would much rather have the support of a lawyer. I would that others have the responsibility at this moment. But as I accepted the consequences in June, 1927, I shirk not one iota to-day. The circumstances surrounding this case are unfavorable. We have not been able to submit evidence which might been able to support, not part of, but every word of that editorial." Mr. Preston read from Hansard at some length.

Speech of Sir Sam Hughes.

"This speech was made by Sir Sam Hughes in the House of Commons. I had enjoyed fifty years of personal friendship with Sir Sam. In that time I had differed on many public questions with him, and I never expect to be called upon to defend the memory of Sir Sam Hughes. I desire that this matter be considered on its merits. This speech was made by Sir Sam nine years ago, the events referred to nearly 10 years ago. Sir Sam Hughes was Minister of Militia then, and he made himself acquainted with every phase of the war. He had peculiar facilities for securing most liable knowledge of the movements overseas and he travelled to England several times to study all the problems.

"And this public man gets up on the floor of the House and makes this statement! Sir Arthur Currie had admitted learning of the speech some few days later.

"But Sir Arthur had not attempted to meet Sir Sam in regard to the matter. At least there was no evidence of it in this trial. He had not written to the public press. He said he had spoken at Massey Hall, but he could not give me a copy of his speech. He could not tell me what other platforms he had spoken from on the subject of Mons. Later he wrote his interim report. There was not a word contained in it dealing with Sir Sam Hughes, although Currie was aware of the rumors long before he wrote that report.

Dispatch Sent by Mewburn.

"We know that there was a dispatch sent from Gen. Mewburn, the Minister of Militia, requesting about the Mons casualties. Would this book not have been an excellent place to make a reply?" asked Mr. Preston. "But there is not a word.

"Nine long years have rolled by and what has he done? Did he ever ask for a royal commission. His answer in that box two days ago was no. Don't you think Sir Arthur Currie, a man of the world as he is, would not have challenged the word of Sir Sam Hughes when he lived and called him a liar? But, no, he did nothing.

Ten Years Later.

"Ten long years afterward he attacks a somewhat unassuming person like myself and Mr. Wilson and the Guide."

Mr. Preston claimed he had asked Currie in the witness box if he had ever tried to trace down the rumor, but Currie said he had not. "Thus for two weeks the trial had gone on hampered by the law of evidence. But after General Sir Sam Hughes had died and was thus unable to uphold his statement Currie brought on his libel suit and proceeded to prove his case. He came after the public have accepted the story for 10 years when there has been no contradiction, and has brought witnesses here to attempt to put aside that which had been written by responsible officers.

Sir Arthur's Responsibility.

"There is a responsibility resting on Sir Arthur which he cannot shirk, but must bear, having taken no opportunity to set the matter right when Sir Sam Hughes was living. When it could have been cleaned up without putting it all to the expense of a Supreme Court action.

"It was bad enough not to tackle Sir Sam Hughes when he lived, for then there was enough in publication and street talk for him to go to the Government and ask for a royal commission, and yet he did nothing.

"Therefore, I say there is a scene of blame attached to him that can't be avoided that must rest, must inevitably rest upon his shoulders.

"You have heard the corps report the army reports. How are all them made up? You have heard so much that I am not surprised if you have forgotten.

"Where are these documents? Where are those relating to Mons? I have a right to ask that question, and we have asked the officials of the department. They don't know, and at least, to put it mildly, they ought to know.

Have Co-operated.

"The officials of the department have given us all they had, but the reports of the captains to the colonels, the colonels to the brigadiers, are not there. It is for you to answer why. I appeal to you who have been in this court, did you ever see a witness like Major Nickel who gave it in such a straight-forward manner, although he said he was giving it under subpoena? He told of a message for Marshall Haig and General Mewburn. Do you think he was perjuring his soul? I don't think you do," said Mr. Preston. "Does anyone doubt but that the report was made? Those of you who know anything about such a thing know a report would be made, every word would be weighed. It isn't in the department. It can't be found. Do you wonder the defendants in this action have had trouble to secure witnesses when such reports were missing. They have come, but with nothing, because they had nothing to bring.

"Now for a moment I propose taking up the question of Mons and all that pertains to it from the early days of November till the eleventh," said Mr. Preston. "There were some witnesses who were not conversant with the officers of Mons and whose sympathies were not with the defense since witnesses were military men and naturally in sympathy with Gen. Currie, although the evidence was fairly given." Mr. Preston said he referred to Col. Little, who had stated from the witness box that from Nov. 4th everything pointed toward Mons.

Wild Proposal.

"We are told an arrangement was made between Generals Currie and Horne to take Mons. I say here that I do not think throughout the whole war there was a more wild proposal made.

"We have no word of Mons' have gone on, a large enveloping movement. Germany would have probably found an excuse to get out. But he knew there would have been a sufficient force left behind to fight a rear guard action. Those men left there would have expected to fight to the death," said Mr. Preston. "General Currie knew that there had been 215,000 Canadian casualties in France. Good God! wasn't that enough? And yet he chose to send his troops against that. The German army was not in retreat. It was a rout. They were leaving their baggage, their impedimenta behind. Their lines of retreat were being cut off."

A War Lord.

Referring to an article in the Toronto Star some months ago in which Sir Arthur Currie is said to have said, "God, I'd like to see them at it again," Mr. Preston referred to Gen. Currie as a "war lord, trained in an insurance office and the real estate business." Referring to the "stubborn machine gun opposition," Mr. Preston stated that a machine gun could fire 600 rounds a minute and could cut the top off the jury box as "clean as though it had been cut with a saw."

"There is no evidence to show Foch ordered this attack on Mons. There was nothing of the kind. He says General Horne ordered him to make this attack. Were is General Horne? Why is he not here? Therefore, we are only left to draw our own conclusions.

"Would General Clark stop at eleven? No, not if he had his way, but he was far enough behind the lines not to be killed himself.

"And then we have our old friend. General MacBrien, 'We went to war that this country might not come under the rule of German militarism.' God help this country if it ever comes under the rule of such militarism as General MacBrien." In his remarks which followed Mr. Preston said he had never seen any witness make such an exhibition as General MacBrien had made. He censured the speech severely which General MacBrien had made at a military dinner held in the Chateau Laurier since the opening of this case. General MacBrien's evidence was in marked contrast to that of Col. Ewing, whose men had "not fired a shot" after getting advance word of the Armistice.

Then followed a vivid word picture of the troops marching away from their homes "to Hades." Mr. Preston described the cheers of the children as the band played. But, he added, the older people did not cheer. They realized that these men were probably marching to their deaths.

Much Needless Loss

The speaker then read from Hansard a speech of Sir Sam Hughes when he said if there had not been needless waste of life at Passchendaele, Cambrai and other battles, there would not have needed to be one single soldier sent overseas since 1916.

"You are face to face with an official statement, that there was recklessness in lives overseas. Should we not have been taught a lesson? And I say here without fear of contradiction, that there should not have been a Canadian life lost after November 8.

"Here's the First Army Report. It was known by the 10th of November that an armistice would be signed," Mr. Preston read, and continued reading that activities did not abate in the Canadian Corps. The German army was in rout, and incapable of giving battle. They were trying to get out of the bottle neck formed by the American army coming with rapid strides up the Meuse. It was madness, cursed——I will not say it. It was more than madness to send an army against a fortified city. There were dead all through the city. No Canadians entered Mons before November 10th at 11.00 p.m. Therefore these men must have been killed on November 11th.

"I say in my charge General Currie was responsible. He says he obeyed General Horne's orders, but there is

A GENUINE GRIEVANCE.

Canadian growers of fruit and vegetables who complain that their market is seriously menaced by the dumping of surplus United States products into this country just as the Canadian goods are coming on the market make out a good base.

In the long run, while the consumer may temporarily benefit, it is not a good thing for this country that foreign goods should be dumped into Canada to the detriment of our own producers.

The growing of vegetables and fruit is a very important industry in this Province, and we cannot afford to have it hurt by unfair competition from outside the borders of Canada when a remedy is at hand and easily applicable.

PETERBOROUGH'S GROWING EXHIBITION.

Peterborough's Industrial Exhibition is suffering from growing pains; in other words, it continues to attract Canadian exhibitors of livestock at such a rate that the directors are hard put to it to provide sufficient accommodation for the exhibits.

The fact that more buildings for the housing of livestock are urgently needed at the present time, and the Exhibition Board is now wrestling with the problem of how these necessary buildings are to be provided, is clear evidence that the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is not one of those fall fairs where the encouragement of agriculture has been shoved aside to make room for entertainment and amusement features.

The local Exhibition believes that development of these two departments should go hand-in-hand, and thus while there are probably no fairs of the calibre of the Peterborough Industrial that spend so much money on entertainment features, the prize lists have been increased each year, and despite the providing of additional accommodation, livestock entries continue to grow at a pace that threatens to swamp the board.

Progress is being made all along the line.

WORTH-WHILE IMMIGRANTS.

G. A. Gillespie, acting for the colonization department of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been successful in placing some seventy British farm laborers among farmers of this district, and has applications for 40 more men for whom places are waiting.

It is satisfactory to learn that not only are these men from the British Isles but that they are a very desirable type in other respects, and should make good without trouble.

Every immigrant of this calibre brought into the district is an asset, and the farmers of this section of Ontario who have been hard hit in the past because of the difficulty in securing help when it was most needed will reap the benefit of the arrival of these newcomers.

It should not be necessary to plead on behalf of the farm laborers who are coming into our district that they be given fair treatment and encouraged to succeed in the work to which they are devoting themselves.

Upon the treatment they receive and the reports they make of their experience in Canada will depend to a great degree whether or not we can be assured of that influx of farm laborers that is so badly needed.

A DRIVE ON THE TREASURY.

Reports from Ottawa continue to foreshadow a persistent drive on the part of members of Parliament to increase their sessional indemnities, the request of Canadian judges for larger remuneration being used as a justification for more money for the members.

The latest story is that those representatives who are urging the increase as asking for $6,000 per session, but are willing to compromise on $5,000.

Apparently membership in Canada's Parliament is now being regarded not as a national duty but as an occupation.

That is a backward step.

It does not add to the prestige of Parliament, nor does it ensure the presence at Ottawa of members of the calibre and qualifications necessary for the best possible service in the interest of the people of this country.

The statement is made that even under the present indemnity of $4,000 per session there are more members in the present Parliament who are dependent upon their sessional indemnity for their livelihood than in any previous Parliament, and an increase in the remuneration of the members is likely to intensify this condition, developing a Parliament of professional politicians.

If that is the trend some people may think it would be better business to greatly reduce the membership of the House and then pay salaries large enough to attract first-grade men.

PRISON LABOR.

While he was still Attorney-General for Ontario Hon. W. F. Nickle had under consideration a scheme by which prisoners serving sentences would be given an opportunity of doing certain work to aid in the support of their wives or families who might be in need. Unfortunately the tide of political favor had turned and swept Mr. Nickle out of office before his ideas along this line had borne practical fruit or even been tried out. Now from Ottawa comes the news that Hon. Ernest Lapointe is giving thought to a scheme designed toward the same end as that intended by Mr. Nickle.

It is a thorny problem that the Minister of Justice sets himself to solve. Difficulties will meet him at every turn. On the surface it looks as though nothing could be simpler than to set prisoners to work at productive labor, sell what they produce and apply the proceeds to aid their families. But the moment that is done prison labor enters into competition with organized labor in the open market, a situation that would inevitably provoke bitterness and strife. Should the Government, again, pay prisoners for work that is productive of no revenue the liability that our prisoners are to the State becomes increased. What Mr. Lapointe's scheme has to avoid is the Scylla of competition on the one hand, and the Charybdis of increased expenditure on the other. If he can steer a middle course between these two he will make a contribution to the moral welfare of prisoners and to public well-being. Both he and Mr. Nickle are deserving of thanks for their efforts in this direction.—The Globe.

AN EDITOR WHO IS HAPPY.

Down in the little town of Fountain Inn, South Carolina, is a weekly newspaper called the Tribune, edited as a hobby by Robert Quillen, who is trying to carry on in a modest way the old traditions of personal journalism. He tells his readers what they want to know about one another, and in between news items and in the editorial page discourses wisely on manners and philosophy.

"Greenville County was calm and peaceful over the week-end," he writes, presumably in an ironic vein. "One white man was shot and killed; another received pistol wounds that may prove fatal; a third was shot in one arm; a negro was shot by his woman and is expected to die; and seven white men were cut and slashed with pocket knives. Otherwise everything was quiet and orderly." His heading reads: "Only Eleven Efforts This Week to Kill."

The white man killed was a policeman. The editor tells the story and concludes: "Simpsonville has been courting trouble of this kind. A prominent citizen of the town, according to common report, does a flourishing bootlegging business, and men and boys have been drinking heavily for months."

But Editor Quillen prefers the homely news items of his own people. "Dr. M. E. Redick," we read, "has been ailing for ten days—the first time since 1918—as the result of trying to consume the whole of a fish stew at Fork Shoals." Mrs. J. A. Barry and Mrs. H. C. Curry entertained the Sorosis Club, whereupon "Mrs. J. C. Smith and Mrs. C. P. Armstrong tied for the honor of knowing the most Mother Goose rhymes and Mrs. C. J. Jones was the winner of another enjoyable contest." Mrs. Gladys Babb, of the Rabun community, who weighs ninety pounds and is the mother of two sets of twins, all living, "last week gave birth to triplets, all of whom are doing well." Conway Jones has planted oaks on his Main street property. The cotton buyers had a big day Saturday.

And right in the midst of the personal news from Bethany and Crescent, Clear Spring and Fork Shoals, Waycross and East Fairview, the editor writes a piece about short skirts:

"It always offends me to see a girl in short skirts reach down every few moments and try to pull the skirt over her knees. That is, it offends me if she is facing me and is aware of my presence. The act is a confession that she thinks I am looking at her knees—which I may be. But I always want to say to her: 'My dear, you needn't be so particular. I'm not interested in your darned legs. They're not particularly fetching, anyway, and I'm an old man.' My belief is that a modest girl wouldn't pull at her skirts that way. For one thing, she wouldn't be thinking about her legs all the time; and, for another, she wouldn't call attention to them so often, even if she did think about them."

"I have a Corner Lot in Paradise" is the caption over the leading editorial "I have reached the goal of all ambition," says the editor "I have achieved an ideal existence and found in it complete contentment." He has found the "ideal climate," he has birds and flowers and neighbors who bring him layer cake and a flivver which takes him over perfect roads to the city. "That," he comments, reviewing his blessings, "that is life at its ultimate perfection." But we have to doubt his complete contentment. No editor could be perfectly happy in the face of the typographical errors which abound in Mr. Quillen's delightful Tribune.—Ottawa Journal.

THE FUTILITY OF WAR.

Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador to the United States, characterizes war between his country and the one to which he is accredited as "unthinkable and the greatest possible calamity to civilization." And he adds one of the most sensible thoughts imaginable when he says: "Is it possible, that because in some parts of the world we may be trade rivals, because we may be somewhat irritated on account of such rivalries, we can either of us ever believe that by going to war we shall improve matters? I really cannot believe that the people of either country will be so purblind as that. No one will surely ever risk a war unless the prospects of ultimate advantage are believed to be greater than the risk incurred."

Sir Esme has placed his finger on the very root of the matter. People talk glibly about trade rivalries making war inevitable. It is firmly fixed in their minds that because Great Britain and Uncle Sam are pushing each other in the business world they must ultimately resort to arms to settle their differences, if any. But what good would that do? asks Sir Esme Howard. How could matters ever be improved by going to war?

There you have the thing in a nutshell. No nation really wins in the modern game of war. The supposed winner is invariably just as badly off as the supposed loser. The very nature of modern conflict and the dependence of the nations one upon the other mean that war results can never be anything more than a draw, in the long run, and that the nation which actually wins on the battlefield may, eventually, find itself the chief loser.

War settles nothing. It is out of date because its futility has been thoroughly established.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Anyway Premier Taschereau has told us where he stands in regard to the St. Lawrence waterway development scheme.

It is presumed that in his vegetable-grading bill Hon. Mr. Motherwell is seeking to prove that he knows his onions.

One mystery is how Tommy Church, M.P., will be able to keep an eye on Parliament and still see the opening ball game at Toronto to-morrow.

Drowning accidents are beginning to contend with motor fatalities for newspaper space. With the outdoor season at hand, safety first principles should be observed everywhere.

The melting pot will have to work overtime in Western Canada as alien immigrants pour into the Prairie Provinces.

A contemporary somewhat pertinently inquires why if the Senate is to be abolished there should be any fuss about woman's right to sit therein?

In his address to the Rotary Club yesterday Mr. Downey remarked that with some reservations Canada had an enlightened electorate. The Examiner's report transformed this into "unenlightened" electorate, so we hereby apologize all round to the speaker and to the electorate.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, May 1 (Canadian Press). — Extreme dullness marked the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday owing to the absence of any demand from foreign buyers. The only change in the local trade was an advance of two cents per bushel in the price of Argentine corn and sales were made at $1.22 per bushel, ex-store. The trade in Canadian Western oats was slow, but the prices were unchanged.

A feature of the flour trade was the stronger following that developed for winter wheat grades and prices were advanced ten cents per barrel. This was attributed to the continued strength in the Winnipeg cash wheat situation. The tone of the market for spring wheat grades was strong, but there was no change in prices.

The trade in all lines of mill feed continued active owing to the marked increase in the demand from United States buyers. The domestic trade was also good and prices were firm.

A moderate trade was done in all grades of fresh eggs and prices were firmly maintained. The receipts were 11,922 cases.

An easier feeling developed in the potato market, and prices were reduced five cents per bag. This was attributed to the limited demand.

The undertone to the market for imported beans was steady, but the volume of business was small.

Owing to the continued limited demand a weaker feeling developed in the butter market, and prices were reduced ¼ cent per pound. The receipts were 554 packages.

Little business was transacted in cheese, but values were about steady. The receipts were 401 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 1 (Canadian Press). — In a wild buying stampede yesterday, wheat, corn, oats, and rye all smashed the season's record for high prices. Momentum for big upward swings in grain values had for a source largely a widespread belief that May 1 crop reports from private experts will indicate a yield of domestic winter wheat this season about 52,000,000 bushels less than was harvested last year.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 2¾c to 3¾c net higher, with corn showing 3¾c to 4¼c advance, oats at ¾c decline to ¾c gain, and provisions ranging from 2c lower to a rise of 20c.

Right from the beginning, wheat was at a furious pace, and according to some observers the pit showed more evidence of excitement than at any time since the World War. Meanwhile, persistent by weather southwest, west, and north-west with advices of dust storms threatened to curtail wheat production even more than to-day's monthly unofficial estimates were expected to announce.

It was pointed out in connection with the private crop report due today that a yield of less than 500,000,000 bushels of domestic winter wheat this season, the amount talked about in most quarters yesterday, would compare not only with 552,000,000 bushels harvested last year, but also with a five-year average of 549,000,000 bushels.

In view of apparent likelihood of such an exhibit, individual operations yesterday counted for little, and relative weakness displayed by the Liverpool wheat market was merely scoffed at. Word of a decrease of 1,923,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply, together with a general forecast of continued rainless skies, kept the Chicago market at the boiling point until the last tap of the closing gong.

Corn surprised wheat in strength as the day drew to an end. A big falling off of 3,832,000 bushels in the corn visible supply was mainly responsible. Earlier, the corn market derived its upward trend from the action of wheat. The corn visible supply is now 33,556,000 bushels, against 36,621,000 bushels a year ago.

Oats fluctuations were irregular, the May delivery being weak, whereas the new crop months were firm.

Provisions, although easier at the start, became firmer afterwards sympathizing with the course of hog values and of grain.

GOD'S MINUTE

We thank Thee, and praise Thy glorious Name ....1 Chr. 29:13

Our Father Who art in Heaven, we are Thy children, created in Thy image, redeemed by the blood of Thy Son, and dependent on Thy grace for all that we enjoy. Our health, our happiness, our food, our clothing, and many other good gifts are the evidence of Thy gracious care, and we pray that we may have grace and strength to honor Thee for what Thou hast done for us, by loving one another, and doing good unto all men, as we have opportunity. Come Thou, O Blessed Saviour, and dwell within us by Thy Spirit, and teach us in all things to do Thy will. We have often been forgetful of Thee, and disobedient to Thy commands, and we pray that our sins may all be forgiven for Thine own Name's sake. As we enter upon each new day, remind us of the fact that we can only hope to attain to the best success by Thy favor and blessing, and we would seek to make ourselves worthy of these, by so performing the common tasks of life, as to honor Thy name. If we have difficult duties to perform, or dangerous temptations to meet help us to realise that our sufficiency is in Christ, and that all things are possible to him that believeth.

And all we ask is in the name of Christ, our Saviour. Amen.

Spring Work Starts

Harold Tate, George Bonner, W. W. Brown, and others in their neighborhood on the Fourth Line, Cavan, were on the land for the first time this season Thursday, plowing and some cultivating being the work under way. Seeding will be practically general in this section by next week, providing the fine weather continues.

Some fall wheat is reported killed, while other fields still give promise of coming through fairly well, though recent conditions have not been favorable, through the greater portion of this month. Clover is reported as being more damaged than the wheat.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Allen have moved from their farm south of the village and are living in W. H. Coombe's house for the present. Mr. Allen will assist his father in working the home farm this summer. Walter Widdis has moved to Mr Allen's farm.

Miss M. E. Needham has returned to Toronto after a short holiday at her home here.

The Rev. N. Stout, of Bancroft was a visitor in town at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Stout, Mill street.

Did You Mortgage Your Home Yesterday?

WHY not lift the menace from your family to-day?

You had to mortgage it, of course, to finance the purchase of your home but you know right well that the mortgage that gave you your home can take it away from your family—should you die before it is paid off.

No man can sleep soundly at night while this menace exists.

Here is the soundest and most economical way out of the difficulty—an Imperial Mortgage Protection Policy. It will discharge the Mortgage in full should you die before it is paid: it will pay you a monthly income should you become disabled: or it will hand you a tidy sum for your own use should you survive the mortgage.

Particulars of the very liberal provision of Imperial Mortgage Protection Policies will be furnished on request.

Daily Newspapers are the Perennial Gulf Stream Keeping Canada's Business Life Prosperous and Fertile

CANADA has a huge industry in which at least $40,000,000 is invested, about which little appears in the various trade reports. Its function in the country's life corresponds to that of the Gulf Stream in the seas.

If the people who give their time to this work stood in a single row across Canada, from Atlantic to Pacific, there would be one person every 350 yards —and it costs about $2,000,000 a month to meet the payroll.

WHILE this great utility is privately owned, it belongs to the people as does no other. They depend on it to fight for their interests, to act as their informer, friend and guide, and to inspire progress in every part of the land. It is a powerful auxiliary to Business. This unique industry is indispensable, and is known as THE DAILY NEWSPAPER PRESS.

SOMEONE has said that next to the rising sun the Daily Newspaper is the most wonderful thing in the world. And because it touches so intimately the lives of all the people of Canada it is easily the best of all advertising mediums, as it is the cheapest.

It carries its treasures of news—gathered from all parts of the earth—directly into the home, and it is cordially received as one of the family. Linked up with it, Advertisements receive a sympathetic reading, because Advertisements of the stores, the factories, financial houses and other institutions are, after all, merely the NEWS of industry, commerce and finance. And the reception the Advertisement receives is the thing that counts in results.

Statistics show that as much money is spent annually in Newspaper Advertising as in all other forms combined.

BUSINESS MEN simply cannot afford NOT to advertise through these mediums of such far-reaching appeal and power

FOURTH PETERBOROUGH TROOP

The meeting of the fourth opened on Thursday with flag break and inspection. A couple of good games were played such as foot in the ring followed by the instruction periods.

The periods had just started when the S. M. called the troop out of the corners. Mr. John and Mr. Wearing were there. Mr. John spoke to the troop for a few minutes. The Kiwanis Club had decided to send a member to each meeting of the various troops to speak to the troops about their professions or business to give the scouts ideas as to the things they might want to take up. Mr. John had brought Mr. Wearing to speak. Mr. Wearing told the troop a great deal about be coming a lawyer. Mr. Wearing's talk was enjoyed by all and gave some boys an idea as to what they must do to become a lawyer.

The troop has started a log book and Mr. Corbett had written some very funny things about members of the troop. The P. L. of the Kangaroos are hopping along in the lead of the competition although the Owls and the Crows are fluttering along close behind.

man of the Property Committee during Ald. Ackerman's absence in the mining district, was authorized, with the Mayor and a representative of the City Trust, to consider the request of the Aladdin Company that the city sell a building lot next the factory. The general feeling of the committee was that the sale of a lot off the city's property there would spoil the land as a factory site, the purpose for which the city bought it some years ago.

The Parks Committee will meet on Thursday evening at King Edward Park to go over the situation and see what is to be done there this year towards making improvements. The Mayor and chairman will interview Warden Morley Smithson about repairs needed in Victoria Park.

IN POLICE COURT

Alexander McLean, an old man with a long sandy beard and standing well over six feet high, appeared before Magistrate Langley this morning, charged with being a vagrant. In his defence he asked that the man with whom he worked be notified so that he would come and get him.

Early this morning County Constable Dickson received complaints about a man bothering the residents of Asphodel Township. Mr. Dickson went out to find his man and got him on the Norwood-Hastings Road, walking very slowly. He refused to answer the questions asked by the officer. When searched he was found to have no money, so he was brought to this city and charged with vagraney.

In the box this morning he pleaded not guilty, and the constable was called to give evidence. The prisoner refused to say anything in his own behalf relative to the charge. His Worship found him guilty and sentenced him to one week in the common jail, with the orders that he tell the jail surgeon or the gaoler where his friends resided so that they might be communicated with.

CHAMBER HOLDS CLEAN-UP WEEK

Jam Caused By Issue of Licenses and Many Annual Meetings.

"This is clean-up week in the Chamber of Commerce," said the secretary in conversation with The Examiner this morning. "Business arising out of the annual meetings of the Chamber and allied organizations together with the seasonable rush in the license permit department has resulted in somewhat of a 'jam', so much so that President James Dutton has decided that no business meetings of the chamber shall be held this week except in cases of emergency. This will permit the staff to dispose of various matters which have been pending, many of which are services to members, the public at large, manufacturers, merchants and tourists."

Around the City

Owing to the absence of His Honor Judge Huycke, the regular sitting of the First Division Court of the County of Peterborough will be held on Monday next, instead of on Friday of this week.

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Humoresque", "A President Is Born"

His wife, when she had time to observe at all, sometimes cast at him puzzled glances, a pucker between her lovely eyes.

He supposed that he had what he wanted. It behooved him to suppose that. He was afraid even to doubt it.

FROM the time he was eleven years old, the dream had been taking shape. It was a simple dream that had to do with a straw-thatched house, a low one-story one with leaded windows that opened out over a seaward view and a barn filled with homely cattle, and here, there and everywhere plenty of chimneys with smoke curling upward.

That was about as definite as the dream was at first. As he grew older, it took on variations. But not enough to really change the pastoral simplicity of the Arcadia that was stamped so vividly against the imagination of one Russell Hand Cape, even after he had become an executive, a financier and a magnate. There was something that seemed nothing short of willful in the way the simple realization of this simple possession seemed to evade Cape. During the long years of his struggle, he had been unable to afford it. When success came, it came so suddenly, so voluptuously, so enormously, that his dream found itself, translated itself into mansions and vast estates.

To be sure, there had been one or two attempts to capture the simplicity of the dream. But when Cape's wife beheld the architectural plans for the thatched cottage-by-the-sea, the novelty of it caught her interest, and the idea gradually elaborated into a superb example of a Norman house, a hundred and fifty feet in width and with beautiful beamed rooms and cleverly-concealed sunken baths and a rustic garden that had been elaborately planned by a famous landscape designer.

And as Cape's life, in the whirlwind of success became more and more complex, the dream began to recede, much as the exit of a tunnel can recede as you view it from the rear platform of a train that has just shot out of it. In time, the dream became a pin-point. The pin-point, however, did not disappear.

Somewhere, against the retina of Cape's consciousness, it clung.

THERE were those who suspected Cape of being the unhappy man that he was, but not from anything that he said, nor from anything he did. He moved through the splendid panorama of his surroundings with as much grace as the next one would have. He was the head of a house that comprised a beautiful woman, his wife, two beautiful daughters and a young man, his son, of promise as good as the average. Hundreds of men and women were in his employ. Servants were at his beck and call. He had power, of no mean sort, and position and dignity.

Russell Hand Cape was a name to conjure with not only in the social and industrial life of his community, but the country over. The name of his firm was practically a household phrase. It could be said of Russell Hand Cape that he had built up the institution of his business brick by brick, mortaring those bricks with the tenacious quality of his own industry.

When he was fifty, he was head of a Renaissance and stone-lace house on the most expensive acreage in the most expensive city in the world; of a Long Island estate of an Adirondacks camp that had thirty rooms and running water in every one of them and of the Norman house that overlooked Lake George.

One of Cape's daughters married an Italian nobleman of lineage close to the throne. Another married the son of the third richest man in America. This was the wedding said to be the most elaborate function of its kind that New York had ever seen. It was variously estimated by Sunday-supplements, gossip, society weeklies and the patter of two continents, that it had cost Cape, what with jeweled souvenirs, unprecedented floral display, special yachts, feasting and display, a cool eight hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

THE Russell Capes had arrived with splendor and permanence of the kind that money and social position can assure. Viola Cape might have been pardoned a certain pride of achievement. In a way, Russell recognized his wife's captaincy, her brilliant social and executive power and her clear-eyed knowledge of what she wanted out of life.

At forty-five, what she wanted, she had. And at fifty, Russell supposed in a way, that what he wanted, he had. It behooved him to suppose that. He was afraid to even doubt it. Men regarded him with envy. It was not that Russell was weary of the flesh-pots. He had struggled with his vigor, his ambition and his desire toward the goal he had achieved. It was just that at fifty, a lassitude was on him. A lassitude, that visits to his physicians; spas; to his Adirondack camp; his Normandy house did not seem to allay.

For a while, it seemed to Russell that he might be indulging in the rich-man's well-known pastime—a nervous breakdown. This he pooh-poohed. It was just that he was tired. It was just that he was unsatisfied. Enormously unsatisfied. A dissatisfaction that began to cut brackets around his mouth and make it sag at the corners.

To what extent this man, in the midst of life, had isolated himself from it, not even the members of his family quite realized. They only knew that Cape seemed to be in the throes of a depression that had nothing to do with business difficulties or any other condition they were able to analyze. It was not that they were particularly disturbed. There was little time for that and it was more than probable that it was the result of the overstrain subsequent to the royalistic functions that had to do with his second daughter's marriage.

THUS it was that the disappearance of Russell Hand Cape came in the form of an undiluted shock to his family. To the more perspicacious, this disappearance might not have been so overwhelmingly out of a clear sky, but to the world in which Cape had moved and had his being, it passed understanding.

He had gone out for a walk one evening after dinner, following the beautiful trail of pine woods that led off his estate, inland. That was the last. No subsequent station-master, fisherman, man, woman or child had beheld him after.

Detective agencies, radio announcements, posters, advertisements, searching-parties were subsequently put into action. Everywhere he was listed and described in catalogues and lists of "missing persons."

At the end of the three years, the disappearance of Russell Hand Cape was as much a mystery as it had been at the end of the first three days.

THE superb household of which Russell Hand Cape had been the head still moves grandly on. Russell Cape, Junior, has taken up his place as head of the tremendous business which has long since reached the stage where it automatically goes forward.

Society concedes that Mrs. Cape and her family are entitled to regard the husband and father as dead.

And they do, overlooking, however, none of the stray clues that every once in a while present themselves and invariably prove fictitious. Every year, Mrs. Cape, with one or two of her daughters and perhaps her son, crosses on one of the huge ocean-liners for a few months' sojourn in a superb villa they have recently built on the Italian Riviera.

Sometimes, these great boats make a few hours' stop at a beautiful Mediterranean village called Funchal, situated on one of the Madeira Islands.

On these occasions, the inhabitants come crowding down to the shore to wave to the passengers that line the deck of the ship. It is quite a treat for them, offering a brief respite from their homely agricultural and handiwork chores.

FROM a small thatched farmhouse on the mountain-side, a house wth mullioned windows and a barn for cattle and several chimneys that send up plumes of smoke, there invariably emerges on these occasions the figure of Russell Hand Cape. He is tanned, toughtened and fattened by now, and the brackets about his mouth have gone.

Sometimes, as he stands and stares at the ship anchored out there in the distance, his own wife and daughters and son are among the specks standing at the rail.

He stands regarding the distant ship with such calm!

It is the calm of a man who has come into strange wisdoms and secret meanings.

Grain Prices Fall On Profit-taking

CHICAGO, May 1 (Canadian Press). — Unofficial crop reports today as to wheat proved fully as bullish as expected, but immense profit-taking sales carried prices downward in the early dealings. The average of private estimates of the winter wheat crop was 474,000,000 bushels. Opening at 1 cent decline to ⅛ cent advance, wheat underwent severe general setbacks. Corn, oats, and provisions displayed relative strength, corn opening unchanged to ¼ cent off and then undergoing a sag all around, but later scoring sharp gains at times. Opening prices were:

Wheat, May 169¼, July 169¼. Corn, May 110⅞, July 114¼. Oats, May 65⅛, July 59⅛.

Mine Market Active With Most Stocks Weak

TORONTO, May 1 (Canadian Press). — A few strong spots cropped up in the active list on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, but for the most part the market remained weak. Hudson Bay sold up sixty cents at 19.20, and Barry Hollinger, the dominant issue, recovered nine at 95. Losses were numerous, but not of much importance, probably the biggest being a 30 point recession in Pend O'Reille at 1870. Kirkland Lake tended easier.

Toronto Stocks Firm In Active Trading

TORONTO, May 1 (Canadian Press). — In active trading, prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange remained generally firm this morning despite occasional soft spots. Oils were again features, with Imperial firming a point at 65 and British-American at 38¼ and International Petroleum at 41½ easing slightly. Cockshutt Plow Preferred softened three points at 121, but Foothills was a firm curb feature with a twenty point gain at 4.70. The regular list was for the most part unchanged in price, with Nickel firming just a quarter at 90, and Alberta Pacific Grain selling up two at 67. Rogers softening two at 68 came in for some activity.

New York Shares Resume Advance With Rails Leading

NEW YORK, May 1.— (Canadian Press.)—The stock market resumed its march to higher ground to-day with Rails again in the forefront of the advance. Extreme gains in active issues ranged from one to 12¼ points, with a few soft spots developing in Tobaccos, Coppers and Oils. Trading was not quite as heavy as yesterday, although the 2,000,000 share mark was crossed before the end of the third hour.

Southern and south-western Rails were in brisk demand. New peak prices for a year or longer, were registered by Missouri Pacific common and preferred, Chicago and Alton common and preferred, Southern Railway, and Reading Second preferred, the gains in which ran as high as 3½ points. Lackawanna, Reading and Atchison sold two to three points higher. A wave of profit-taking swept through the market around mid-day, but was checked by the lowering of the call money rate from 6 to 5½ per cent. Standard Oil of New York sold down a point but quickly recovered its loss.

Jury Requires Over Three Hours

he said, make an error. In that event there was the court of appeal, but the jury was bound to take the law as stated by the judge. Also His Lordship is bound to exclude evidence which is not relevant to the issue. His rulings are always made to the best of his ability and are subject to correction by the court of appeal. The jurors, said His Lordship, were required to perform their duty without fear, favor or affection.

Referring to his book, Justice Rose explained what is legally termed libel. If a person who is subject to libel brings his case to court, he shows that the statement is about him and is objectionable. If the plaintiff can establish these particulars, it is necessary that the defense prove otherwise.

In this particular case there are two issues: one being that the statements made were true in substance and in fact. The second issue was that the statement was fair comment on a matter of great public interest. In order to qualify a statement as fair comment, the defendant must prove his statements. A comment may be extreme and still be fair, but a comment cannot be established as fair comment unless the facts are proved. If the defendants have proved that every statement in their article is true and every comment fair, then, and only then, have they established their defense.

Sir Arthur Currie claims that the article defames him. The defendant, on the other hand, claims that every statement in the article was true and every comment fair. They claim that the statement does not mean the plaintiff. That you will judge when you read the article yourselves. There was a suggestion that part of the article did not concern the plaintiff. In an action for libel one does not sue for entertaining evil thoughts, they sue for statements made.

Average Man's View.

"When you deal with this paragraph you will put yourself in the place of an ordinary newspaper reader. Would he examine it line by line as we have done here, and, I am afraid, shall have to do again. Would he have turned up the list of the headquarters staff to see where General Currie was at the time or would he believe that it was General Currie who was fleeing for his life. You will have to decide what the article meant to the average man when he read it in his Port Hope Guide. Did this article prove defamatory to the plaintiff. That is the case for the plaintiff.

"On the other hand, have the defendants proved that the statements made in the article are true in substance and in fact?" Referring to the original article, His Lordship explained what parts were comment and what were statements of fact. In some instances there were sentences containing both statement of fact and comment. The jury must also decide as to whether the charge made regarding the capture of Mons referred to Sir Arthur Currie or to some other commander-in-chief. It had been suggested in the court that the order might have originated with the generalissimo Marshal Foch.

"One of the defendants," said His Lordship, "seemed to think it was possible to print gossip and by proving it was only gossip not be brought to task, but this is obviously not the truth. You cannot print gossip and not be taken to task unless you can prove it true, not simply prove that it was merely gossip. The fact must be proved."

Defence Must Prove.

His Lordship, continuing his detailing of the article, pointed out that Sir Arthur Currie was named in the latter part of the article. He also reminded the jury that it was for the defence to prove every statement since they had set up a defence that every statement was true in substance and in fact. Thus it was not for the plaintiff to disprove them.

"Now, gentlemen, it is the duty of a judge to set out the points that have been established by the evidence," said His Lordship.

Continuing, he informed the jury that it was for them to say what evidence was to be believed and what tended to establish one point or another. In this case it was a difficut matter for His Lordship to make a resume of the salient points of evidence. "We know now," he stated, "a great deal more than we did on November 11, 1918. We know the terms of the armistice and what happened. The Germans asked for a cessation of hostilities in order to discuss peace terms. Foch replied, in effect, that he would discuss peace terms with them when their armies were back in Germany and gave them the terms under which they were to be allowed to retire. The Germans were given 72 hours to accept. In the meantime, Foch ordered that all possible pressure be brought to bear in order to force the Germans to accept." These facts, His Lordship claimed, were not made public at the time. All that was known was in military circles of the higher commands.

His Lordship further pointed out that the plaintiff had denied certain statements but that it was not necessary for him to do so. Regarding the case for the defence, he was unable to deal with it at any great length, since he was unable to find some of it to have any direct bearing on the issue at stake. There had been interesting topics for discussion brought into the evidence but without any direct connection with the issue.

His Lordship was unable to read into the article any charge of mistake or incompetence dating back as far as Nov. 9, 1918. His Lordship further pointed out that calling ten witnesses who each saw a dead man does not show that there were ten dead men since each witness may have seen the same dead man. It had also been stated in evidence that the village of Mons was one which straggled out into suburbs such as Nimy and Petit Nimy. Thus it was difficult to define the exact boundaries of the village itself. The evidence of the Rev. George Kilpatrick was also recalled and it was pointed out that the Canadian dead were brought to Mons at the request of the City Fathers for the purpose of permitting the citizens of Mons to honor them by a public funeral. Evidence had also been produced in court which told where each of these men had been killed, or if wounded fatally, their hospital records.

Jury To Judge Evidence.

"But," said His Lordship, "it is for you to say whether or not you believe the evidence." How the war diaries were prepared and the difference between them and some of the evidence given by witnesses was also pointed out. The jury's attention was further drawn to the fact that these diaries were not ordinarily made up under ideal circumstances. On the other hand the regular casualty report was given after receiving information from several sources as a method of checking its correctness.

Referring to the witnesses called during the case, Justice Rose showed that there had been witnesses called from practically every unit operating in the immediate vicinity of Mons. His Lordship recalled such battalions as the 42nd, R.C.R., P.P.C.L.I., 19th and 20th, also the 24th Battery, Can Field Artillery. There had also been officers from the higher Canadian command and also the 22nd Imperial Corps.

Regarding a wild order which was supposed to have been given to a battalion of the 6th Brigade to charge a wood infested with machine guns, it had no bearing on the case that His Lordship could see. Even the courts, he admitted, sometimes lost sight of the issue between the parties. "You are dealing with the case of the man who had to handle the situation as he saw it," he said.

Not wishing to weary the jury, His Lordship said he would close his charge by repeating his advice given in his opening remarks regarding the statements of fact and fair comment. He also advised that a newspaper might apologize and there were certain provisions made along these lines for newspapers. There was the other alternative, what the defendants in this case had done. His Lordship also directed the jury that the article, alleged libellous, was not the same as the speech, or parts of it which were read in court made by the late Sir Sam Hughes in the House of Commons.

Ten agreed jurymen, His Lordship instructed, could bring in a verdict and it was his duty as judge presiding to give them such legal advice as might be required on points arising from time to time during their deliberation. They would have nothing to do with assessing the court costs, advised His Lordship, when asked by a juror regarding this point.

At 11.47 the jury filed out of court.

Mr. Regan Objects

After the jury left the court, Frank Regan rose to object to several points, some of them included in the remarks of His Lordship. Mr. Regan declared that the judge had enumerated and named many of the plaintiff's witnesses, while the defence witnesses had been referred to as those who gave evidence some days ago. In several cases, Mr. Regan claimed, the reports brought from Ottawa were incorrect and asserted that His Lordship had requested the jury to believe them rather than the evidence of witnesses.

It was also unlikely, Mr. Regan added, that the dead seen by the various witnesses were the same dead since the witnesses had entered from different directions and along different routes.

Major Grafftey's evidence showed that four prisoners had been taken in Mons, therefore the Germans could not have evacuated as His Lordship had reminded the jury.

Mr. Regan further disagreed with the judge's instruction to the jury or the evidence that people now knew more about the war than before.

There were also several other points with which Mr. Regan did not agree.

His Lordship: "I wish you would make your points, Mr. Regan."

Mr. Regan: "I think it is only fair that in recounting the evidence to the jury, both sides should be related."

His Lordship: "I agree with you, Mr. Regan."

Mr. Preston had no objections to raise in his own behalf. Mr. Parmenter, for General Currie, had nothing to which he wished to object.

LOVELY DANCES IN 'Y' PROGRAM

"Song of the Sea" is Title of One to be Given at Big Pageant.

COLORFUL SCENES.

"Song of the Sea" is the intriguing title of one of the lovely dances which go to make up the entertainment at the Y.W.C.A. Pageant, to be presented at the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week. The color which plays so prominent a part in any attractive presentation of this type has a large place in the Pageant's program. The dances excel in the differing beautiful tints used in the costumes and in the lights which will bring out all their daintiness.

Pink and blue roses and forget-me-nots make up the outfits of the Flower Babies in one of the tiny junior dances, each little Flower Baby having an attendant in a tot representing a big black Felix cat.

The Dutch Twins, in "A Peep into Holland," are in pale blue and yellow outfits, the girls wearing big aprons, while the "Trepak number, a Russian national dance, displays the tints of crimson and gold and navy. Interpreting the strains of the old favorite waltz, "The Blue Danube," are girls gowned in shimmering blue chiffons, while an Old French Polka has a setting of French peasant frocks, with flowered chintzes used in their making.

"Carol of the Spring" has pastel tinting in pink and rose and "Song of the Sea" shows mermaids with fringed seaweed skirts and their sandpiper and seagull companions, in sand-colored costumes.

The snappy gymnasium suits which are used throughout the season will be fresh and new for the program of wand, single stick and dumbell work, the club-swinging exercises, the Swedish calisthenics and the Mimetic representations, imitative of various actions used in sports and games.

FRED ROY SHOWS SOME FINE FILMS

George Street People Enjoy Pictures Screened at Recent Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Men's Association of George Street United Church, Fred L. Roy showed several reels of moving pictures. These included Col. Charles Lindbergh and the receptions accorded him after his famous flight.

One particularly fine and entertaining reel, taken by Mr. Roy, showed logging operations and preparations for shipping square timbers to Great Britain from the Tully property near the city.

These pictures were greatly appreciated and added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

THANK YOU, FOLKS

At the end of this, our first year in business, it is with exceedingly grateful feelings that we publicly acknowledge our appreciation of a splendid twelve months' patronage. Both members of our firm having grown up, and received our business training in Peterboro, naturally had made a wide acquaintance with the buying public, and we congratulate ourselves on the substantial and loyal support our friends have given us. Aside from the personal aspect of the support we have received, we like to believe that our service has been satisfactory, our goods all that we claimed for them, and our values entirely worthy of our aim to sell at popular prices.

Entering upon our second year, we do so with every confidence that the same methods that have produced a gratifying first year will win us like patronage in the next round of the calendar. Always on the watch to improve our service, we hope to see a growth this year in well-earned business expansion, which alone will satisfy us that we are keeping up with the march of progress.

Every man and young man who likes to be well dressed is welcome to come in and talk over the clothing question, whether prepared to buy or not, and need not fear being importuned to invest or made uncomfortable with high-pressure salesmanship.

With our heartiest thanks to every patron, we are,

Yours for better business,

RICHARD HALL LIMITED

D. J. McMILLAN QUITS SERVICE

Veteran C. N. R. Employee Began Work on Railway in 1874.

CONTINUOUS SERVICE.

Announcement was made by R. H. Fish, General Superintendent, Southern Ontario District, of the retirement of D. J. MacMillan, Superintendent of the Belleville Division, after a continuous service of fifty-two years. Upon his retirement, after more than half a century of continuous service with the old Toronto and Nipissing Railway, the Grand Trunk, and , latterly, the Canadian National, Mr. MacMillan has achieved the well-earned distinction of being one of the oldest members of the Canadian National System.

While officially Superintendent MacMillan is credited with 53 years of service, he has actually been on the "job" for a year and a half extra and it was back in 1874 he commenced as a section man, at Lorneville. For a year and a half he swung a pick and shovel but his actual railway service did not commence until '76 when he ran on the branch line between Whitby and Manilla Junction. Starting as a brakeman he gradually worked his way through the Operating Department until, in 1908, he was appointed Assistant Trainmaster, at Allandale. Two years later he was moved to Lindsay as trainmaster. In June, 1917, he was promoted to be Superintendent of the Belleville Division.

Mr. MacMillan will be succeeded by George A. Stokes, Superintendent of Terminals, at Toronto. Mr. Stokes likewise has had a long and meritorious service with the Grand Trunk Railway. Entering the service as warehouseman at Listowel, in 1899, he was appointed operator the same year, and in 1900, was transferred in a similar capacity to Owen Sound. Subsequently, he was moved to Southampton, as agent, and afterwards filled the same position at Harrison, Wingham, Wiarton and Brantford. In 1907, he was sent to Stratford, as train dispatcher, where he remained until 1911, when he was transferred to Toronto as yardmaster. Two years later he was appointed general yardmaster, and on October 25, 1912, was made Acting Superintendent of Toronto Terminals, this position being made permanent the following year. In August of 1913, he was appointed Division Agent, Ontario Lines, and in November, 1915, became Superintendent of Tunnel Terminals Port Huron, Mich., filling that position until June 20, 1918, when he returned to Toronto as Superintendent of Terminals, which position he has since occupied.

DOUGLAS MALLOCK'S BIRTHDAY HONORED

Writer of Lyrics of Life To Be Entertained By Prominent People.

CHICAGO, May 1.—With a governor's wife making the birthday cake, and governors, senators, literary lights and a multitude of the plain people sending greetings, what is believed to be the world's largest birthday party will be given next Saturday evening, May 5, in honor of Douglas Malloch, "the poet who makes living a joy". Mr. Malloch writes "Lyrices of Life" for The Examiner. On that night, at 8 o'clock eastern standard time, the party will be held in the studio of WLS, Chicago radio station, and broadcast to the millions.

Mrs. Samuel R. McKelvie, wife of former Governor McKelvie, of Nebraska is making the cake, but the number of candles has not been disclosed. However, the idea that a prophet is without honor in his own country seems to have been exploded, for among the first to send messages were Gov. Fred W. Green, of Mich. the state of the poet's birth, and ex-Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, the poet's place of residence.

ONE MAN DEAD; TWO MISSING

Rock Slide Causes Derailment of C.P.R. Freight Near Smith Falls Last Night.

FEARED THREE DEAD.

SMITH'S FALLS Ont., April 30.—(Canadian Press).—Though three men are believed to have been killed when an engine and a number of cars of a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train were derailed in a rock cut twenty miles west of here last evening, so far only the body of Engineer Caterine has been recovered from the wreckage. Brakeman Wood, who with the engineer was from Smith's Falls, and Fireman Mackenzie of Havelock are missing.

The derailment was caused by a fall of rock from the north side of the cutting, according to railway officials.

ORIGINAL POEM MARKS MEETING

That count when the course is run
But the little tasks unnoticed
That have faithfully been done.

For 'tis not the lot of many
To merit a nation's praise
But we all can help a neighbor
And assist in a hundred ways.

We can do our daily duties
The best we know how to do
We can make our home a sanctum
Where our loved ones strength renew.

We can comfort those who sorrow
Can tell of a Father's love
We can give a cup of water
In the name of One above.

We can sing a song with gladness
To those who must walk alone
We can speak a word of kindness
In a sympathetic tone.

And forgetting self in service
Can help to diffuse a ray
Where the sunshine comes but seldom
To illuminate the way.

IN PETERBOROUGH CHURCHES

St. Peter's Catheral

Speaking at the Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday His Lordship Bishop O'Brien explained the object of the mission which will commence at the Catheral next Sunday and continue for two weeks, the first week being devoted to the women of the parish and the second week to the men.

"Almighty God gives us sufficient grace to save our souls. We have wonderful means of grace in the daily Mass, in prayer, and in offering to God our thoughts, words and actions. A Mission is a time which may be devoted to intensified meditation upon the great truths of Christianity and to an effort to increase our own virtue. The first great obligation imposed upon us by the Almighty is to save our souls, but we spend much time in trivial and unimportant things which deflect our thoughts from his important duty."

For the zealous and devoted type of Christian, a Mission is a welcome time which gives an opportunity to reflect upon the goodness of God, and is affords an inspiration to greater zeal for His honor and glory. To the careless and indifferent person, who is unwilling to offend God by mortal sin but who wishes to get into heaven in the easiest possible way, it is a time of regenerating and vitalizing grace. This is the class of person alluded to in the words: "I would that you were either hot or cold. But because you are neither hot nor cold, but lukewarm, I will begin to vomit you out of My mouth."

The third class is the one that is living in mortal sin, in enmity towards God, careless of the practices of religion and neglecting all the opportunities of grace.

"There is no one who will deliberately choose evil rather than good, but there are many people who will continually challenge the temper. They will go a long way on the road with him and become in time very accustomed to his evil countenance.'

The Mission will be preached by three Redemptorist Fathers and a cordial invitation to all Catholics and non-Catholics alike was extended by His Lordship.'

Mention was made of the Forthcoming visit here on May 23rd of the Apostolic Delegate in Canada, who will remain in the city for two or three days in connection with the Knights of Columbus' celebration.

Reference was also made of the Forty Hours' Devotion, which opened yesterday, at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

body and enough fun to leaven it combined to make a wholesome evening's entertainment. Each character was well taken and no attempt was made on the part of any to appropriate more than a fair share of the limelight. Western in character, the play had plenty of action, and a very definite plot involving a pretty girl, Ruth Arlington; her honest lover, Harold Morton, who is the victim of a diabolical scheme of the villain; a Mexican, Pedro Selvera. Incidentally there were other important characters who kept things moving and whose parts were equally strong: the rancher, Clarence Ogden, was a live wire and might have been a member of the 'Happy Family" made famous in Bower's stories, his pretty sweetheart and her jovial father, Samuel Hopkins, who was devoted to Clarence's widowed mother and her custard pies and flap jacks. At times, it was hard to say which received the greater amount of devotion. A gambler, Jim Parker, who is on the Square and who rights the wrongs and succeeds in foiling the dastardly plot of Silvera. A western play would be incomplete without a sheriff, and Bill Jones ably filled the role.

The costumes were good and appropriate to the play, giving the proper atmosphere and a touch of realism which held the attention of the audience, especially those of the cowboy, the Mexican, and the Indian Maiden.

The acting was natural and showed careful preparation and excellent training, and the parts each in itself a character study, were admirably depicted. Some of the parts were heavy, but carried through apparently without recourse to the prompter. The emotional parts were carried through without the slightest overdoing and the drama was clear cut and snappy, bustling with cowboys, guns and the sound of hoops, the fun was clean and wholesome, the love scenes, natural and spontaneous, lacking neither stiffness nor 'mush." The following is the cast of characters: Harold Morton, a railroad surveyor, Kenneth Kemp; Clarence Ogden, an Arizona rancher, Ronald Kemp; Samuel Hopkins, land speculator who loves custard pies, H. Wannamaker; Pedro Silvera, a Mexican renegade, Lemuel Pammett; Jim Parker, a gambler who is on the Square, A. B. Burrows; Bill Jones, a sure-fire sheriff, Bob Kingdon; Ruth Arlington, "A Daughter of the Desert," Elva Hendren; Lucy Hopkins, her college chum, Margaret Richardson; Mrs. Mary Ogden, an Arizona widow, Mildred Purdy; White Bird, an Apache maiden, Grace Bickell; Cowboys, Misses Edna Frankish, Janet Charlton, and Madeline Junkin.

Between acts the orchestra of the Regent Street Sunday School contributed several selections which added greatly to the quality of the program.

A noval feature was the Kitchenette orchestra, on which the curtain rose for the first time, disclosing more than twenty girls seated in a semi-circle all dressed in the trim and becoming C.G.I.T. uniform and playing instruments reminiscent of the kitchen rather than the studio, the drum was a large wash tub which was beaten with a dish mop in lieu of a drum stick, frying pans formed the main part of the stringed instruments and funnels appeared in cornets. The music came from the kazoos played by the young ladies who were assisted by Kenneth and Ronald Kemp with their cornets. Loud applause greeted the number and the orchestra scored a real hit. Between the second and third acts the C.G.I.T. octette sang 'Let a Smile be Your Umbrella on a Rainy, Rainy Day, the effect being extremely pretty as the girls were all dressed in the daintiest of crepe paper costumes in rainbow tints, carrying small umbrellas of the same shade, fastened at the waists of their frocks. They were compelled to respond to an encore which they richly deserved; the costumes were pink, yellow, green and blue, and the young ladies taking part were Misses Bernice Abrams, Phyllis Charlton, Zelma Darling, Mae Dever, Dorothy Sutton, Eileen Brown, Eva Hendren and Phyllis Lake. The Rev. S. A. Kemp spoke briefly, thanking the audience on behalf of the young ladies, of their attendance and attention. The success was largely due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. S. A. Kemp, who arranged the program, trained the performers and managed the entertainment.

By protection and proper management the accesible forest land of Canada could be made to produce in perpetuity several times the present annual cut. It will take many years to bring about this adjustment. On the other hand if present methods continue, the annual cut will have to be reduced.

no evidence. It was easier to get General Horne here than to get this document with great red seals from Washington.

"I therefore impeach Arthur Currie before this bar on behalf of the mothers who lost their sons, the fathers who lost their support, the widows who lost their husbands, with heedless, needless, reckless, frightful loss of life in this attack on Mons.

W. N. Tilley, K.C.

"May it please Your Lordship and gentlemen of the jury to permit me to enumerate the main points of the case and leave it with His Lordship to charge you as to your duty," began Mr. Tilley. "We must remain with these points or you will be trying some phantom case which the defense are trying to settle.

"Now what is this case? It is an action for libel. It is not an inquiry into the war or any investigation that should have been conducted. It is an action—a result of an article read in this case and must be adhered to.

"There is nothing in Mr. Wilson's evidence to show that there was no libel and the only thing we have is the article. Mr. Wilson says he was inspired ,or rather he and Mr. Preston were inspired at the same time from an article that appeared in The Toronto Globe, and hence the libel article was written in The Guide.

"As to Mr. Preston, you have nothing. He did not go into the witness box. He tells you he has had great experience at trials and has never seen such an exhibition as General McBrien made. It is probably because of that that he did not go into the box himself. He called no witnesses either.

Frank Regan rose to object and continued to do so till Tilley ceased speaking. This was in regard to the phrase "Without prejudice."

Mr. Wilson had seen maps while in Montreal to see Gen. Currie, and had discussed the meeting with Mr. Preston when he returned to Port Hope. Mr. Wilson suggested that they withdraw the statement But Mr. Preston would not agree.

"That," said Mr. Tilley, "is the circumstances under which the case began."

"'General Currie asked me what I was going to do and I went back and talked it over with Mr. Preston and we decided to let the matter stand,' he quoted Mr. Wilson as saying.

"I am going to suggest to you that when the article was written they did not take time to inquire into facts they put in the article. The Globe came in at noon and by 4.00 o'clock the article was written and on the press. Mr. Wilson was asked if he got any information which would further the end of writing the article. He said he had heard talk or gossip and the only person he could name was the witness Hill.

"And then you have the speech of Sir Sam Hughes," Mr. Tilley continued, and explained that speeches in "the House" are privileged and that newspapers are only allowed to make "fair comment" on speeches made there. A member actually speaking there is allowed a certain margin.

Referring to Hansard on the speech of Sir Sam, Mr. Tilley read exactly what Sir Sam had said. Mons was described as an unimportant village, a one-horse town, in whose taking there was no honor or glory. In the opinion of Sir Sam Hughes, these little towns should have been surrounded and the Germans taken prisoners. Then they should have been sent in to spring the boobie traps in order to save a repetition of the affairs of Cambrai.

"He was not accusing any person of doing it for glory and in his view it was a perfectly idle manoeuvre because Mons did not mean anything. But it will be left with you to consider whether Mons did not mean anything. It was a railway centre and a place of most strategic value."

Mr. Tilley read from the article "Waste of human life." "It was the last day."

"That is Sir Sam Hughes' charge it was the last day, the last hour, and almost the last minute when, to glorify the Canadian headquarters staff the commander in chief conceived the mad idea that it would be a fine thing to say that the Canadians had fired the last shot before the bugle sounded the closing of the war at 11.00 o'clock. My friends, do not wish to confine it to 11th of November, but they are seeking to have the last three days' fighting involved in this action.

Reading further Mr. Tilley pointed out that there is no doubt as to who gave the order, since it says that Canadian headquarters sounded the advance: "Brought up the rear with conspicuous bravery," Mr. Tilley declared to be a direct charge of cowardice. The article further inferred, he declared, that the town had not been taken till just a few minutes before the armistice came into effect, while the evidence had shown that the town was in the hands of the Canadians before midnight Nov. 10th.

"There are hearts in Port Hope which are saddened by this last action and drunken spree," he read.

"What is there in the evidence that supports in the slightest degree where it says that while the parade was going on the Canadian headquarters staff got it whispered the soldiers were going to shoot them so they jumped into their cars and fled. There is not a single bit of evidence to warrant this statement It was the meanest thing that could be said by a mean man.

"The definite waste of human life," said Mr. Tilley reading from the document. "I ask you to say there was no loss of life in the Canadian corps except poor Price. And I ask you to believe that he might have been killed in any event. One little teenie-weenie machine gun can do a lot of damage as my friend has learned since he began this case."

Mr. Regan—"I knew long before that."

"From the ninth, according to Mr Preston the Germans should have been allowed to operate their machine guns and shoot away to their hearts' content."

Mr. Regan objected, but he was overruled by His Lordship.

"As early as the second of November the objective for the Canadian corps was the Mainbege-Mons road. Several days before General Currie saw General Horne and up to the ninth orders were repeated.

"What happened on the ninth?

"In the first place we now know that the envoys had been to Foch, that they had been given terms which they could either accept or refuse within 72 hours. In the words of Mr. Preston, the terms were harsh and not at all the usual terms of an armistice, since they contained demands for giving up territory. These terms were so harsh that the envoys could not accept them without first returning to consult their headquarters. The terms were such that they would be unable to carry them out and still be in a position to resume hostilities. The terms were not known to any except Foch and the envoys. They called for the surrender of 5000 guns, a large number of airplanes and 30,000 machine guns. Those 'teenie little machine guns," said Mr. Tilley.

"Mr. Preston might have been a good general after the Germans were out of the country but not so good when it was to put them out of the country.

"Foch's plan was quite different. Having given his terms he immediately set himself about to get them to sign these terms, and this he did by promising to order cessation of fire at 11.00.

Currie orders Advance.

"That being the instructions of the Generalissimo, now you have the instructions of the army," said Mr. Tilley, and read from army orders that the line was to move forward as the hour arrived for the cessation of hostilities, and the infantry was to be assisted to keep up the pace by being carried forward in motor busses. Mounted troops were to be kept out in front in order to keep in touch with the enemy.

"General Currie got his orders and merely had to carry them out and these came to him as his instructions on Nov. 9. It was an order to be carried out by General Currie and his staff just as set out by the higher command.

"Are we to follow the argument of Mr. Preston that from the ninth on General Currie should have obeyed orders. On this centres the case. If it was right then General Currie is vindicated. If it was wrong then General Currie was to blame."

"Corps will act as directed in G 215," Mr. Tilley read from the First Army orders and I wonder what was to be done about this order. "Were the orders to be sent back and the General to say he would not obey it? The order was not given for the glorification of the staff. They were merely carrying out orders received. The defence has referred to the fortifications as being in Mons. This was not the case. The evidence showed that the danger lay before the troops to the north and south. The Germans were evacuating Mons on the afternoon of the tenth, and one of the witnesses had seen them. Therefore there could have been no stout resistance offered to the entry of the Canadians.

"O'Neill said he saw Germans evacuating Mons on the afternoon of the tenth."

Mr. Tilley then read the armistice order, "Troops will stand fast on the line reached at that hour."

"That does not cancel any orders given on the ninth," he said. "General Currie transmitted this order and that is all he had to do. He issued no further orders.

"What possible other thing could he have done under these orders? An armistice had been given to the Germans to sign. Orders from Foch were to do everything possible to hasten the Germans' retreat. The First Army to obey their orders issued the command to the Canadian corps."

Returning to the terms of the armistice, Mr. Tilley pointed out that the evacuation of all invaded territory was to be so ordered as to be complete within 15 days. Failing this all men left in the territory were to become prisoners. The only logical procedure for the Canadian corps was to carry out orders and assume a defensive position at 11.00 a.m., on Nov. 11, 1918.

"How can it possibly be said that the Canadian corps ordered anything? They merely carried out orders. It was simply a case of men doing a piece of work and ordered to stop at 11 o'clock and told to report what they had accomplished."

You will all remember Graffiey and what he did. But the point is was there an order given to send Graffiey into Mons and who was responsible for giving the order.

There you have it down to the eleventh, and I ask you to say that down to that moment General Currie was carrying out his orders.

What did General Clarke do when he heard of the armistice? He sent the mounted troops out and they happened to be Imperials. I don't know what my friends would have said if they had been Canadian mounted troops. These troops were obeying the very orders of the ninth.

"The only casualty to the Canadian forces that day was the regrettable incident to Price. And I say again that this might have happened anywhere along the front," said Tilley.

Regarding Currie's alleged speech, "God, I'd like to see them at it again," Tilley showed clearly that it was the word of a man who was thrilled through and through with pride in his men.

The dead in Mons, said Tilley, were given every honor possible. Currie was not present at the ceremony because he had not been communicated with and knew nothing of it. This, however, had not interfered with the honor paid 'these gallant men."

Not one stinging part of the original article, Tilley claimed, but the plaintiff had successfully accounted and proved to be untrue.

Asks For Direction.

"I don't think I need to review the case any more. I have said there is not a statement in the article with a sting to it that has been justified. Sir Arthur was a general obeying his orders and he carried them out with honor.

If I am right in my submission, you will have to refer to the question of damages and I invite His Lordship to direct you in this regard. How easy it would be for a man to come to trial and sow seeds in your minds that there was guilt, no matter what happened and that has been done frequently in this trial. It has been said to all fathers and mothers, whom Mr. Preston seems to represent in this trial, that General Currie was responsible for their sons' deaths."

"And what does Mr. Preston say? He says just what you would expect a coward to say. Why not start proceedings against larger papers. I knew other papers would reproduce my article and that General Currie would have the stupidity to start action against larger papers and I would sit back and laugh. But General Currie saw different and took action against the writer of the article."

"Mr. Preston seems to think governments are made to conduct inquiries and if you want anything go to the government and they would immediately start an investigation."

"General Currie has brought this article as he is entitled to do. It is an expensive trial, not so expensive, I hope, as Mr. Preston has estimated, but nevertheless expensive," said Mr. Tilley. He then continued to recount how Mr. Preston and Mr. Wilson had conducted themselves from the time the article was written right up to the time when the last word of Mr. Preston's address had been uttered. Mr. Tilley, in conclusion, claimed that they had conducted their case with a grim air of determination.

OMEMEE MAN IS BADLY CUT

S. D. Vaughan Hurt While Assisting Neighbors at Sawing Bee.

INJURED IN HAND.

OMEMEE, May 1.—S. D. Vaughan of Omemee met with a very painful accident on Saturday evening, while engaged at a sawing bee at the home of the Dancey brothers. Mr. Vaughan was feeding the saw, when the end of a pole caught on his sweater coat. The other end of the pole was being shoved by other workmen, and Mr. Vaughan, seeing the danger he was in, made a couple of attempts to free himself. In the endeavor to jerk away his hand came upon the saw, receiving a nasty cut through the flashy part of his left hand, cutting the cords of both the little and second fingers, and breaking the bone.

Dr. G. N. Earle was out of town when the accident occurred, and the injured man was rushed to the Clinic, Peterborough, where Dr. Moir, assisted by Dr. Eastwood, dressed the wound.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S MAY FLOWERS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Squeakie Squealer, the little runaway piggie boy, sat looking at the puzzle picture Uncle Wiggily had made for him. It was a drawing of five long sticks and six short sticks and near them was a pig, like Squeakie.

"The puzzle," said Uncle Wiggily, "is to make from these sticks a pen for the runaway pig. Can you do it, Squeakie?"

"There aren't enough sticks to make a pen," grunted Squeakie. But after he had fooled around a bit, twisting the sticks this way and turning his head the other way, Squeakie said, "It can't be done!"

"Oh, yes it can!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily. With his pencil the old rabbit gentleman began drawing the sticks again. He took three of the short sticks and put them at the top and on the right side of the first long stick, making the letter P through it was rather square shaped.

Next Uncle Wiggily took the other three short sticks and stuck them out straight on the right side of the second long stick. This made the letter E. Then the rabbit gentleman slanted one long stick between the two remaining long sticks and he made the letter N.

"There you are, Squeakie!" laughed Mr. Longears. "You have P-E-N a pen for the little runaway pig! Ha! Ha! Ha!"

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed Squeakie in delight. "So it is. But I didn't think you meant the word pen, Uncle Wiggily."

"That was the puzzle," chuckled the rabbit gentleman, and Squeakie was so pleased with it that he hurried off to show his Grandpa and so he forgot about running away for a long time.

"But it is time I did something else besides making puzzles," said Uncle Wiggily as he twinkled his pink nose. "I think I shall make a garden so I can have some May flowers."

The rabbit gentleman hopped back to his hollow stump bungalow, and taking a shovel, a hoe and a rake he began to soften the ground, making it nice and smooth so he could plant seeds and grow flowers.

He made them run away.

"There will soon be some lovely May flowers growing here," said Mr. Longears to himself as he laid aside his rake and went into the bungalow to get a drink of clover tea. But, no sooner was he out of sight than along came Charlie and Arabella Chick, the rooster and hen.

"Oh, what a lovely place to dig!" cackled Arabella as she saw the smooth flower bed. "Come on, Charlie, let's scratch!"

"Cock a doddle do! I'll surely scratch with you!" crowed Charlie, and the chickens began to tear up Uncle Wiggily's nice flower bed until, all of a sudden, out of the bungalow hopped Mr. Longears and made them run away. The little chickens said they were sorry, but they didn't know Uncle Wiggily wanted to grow flowers there. So Mr. Longears raked the bed smooth again but when he went in the bungalow to get some seeds to plant, Sammie Littletail, the rabbit, with Baby Bunty, hopped along looking for a bla! they had lost.

"Maybe the ball's in there," said Bunty, pointing to the new flower bed. Sammie also thought it might be there, so he and Bunty began to dig up Uncle Wiggily's nice garden again.

"Oh, dear! I'll never raise any May flowers!" cried Mr. Longears as he saw what the two little rabbits had done. But when Sammie and Bunty had gone away and when Uncle Wiggily was in the bungalow for a moment, Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow came running along and began to dig for bones in the soft, brown earth. And then Uncle Wiggily said:

"I must give these little animal children a hard puzzle to do which will keep them so busy they will forget to dig up my garden until the May flowers have time to grow." So Uncle Wiggily drew a picture of four pots, each with a flower growing in it. But the rabbit gentleman jumbled up the letters of the flowers' names. "Now the puzzle," said the bunny gentleman to Jackie, Peetie and the others, "is to see if you can name the four flowers growing in the pots." And the children sat down to do the puzzle, leaving the bunty's flower bed untouched so the seeds would sprout.

ELEPHANTS AT LARGE.

LE MANS, France, April 30 (Associated Press). — Elephants, like other tourists in the Old World, apparently have their troubles getting a bath. Four of them broke away from a circus here and raced several miles across country and were found peacefully bathing in a stream. When the ablutions were concluded, they readily submitted to the keepers, and were led back.

Twelve low-side gondola cars recently completed for the Carnegie Steel Company are said to be the longest cars ever moved over any American railroad. Each car has an outside length of 68 feet 9 inches and an inside length of 65 feet. The extra long type of car makes it possible to ship long lengths of steel on a single car.

STUDY YOUR HOMESITE

The Lay of the Land and Its Surroundings are Important.

(J. W. Hawker, Architect)

One thing to remember is the relation of the value of the house to the value of the lot. It is not advisable to build an expensive dwelling on a cheap lot. Generally speaking, the value of a home should not be more than three or four times the value of the land on which it is built. A costly dwelling cramped of to a lot with very little frontage is not liable to re-sell easily.

Remember, too, especially if the district is undeveloped that the eventual level of the roads and sidewalks has a bearing on the water line, which, in turn, may result in damp basements. The best plan is to have a surveyor make a "profile" showing just what the grades are, or, if there is no sidewalk, the Roadways Department of the city or municipality will inform you of the future level.

Having selected your lot with the utmost care the next move is to make an agreement or contract of sale with the owner. A certain percentage of the purchase price is usually stipulated as the first payment; generally, about ten percent. This payment makes the contract legal and binding for a limited period, usually thirty days, and during this period the title should be searched for claims or other impediments to clear ownership of the property. A clear title is imperative at once, especially if your financing of the proposition involves a loan to carry on building operations.

If the search of the title reveals no flaws or hindrances, there is one more thing to be done before completing the purchase and starting to build. That is to have the lot surveyed and staked so that you make sure of getting all the property you have contracted to pay for, and also to insure against encroaching, even by a few inches, on neighboring property. Failure in this respect is likely to bring about costly litigation in the future.

Having attended to these details you are safe in completing the purchase. Once you are in possession of a deed of the land this document should be promptly registered with the proper authorities, in order to officially establish your title.

For a small family, the average house of five rooms is suitable. This house, which is of the English cottage type, is fast gaining favor, both for its compactness in layout and for its charming exterior.

The entrance porch; and broad double hung windows, combined with a roof of dull green cedar shingles and cream stucco walls, add to the substantial appearance and good proportions of this home.

This house was erected on a lot 50 x 120 with a broad expanse of lawn at the front; allowing a good view from the living room.

Turning to the ground floor plans; we find a layout of good and unusual design. From the entrance, we come to a hall which has no waste space. The stairs are enclosed on the ground floor. The dining and living rooms are on opposite sides of the hall. The living room is of good size, well lighted. A fireplace with a tile hearth adds to the comfort of this room. Tastefully decorated and furnished; this room leaves nothing to be desired.

The dining-room and kitchen are side by side, the former being of good size. The kitchen has up-to-date accommodation with a large sink, built-in cabinets and electric wiring for a stove.

Upstairs are two bedrooms, with a large closet containing a window, off each.

The three fixture bathroom with the tile floor completes this plan.

The house has hot water heating and the floors are of oak and maple. This house with concrete foundations cost $5,800 exclusive of the lot.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service, 345 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont.; who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention design number 120. Copyright, 1928.

WORK STARTED ON NEW BRIDGE

Engineers Take Measurements at Millbrook For New Steel Structure.

START DRAIN SOON.

MILLBROOK, May 1. — George Greer, of Cobourg, county road superintendent, and two government engineers from Toronto, Messrs. Fellows and Matthews were in town on Monday afternoon taking measurements for the new bridge on King street which is to replace the one now in use, as one item in the improvements in connection with the paving program to be carried through this season.

The new bridge will be of steel with cement abutments, twenty-two feet in width and with a four-foot sidewalk; the expense of the bridge falls on the government, the municipality being responsible for the sidewalk.

The council will advertise for tenders for the drain this week, and the engineer, C. W. Connors, of Toronto, will be here on Friday in connection with this work.

As soon as weather conditions permit, the work on the drain will be proceeded with, this being a necessary preliminary before the paving of King street can begin. The new bridge over the creek on Main street is now completed as traffic will have to be diverted round this way when the paving is in progress. The present bridge on King street will be swung round to allow driving over the school hill while the new bridge is being built.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH.

To Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have read with interest some letters in your columns and other papers in Canada regarding freedom of speech. I have listened over the radio a good many times and have heard many denominational church services broadcasted on Sundays, but yet what appeals to the sense of justice and love most is cut off the air by those whom the truth seems to hurt. If these people do not want to hear the word of God they do not have to listen, but there are thousands upon thousands who have and do appreciate the International Bible Students' Association proframs and want them to have the same liberty as the ministers of denominational systems, and there are hundreds in Peterborough also who are desirous of hearing CKCX from Toronto once again. So let there be "freedom of speech" for all, not "the few."

USE BOTH COOKED AND RAW FOOD

There is a widespread belief that while man may live without "books" he cannot live without "cooks." But a vast, increasing number of people are attempting to live on uncooked food alone.

Most of these "raw-fooders" claim to be able to live in good health on only uncooked vegetables, fruits, and nuts.

It is true there have been instances where this diet has proved adequate for all of the body's requirements, but upon close investigation I have found that most people professing to believe in the efficiency of raw food really add to their otherwise restricted diet such food as cooked grains, eggs, cheese, and milk. It is likewise true that those who claim to be vegetarians generally use milk, eggs, cheese and such animal products.

The raw food diet certainly provides plenty of vitally nourishing food, but has several drawbacks which make it an impractical diet to use day after day, and year after year. It is necessary to use a large amount of food on this diet, as most of the vegetables and fruits used contain so much water and cellulose that the stomach must be filled to capacity in order to be sure of a sufficient amount of material which is tissue-building.

The herbivorous animals spend most of their waking moments engaged in the pleasant pastime of chewing, swallowing, and digesting food. Modern man does not have the inclination or energy to use up so much time in order to get enough nourishment. The keen-minded man of today cannot give so much of his attention to food, but the dull, phlegmatic man, who is willing to be mostly a walking digestive organ, still exists.

Another good reason why a strict raw food diet is not practical is that it is a most "unsocial" diet. If one persists in such a radical diet, he will soon have few friends who are willing to dine with him.

Because he does not wish to seem "queer" the raw-fooder will eat his own restricted diet, and then to be sociable use some of his friends' tasty dishes. In place of deliberately choosing a good steak, he will invariably select the most unwholesome foods because of their pleasing taste. He is also very liable to fill up between meals on ice cream, candy, and soft drinks. In fact, the candy stores would soon go out of business if it were not for the under-nourished people who patronize them These same people are usually overfed, but still starving for the right foods out of which they can secure the proper elements to build and repair their bodily tissues. Craving something else, their appetite tries to secure satisfaction by the use of sweets. This is particularly true of the earnest student of dietetics who attempts to live on an exclusive uncooked diet. The craving for sweets always seems to be present, and is never satisfied.

The best plan is to use enough raw vegetables and fruit each day to supply the needed organic minerals, and to also use such cooked foods as the grains, and the valuable proteins, such as meat, fish, fowl, etc. These meals will be abundantly satisfying if cooked greens are also added.

Man may indeed live without cooks, but it is far better for him to use some foods each day in their natural state and supplement such foods with those which can be improved by the art of cookery.

Questions and Answers.

Question: W. M. P. writes: "I have a continuous feeling of nervousness and depression, also always have a red nose. What do you suggest?"

Answer: Overcome constipation and intestinal poisoning, as this is no doubt what makes you nervous and also causes the red nose. Take an enema each day until you learn enough about diet to correct your trouble. Send for my special article on the cause and cure of constipation.

Question: Young Mother asks: "Do you recommend the use of raw milk instead of the pasteurized? I always thought the pasteurized milk best because it is claimed th s process kills the germs. Besides, it is almost impossible to get raw milk in some localities."

Answer: I consider good certified milk to be the best for all purposes except in localities where the laws are not strict and inspection rigidly enforced. Pasteurization does very little harm to the food value of milk, and many authorities claim that the epidemics from contaminated milk have been entirely stamped out wherever the law compels the pasteurization of milk.

Question: Mrs. J. K. asks: "Please tell me what causes the arms to go to sleep and get numb at night? Is this because of high blood pressure?

Answer: If you know you have high blood pressure you have doubtless answered your own question, as this does cause the arms to become numb. Valvular leakage of the heart is also sometimes responsible for poor circulation and numbness in the arms.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

WEDNESDAY, MAY 2, 1928.

This day is governed by a benefic aspect of the stars, according to astrology, which sees much of kindly influence for in habitants of the planet Earth.

The signs seem to favor agriculture and the price of food stuffs will rise appreciably, if the stars are read aright.

Slums will be reclaimed and living conditions improved so that it will be possible for men and women to live nearer to their places of wage-earning occupation, it is foretold.

Again astrologers prophesy that agriculture is to be carried on in a wholesale manner by great syndicates that operate with the greatest scientific efficiency.

Uranus is in an aspect that seems to menace the mind and again increase of the use of narcotics is indicated.

Truthfulness and honesty are supposed to be affected unfavorably by the positing of the stars today.

Intrigue and indirection may be prevalent in business as well as politics while this rule prevails.

Return to the simple life is counseled by astrologers who prophesy many sudden deaths due to overstrain in mental and physical activities.

Sanitation should be the main care of great cities during the summer months which may be unfavorable to health.

Women probably will find today more auspicious for the cultivation of physical beauty than of intellectual superiority.

Reactionary forces will be strong at this time and the feminine influence will encourage dainty costuming with plenty of frills.

Persons whose birthdate it is may expect a prosperous year in which they are lucky in domestic affairs.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly intelligent and reliable. The subject of this sign usually are thoughtful and trustworthy.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

A smart way of solving the neck problem with the two-piece tailored suit—achieved by means of a tan scarf dotted in different colors. The suit is of navy blue.

Personally I am thankful that the fad for high collars that occurred a few seasons ago never settled down into a real fashion. There were and still are a few high-collared frocks—but no one has or had to wear them. I know a number of women who had an idea they looked smarter in that type of frock, but between you and me and the telegraph pole they looked far less attractive than they looked in a softer neckline. Close high collars have a way of magnifying signs of age. They make the features harder and the lower part of the cheeks heavier—but, then, I may be prejudiced.

Some women felt that the tailored suit jacket could never come back into favor again until women were content to wear high-collared shirts or blouses—because the tailored coat collar never was designed to wear against the bare neck. And of course there are some shirts with regulation mannish collars worn with neckties of some sort. But at present these severe blouses are seldom worn save for actual sports—or by women still bitten with the idea that to look mannish is to look smart and efficient.

In the meantime the silk neck scarf—usually square or triangular—has come to solve the problem of neck covering with the tailored suit jacket. A number of well-dressed women I know wear their scarfs in the manner indicated in today's sketch.

Silvered and gilded pearls are decidedly new and most attractive. I saw a long string of irregular pearls as large as small peas—of a charming dull gilt color worn most effectively with a black lace evening gown. It occurred to me that one might use gilt or silver paint on a string of artificial pearls that had lost their original luster.

Never were handkerchiefs so attractive and never did women choose them with so much care or with such manifest satisfaction. There are small handkerchiefs of the usual size often in printed that are decidedly smart for sport wear. The enthusiasm for large handkerchiefs is growing, and whereas a few months ago most women regarded these handkerchiefs as novelties they now accept them as fashionable necessities.

LYRICS OF LIFE

ALL THERE IS TO SCHOOL

You're getting lessons, so you think,
You're working problems out in ink,
And doing things by rote and rule,
And think that's all there is to school.
I guess that I thought that way, too,
But school means more than that to you;
And school meant more than that to me,
If I had had the sense to see.

Some men, when something they are at,
May think that's all there is to that;
And then some day perhaps some wall
Before some sudden storm will fall,
Because some man who laid the stone
Was thinking of the day alone,
Not building strong and laying straight
A wall to bear a building's weight.

You're building something all the way,
The kind of life you'll live some day.
The thing you know, or thing you guess,
Will mean your failure or success.
Some thing half-learned, or not at all,
Will be the loose stone in the wall;
The page you skip, you ought to read,
Will fail you in some hour of need.

For many a gift the world bestows,
But only on the man who knows.
The boy who slighted something hard
The world will slight long afterward.
The boy who did each task of his
Will know just what the answer is,
Will pass the sluggard and the fool—
That's really all there is to school.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE HATE TO BE REFORMED

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

It is very difficult for us to take people as they are and for what they are. There is always something we would like to change. Even fond lovers who are supposed to see no fault often have it in mind to effect certain radical reforms in the beloved. Quite frequently a woman marries a man with the idea of reforming him, and invariably discovers that men don't reform worth a cent.

We all hate to be reformed. The process of reformation involves giving up something that is part of our very being. All changes of habits and dispositions are disturbing. It is next to impossible to get out of the old rut. We hate to be disturbed.

We resent the reformer because all reform implies something undesirable that has to be replaced. This is an insult to our pride and self-esteem. We are very slow to admit faults and the necessity of change.

When we realize and frankly admit the need of reform we recoil from the idea of another person coming in to administer the potion that shall make us better. There is clash of egos in which our own is worsted.

It may be that we have long been aware of some personal defect and have repeatedly tried in vain to remedy it. This sense of failure and impotence creates a sensitive spot in us. We are on the defensive. The mere suggestion of reform recalls all too vividly the unfortunate failure and all the associated unpleasant feelings and emotions.

We prefer to tell the other fellow how he may improve. If there is any reforming to be done we prefer to do it ourselves on the quiet. We hate to be reformed by another person. This is why.

"Men should be taught as though you taught them not
And things unknown as things forgot."

Miss Carstairs Expects To Make Crossing in 90 H. P. Craft

IN 60 HOURS.

Expected That Attempt Will Be Made Some Time in July.

LONDON, May 1.—Driving a specially designed racing motorboat, Miss M. B. Carstairs intends, in July, to make a spectacular attempt to cross the Atlantic from the Irish coast to New York.

Miss Carstairs is a well-known motorboat racer. Her craft, which is now nearing completion, will be fitted with a Napier aero-engine similar to those used in the winning Schneider Cup seaplane and in Captain Malcolm Campbell's record-breaking car Bluebird.

This engine develops about 900 horse-power, and it is expected that the motorboat will be capable of nearly ninety miles an hour.

Miss Carstairs hopes to cross the Atlantic in sixty hours, and intends to take charge of the craft herself. She will be accompanied by mechanics.

Another boat of similar design will be shipped to America for Miss Carstairs to use in the International races which are to be staged on Lake Michigan. There she hopes to win back for this country the British International motorboat trophy, which has been held by America since the war. The race is for motor boats of unlimited speed.

Miss Carstairs is the stepdaughter of M. Serge Voronoff, the gland specialist.

The Toronto Daily Star has the following to say regarding Frankie Collins, former Peterborough star hockey player who now resides in the Queen City and who starred for the Granites in the opening game of the Viaduct League on Saturday afternoon: "Collins, a third baseman appears to be one of the best infielders in town. He has a great arm and is a reliable fielder. He can also hit the ball hard and often.

Many diamond dusters took advantage of a slight improvement in the weather on Saturday afternoon to get out on the sward for a little practise. The Cognawaga crew staged a "warm up" at the Exhibition grounds and had a good turnout. Cuffe who played with the Kiwanis last year and Billingsley, the pitching ace of the Crescents were new faces seen at the practice. At the King Edward school grounds a whole flock of players were engaged in a friendly game. The Royals had a full turnout, and Manager Holyman had several of the senior Petes down for a light workout. Newson, Cuthbertson, Kitchen and Whatley are new players trying out with McFadden's crew this season.

The Public school baseball league is all set for 1928 season as far as the schedule is concerned. Opening tomorrow, May 2nd, with Queen Alexandra playing at King George and Prince of Wales at Central this league should provide plenty of clean sport for the youngsters. The schedule is divided between games of hardball and softball, the principals and vice-principals to act as umpires at all games. As the softball games give a more even contest among the various teams, the trophy will be used in that series only. The home team in the cast of each hardball team will be responsible to get an umpire agreeable to the visiting team.

Released from the frosty grip of a Canadian winter, many of Ontario rivers and streams are running wild to-day with the new vigor of spring while hundreds of men are sitting at their desks or working at their benches chafing under the strains of business and attemping to carry through the daily grind while their fingers clutch imaginary rods and their muscles tighten to the strike of an imaginary trout. A beautiful day dream it is, this picture of the sparkling waters in which the speckled dancers are making merry and one which will soon be realized for to-day marks the official opening of the trout season and the calendar of every enthusiastic Worshipper of the fly has a red halo around the space marked May 1st.

Four members of the "Y" Harriers hiked to Chemong and back on Saturday afternoon. This was one of the preliminary jaunts preparatory to more strenuous training when weather conditions are suitable for running. Bates, Sturgeon, Tranter, and Parkins staged the trip and it is hoped that more local runners will take advantage of these hikes which will prove helpful in early season training. Another hike is being planned for next Saturday, and a big turnout is expected. The date of the Lindsay meet is less than a month away and it will keep some of the local boys rolling to get into condition to meet strong opposition. Caley, Strickland, Gamble, Stinson and Brandon of the Lindsay Monarch Club made a great showing here last fall and there is no doubt but they will be featuring prominently in their home town on May 24. The Canadian General runners are negotiating with the local "Y" for training facilities during the summer and are also beginning to round into shape for the Lindsay meet.

GIANTS WIN FROM ROBINS

New Yorkers Continue Hard Hitting Spree To Take 14-4 Victory.

CUBS DEFEATED 8-7.

NEW YORK, May 1 (Canadian Press).—The New York Giants continued their hard-hitting of Sunday and easily won their first 1928 game yesterday from their Brooklyn rivals by 14 to 4. The result cut Brooklyn's lead in the National League race to a half game.

Jess Petty, usually effective against New York, was hit harder by the Giants than any time since he has been in the League. New York got to him for eight hits and eight runs in the first three innings.

The Pirates defeated the Chicago Cubs 8 to 7, in the first meeting of the two clubs in Pittsburgh this season. The game was a free-hitting game and played on a wind-swept field. Scoring in every innings except the fifth, the Boston Nationals hammered out a 13 to 8 victory over the lowly Phillies at Philadelphia. Four Boston clubbers knocked out home runs, Burrus, Farrell, Taylor, and Bell hitting circuit clouts.

Seven Cardinal errors enabled the Cincinnati Reds to win yesterday at St. Louis, although the victors got only six hits. Four of the Cardinals' errors came in the third innings when the Reds got three runs.

SOCCER CHAMPS RECEIVED PENCILS

Team and Teacher at Prince of Wales School Get Gifts From Soccer Assoc.

At the close of the Prince of Wales Home and School Association meeting last night, after listening to an excellent talk on "A Trip to Europe" by Miss Glover, the local soccer executive, represented by President Vincent Stewart and Vice-President Robert Gilmour, presented Eversharp pencils to the public school soccer champions, namely: Harold Stewart, George Gatfield, Roy Hope, George Jay, Fred Chambo, Richard Pearson, Harold Epps, George Dunkerley, Gordon Seabrook, Ivan Pearson and Joe Gatfield—eleven players.

As a recompense for his labors in the soccer code the president of the local soccer association presented F. E. Kerr, the teacher, trainer and diplomat, with an Eversharp pencil, who replied in a brief speech, and stated that it was the first time in his teaching experience that he ever received a gift and expressed great delight in the game that brought out and educated the boys in the great fact—co-operation.

Captain Roy Hope replied on behalf of the team, also thanked the Peterboro and District Soccer Association.

The Guy With The Sock

Long stories of science which clutter the pages
Of dailies and weeklies devoted to sport,
Lay stress on importance in this of all ages
Of craft, brain and skill as the "athlete's" forte;
How technique is big and gray matter bigger
How brains beat out brawn by a long city block,
But something we've never been able to figure
Is why the fans fall for the guy with the sock.

Gene Tunney is shifty and handsome and clever
At sidestepping punches the enemy throws:
He juggles with Shakespeare and never, no never,
Will split an infinitive—say "does" or "dose."
His footwork is smooth as the wrist of a kitten,
His English is highbrow—yea bo! he can talk;
But somehow the crowd has never been smitten
On him like they would on the guy with the sock

Jack Dempsey's the boy to pull million buck purses
That prize fighters need for their three "squares" a day,
For there's always a chance that he'll fill up the hearses—
And when he K.O.'s them it's K.O.'d they stay.
The Maulers not polished as some folks would like him,
He learned all his stuff in the school of hard knocks;
But look how the customers turn out to sight him—
You'll agree that they fall for the guy with the sock.

Babe Ruth was a pitcher who flung many shut-outs,
His curve ball and fast one showed scandalous skill;
A bundle of pop-ups and goose-eggs and strike-outs
Marked all the games when he toiled on the hill.
But the crowd never tumbled or broke its neck trying
To see the big Babe strike them out by the flock;
But wow! as a hitter he set the mall crying,
"We'll all of us fall for the guy with the sock."

So don't let them tell you that this is the era
When science and skill are alone at the top,
The time when the slugger or bruiser are near to
A starvation future, a terrible flop.
"Color", they call it, this box-office winner,
This thing that attracts the crowds in a flock,
But don't let them kid you; we'll bet you the dinner
You'll admit that you fall for the guy with the sock.

—Brian Delvin, in the Montreal Star.

CARMEL CHURCH.

Reading, "Advice to Farmers," by Stanford Brown.

The presentation of prizes by the superintendent, Mr. Lunn, to the oldest man connected with the Sunday school, and the oldest man in the community, was one of the outstanding features of the evening, as was also the presentation made to the two oldest ladies, the youngest girl, and the youngest boy, in the school.

Carmel Sunday school always claims the Rev. Mr. Wilks on its membership roll and he and Robert Lunn were the recipients of the first gifts; Mrs. Elmer received the award for the oldest lady outside the school, and Mrs. Robert Lunn has that standing among the scholars enrolled; Lola Gardiner was called to the front for the gift to the youngest girl, and Tommy Allen received the one for the boy.

Following this pleasant intermission, and the accompanying speechmaking, the class gave a chorus, "Win Them One by One," with "Tramp, Tramp," as encore. A dialogue, "Women's Rights," was the concluding number, the characters being: Mr. Pennylope, Johnston Rowland, Mrs. Pennylope, Anna Rowland, Mr. Wingfield, Kenneth Little.

Mr. Howard pronounced the benediction, and the school executive served refreshments, a pleasant social hour bringing a most successful gathering to a close.

The receipts totalled approximately forty dollars.

Sale of Cooking.

The ladies of Grace Presbyterian church held a successful sale of home-made baking at Mrs. W. Thorne's home on Saturday afternoon, from three to six o'clock.

The social side of the event received emphasis from the fact that afternoon tea was served, and the large number of guests who came in for this particular feature spent a pleasant half hour or more chatting over their tea cups as they sat around the daintily-laid tables. Mrs. J. Turner, Mrs. J. N. McGill, and Mrs. R. McMahon looked after the wants of the guests as they came and went throughout the afternoon.

The table of baking was laid in the hall and repeatedly had to have its stock of tempting-looking cakes pies, candy, etc., replenished as there was no lack of customers practically from the opening hour of the sale.

Mrs. W. E. Russell was cashier, and among other assisting were: Mrs. R. Brown, Mrs. W. Thorne, Mrs. R. J. Doak, Mrs. J. R. Eakins and Mrs. L. C. Russell.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Russell and two children, Burton and Margaret, with Miss Gladys Gray, motored to Campbellcroft on Friday evening, and attended the play, "The Adventure of Grandpa," put on by the A.Y.P.A. of Saint Paul's church, Perrytown. Miss Marietta Gray took part in the play. Others from here who were present were Misses Alvira and Elmo Davies.

Miss Elizabeth Russell sang between the acts, the persistent applause showing the appreciation of the audience.

SHARKEY WINS IN ONE ROUND

Knocks Out Delaney at New York in Little Over One Minute.

THREE KNOCKDOWNS.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, May 1. After having talked and fiddled his way out of the main heavyweight picture for this year, Jack Sharkey suddenly came to life last night and knocked out Jack Delaney, the one-time Rapier of the North, in 1 minute 13 seconds of the first round in their 15-round bout. Sharkey weighed 192 and Delaney 178.

Snarling and vicious, Sharkey leaped at his lighter foe at the tap of the gong, had him punch-drunk in less than 30 seconds, and on the floor for the third time, taking the count of ten, from as crushing a right-hand uppercut as has landed in any ring or on any other jaw for several moons.

Delaney didn't land a blow, and made only a few faint gestures. The French-Canadian's handsome features were twisted grotesquely, and he went to one knee from the effects of the first onslaught of his foe. Wild-eyed and wobbly, he struggled to his feet, only to go down heavily from a smashing right-hander. Delaney was able to stagger up at nine, but he was "out on his feet." Sharkey lunged and swung a right uppercut from his heels. Delaney went down as if hit by an axe, rolled over and squirmed in agonized fashion on his face. Blood poured from his mouth and one ear. They picked the fallen boxer up and carried him to his corner, dead to the world, while the roar of the crowd reverberated to the rafters.

CYZICUS OFFICERS PLACED IN OFFICE

D.D.G.M. Acts at Annual Ceremony Held By Local Saictorum.

The regular meeting of Cyzicus Sanctorum, No. 24 Ancient Mystic Order of Samaritans, held on Friday, April 27th last, was of unusual interest to the members, when the installation of officer for the term 1928-29, took place.

The installing officer was District Deputy Supreme Monarchos, Walter T. Byers, and suite, and the ceremony proved very interesting to all present.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Sheiks Harry Carter, P.G.M., and W. F. Green, P.G.M., were called to the front and each presented with handsome Past Grand Monarchs' jewels by Cyzicus Sanctorum, the presentation being made by D.D.S. M. Byers.

Degree work came next, the work being put on in a manner that was pleasing to all, and to say that it was thoroughly enjoyed, is putting it mildly.

Last, but not least was the Moonfeast which followed, and found every chair occupied around the table, catered for by Samaritan R. J. Murduff, with Samaritan Roger Shadgett as his able assistant.

The following officers were installed Ven. Friar, Harry Carter, P.G.M., Gd. Mon. F. J. Batten; Vice- Gr. Mon; Gd. Councillor, D. T. McIntyre; Registrar V. F. Green, P. G. M.; Banker, E. Norman, P. G. M.; Gd. High Ex, E. H. Hotson; Gd. Monitor, A. H. Mowry; Gr. Chief Guide, H. Andreson; Gd. Herald, G. Butcher; Gd Director, G. Goodfellow.

D.D.G.M. Byers and several members of District Committee No. 36, went by train to Toronto to-day to install the officers of Xerxes Sanctorum No. 1, which is included in this district.

The officers and members of Cyzicus No. 24, have received and accepted an invitation from Mycerinus Sanc. No. 41, Lindsay, to go there on Wednseday May 2, and exemplify the work of the order on a class of candidates.

A similar invitation from Khavi Sanct. No. 235, Bowmanville, has been accepted for May 11 next, the ceremony of installation of officers for the above sanctorums taking place on the night of visitation by the Peterborough Samaritans.

The officers of Achar Sanct., No. 72, Barrie, which is also in district No. 36, will be installed later on a date to be arranged.

TELL YOUR TROUBLES ALL TO JESUS

Tune, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," or "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Tell you troubles all to Jesus,
Who is such a loving Friend;
He has promised to sustain you,
And be with you to the end.
Tell your troubles all to Jesus,
When with tears your eyes are dim;
There is naught can give such comfort
As to tell it all to Him.

Tell your troubles all to Jesus,
When the load is hard to bear;
There's no one so kind and tender,
Cast on Him your every care.
Tell your troubles all to Jesus,
Child of grace when sore depressed;
Hear His gracious invitation—
"Come, and I will give you rest."

Tell your troubles all to Jesus,
Let Him soothe your troubled brow;
'Mid life's weary toil and conflict,
He shall surely grace allow.
Tell your troubles all to Jesus,
Gentle Shepherd, Friend and Guide;
At His feet lay down your burden,
Safely in His love confide.

"BEN HUR."

"Ben Hur" is one of those superb pictures that are produced only once in a very long while. There is nothing in it that the severest critic could find fault with, and it is hard to find enough superlative adjectives to describe it properly. It is a magnificent spectacle, wonderfully staged. It has a cast that appears to have been chosen by a master producer, so thoroughly and wonderfully do its members fit into the roles portrayed and it follows with faithfulness and reverence the story of "Ben Hur" as immortalized in General Lew Wallace's famous novel. To anyone who has been thrilled by the written account of the sufferings and trials of Judah, Prince of the House of Hur, this tale will appeal as a marvellous picturization of a deathless story. It presents with all the graphic, silent eloquence of the screen, the picture of times as far alien to those of this day and century.

The manners of life, the customs, the dress, of a forgotten but deathless age, are reproduced faithfully. Strange to modern eyes are the ways of that period, when lepers foregathered in desolate valleys, cursed in their affliction; when the mighty tririemes of Rome held in their vitals hundreds of wretched slaves, forcing the great ships onward by manpower driven by a ruthless lash; when a captive but proud people bent beneath the will of the proud invader of Rome and when Christ dwelt in obscurity, passing the thirty years of His hidden life beneath the humble roof of His foster-father.

The presentation of Christ is one of the most wonderful of the many wonderful attributes of this picture. He is seen only as a shadowy Radiance. It was a master craftsman who conceived the idea of showing only the arm of the Master, outstretched in pity toward the suffering wretch who is goaded over a dreadful road by cruel taskmasters. This episode of the cup of cold water offered to Ben Hur as he makes his way toward the galleys is a memorable one. The thin arm leaves the saw and the wood long enough to make the merciful gesture, and then return to labor. Jesus' time was not yet at hand.

Again the arm appears, this time raised to support the cross, on the way to Calvary, and to heal the grevous illness of Tirzah, the sister of Judah.

All the dramatic elements that Lew Wallace enlisted in his weaving of the tapestry of the tale of Ben Hur are present in this picture. Here is the Jewish princeling, secure in his home, until an accident causes him to be identified with the wounding of Valerius Gratus, Roman ruler of Jerusalem. Then his life changes to that of a galley slave and again come the dramatic picturizations of cruelty and torture in which the life of that era abounded. Here Judah forces the mighty muscles which stand him in good stead when later he competes with his enemy, Messala, in the mighty and thrilling chariot race which forms one of the outstanding portions of the picture, as it has always done in the book. The quality of mercy does not enter overmuch into Ben Hur's life. His is a struggle for existence, and he makes the most of his vengeance, when the opportunity arrives. The picture does not weaken here. Messala is left crushed and broken and Ben Hur emerges triumphant. It is a wonderful and moving spectacle. —Jeanette.

JETTA GOUAL SCORES TRIUMPH IN "WHITE GOLD"

Strange Elements Woven Into Fine Study of Life.

That the squeaking of a chair and the rasping honing of a knife can be made important motivations in a motion picture is dramatically shown in "White Gold," starring Jetta Goudal which was presented with brilliant results at the Regent Theatre yesterday. Kenneth Thomson and George Bancroft are featured.

Thoughts, moods and environments as they affect four strained personalities on a bleak, drought-stricken Arizona ranch are the strange elements that director William K. Howard has woven into an unusual study of life.

In "White Gold" the innermost processes of the mind are photographed. For example, Jetta Goudal the star follows a path of mental retrogression throughout the story and the disturbing elements that contribute to her depression are shown by a series of new camera accomplishments.

The rasping of a knife being whetted; the squeaking of a rocking chair working on a mind already dispirited by heat and hate, are among the chief factors in the unfolding of the drama.

Basically the film is a final study of life in the heat-tortured wastes. It makes no attempt at display, but it is simple in construction throughout which the story is advanced by a new technique. It is a picture that will long linger in the memory. The star and featured players presented highly artistic portrayals.

A combined golf team from Oxford and Cambridge universities will visit the United States this year to engage in matches with Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Cornell.

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

A Republication of the Book by Permission of the Author, Jack Miner of Kingsville, Ont.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Our Native Swans.

The swans we usually see in our parks throughout America are not natives of this country, and a great many people are not acquainted with the fact that we still have hundreds of real, beautiful, wild swans at large in this country.

Now in North America there are only two varieties of native swans, the trumpeter and the whistling swans. They are both pure white. Often we hear of a flock of swans being seen with some dark ones among them; these are young birds; swans do not get pure white the first year. The trumpeter swan is by far the larger of the two varieties; this bird weighs between twenty-five and thirty-five pounds, and is well-proportioned, not waddle-y like these European swans that are in our parks. But unfortunately for this, the largest migratory bird in America, it nested in what is now the cultivated parts of our continent; the result is it is almost exterminated. But the whistling swan, which is about one-third smaller than the trumpeter, I am pleased to report is still here by the thousands.

Shortly after I got the geese educated to come here the swans started congregating along the shores of the lake, three miles south, where, as I have previously stated, the geese usually go to roost, and occasionally a flock will follow the geese here in the morning, but I have never been able to induce them to alight, possibly on account of the ponds being small and muddy. There seem to be more of these white beauties every year, and one evening last April when the geese went to the lake, the voices of the swans could be heard at my home, apparently welcoming the geese back to the calm bosom of Lake Erie. Before sunrise next morning I was out to the lake, and as I looked over the bank, about one mile west of Kingsville, here were over three hundred swans feeding in the shallow water, all within a stone's throw of shore; a little farther out was a line of two hundred more; and the sandbar, which is from one-quarter to one-half mile out, was simply white with them for fully half a mile. While it was impossible to count them away out there, yet I am sure there were over a thousand. Remember, I have a powerful pair of glasses, and these birds were not gulls, they were swans; and really the bunch of five hundred which I counted in the water did not look one-half the size of the flock that was on the bar.

But the encouraging part of it all is that these birds nest still farther north than the wild geese, therefore there is no danger at that point.

The last few years I have become quite well acquainted with the bird proposition around Niagara Falls, and it is sad to think that so many of our choicest waterfowl are meeting death in this rolling foam. Now I haven't lived there, and there is a whole lot I don't understand about the situation, but it seems that early in the spring these swans come to the open water above the Falls before the rest of the lake is open. Night comes on and they put their heads on their backs and drift, like so many white pillows. By times a bunch ventures a little too far, its members are caught in the rapid water, cannot rise and over the falls they go. Fully seventy-five per cent. are either killed with the ice or are drowned; those that have life enough left crawl upon the icebridge that is formed just below the falls. Now with the iron bridge just below them, and the hundred feet of a foaming falls in front of them, they are apparently bewildered. Not having strength enough to rise straight up they sit there, and gradually grow weaker and weaker, and if the night is frosty, the spray from the Falls simply freezes them into a helpless condition.

Mr. Wm. Hill, of Niagara Falls, told me that one morning last spring there were over forty live swans on the icebridge. Mr. Hill is a man well acquainted with the whole situation, and he got five and expressed them to me, but they were so weak they could hardly stand. One was bruised with the ice and died. Later on two other gentlemen sent me two more.

Now I am going to put them in my north pond and try to breed them there.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Line of Migration.

A great many writers that come here report this place as being on the line of bird migration. That is a mistake, for this is no more the migrating line for the birds than Chicago, Detroit or Toronto.

Very true, I am only fifteen miles west of Point Pelee, the most extreme southern part of mainland in Canada, and where thousands of small birds come to cross Lake Erie. But what does a duck or a goose care about hunting a short water flight across Lake Erie, when the latter can rise up and go one thousand miles without alighting?

For thirty-five years of my bloodthirsty life it was my great ambition to shoot a swan to mount with my collection. Did I do it? No. Why? Because very seldom was one ever seen around here. I only know of two being shot in this township, one shot over forty years ago, and the other about twenty-five years ago. Yet last spring when I went up to the lake to see them I could have shot between five and ten at one volley. Not because this is in the line of migration. No; no. But because it is all in the line of education!

The geese have been educated to come here for food and protection, and the swans have educated themselves to know that where the geese alight spells safety for them. And although the wild swans have not lit in my pond yet, I have the satisfaction of knowing that hundreds come within three miles of me, and it has all been done through love and education; for when the wild geese convinced me that they knew me as their deadly enemy, and afterwards showed their love toward me by flying to me from all directions for food and protection, they conquered and won one of the most bloodthirsty and cruel, deadly enemies the birds of North America ever had. And it is not because of the line of migration, but because of that blessed peace, and education, whose doors stand continually open. And if ever this dear old earth is made free from devilish, revengeful fighting, it will be through this same dear love and education, man towards the fowls of the air and the beasts of the field, man towards man, family towards family, and nation towards nation, as compulsory, bayonet-point heathenism always leaves a crimson revenge in its wake.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Inquiries and Answers.

As I am a very poor writer and cannot affort a stenographer I am answering, right now, a storm of questions so that I trust I will prevent our female mail-sorters from overloading my mail box.

1. How can I get the wild geese to come to my pond?

If you can get them to alight within a mile, or any reasonable distance away, feed them there, scattering the food while they are absent. After they have been coming regularly for a week or so, go sidling near them with a team of horses as if you were working on the farm. Never drive straight at them, but go quartering past. After you have tried this on a few times during the week and haven't frightened them away, try the same stunt without the team, watching them very closely, and if they turn their breasts to the wind, withdraw, very carefully, not by turning back, but by going quartering away. Always wear the same clothes, and in two or three weeks your birds will get to know you.

Then as you approach anywhere near them, call them, in any way you see fit. They will learn to know your voice. Now you can dress up and wear a stove-pipe hat for aught the geese care. Your voice will quiet them, and by your actions they will know you.

Now gradually move your feed and attractions towards where you want your birds to come, and they will come and will compel you to believe they were glad of the opportunity.

2. Why do you put your full address on the goose and duck tags?

Because it has been a success, while a number is much harder to trace. I have had dozens of rings and tags of different kinds sent to me that were taken off pigeons and wild ducks, and the numbers could be easily read. I advertised them time and again, and up to date have not received one word of proof as to who put them on. Moreover when you have the stamp made, one stroke of the hammer on top of mother's flat-iron completes the trick, and your post office address is the only real way to do it right.

3. Where can I get a stamping outfit?

Almost any stencil manufacturer can fit you out. I have two stamps, one for the small birds, making letters about the size of small newsprint, and for the ducks and geese the stamp is fully five times as large. I also have a set of individual letters and figures for stamping the Scripture text and so forth. I don't think my whole outfit cost me over twenty-five dollars.

4. I saw a bird the other day; it was about so big and from where I stood it looked to be ringed, streake and striped. What was it?

The woods and fields are full of such beauties, and I am acquainted with them all, but do not know them by their proper names. Dear mother taught me the names of our commonest birds. That was the only way I had of knowing them. I, of course, had a name for every one. The Nuthatch I called the tree-creeper; the Woodthrush was called the brown linnet; the Flicker I called a fiddler; and the buzz of a rattlesnake in the long grass automatically called my bare feet upon a log.

5. What bird lays first in the spring?

Here in southern Ontario, the great horned owl is the first I know of to nest in the trees, and the horned lark is the first to nest on the ground. Of the latter, I have seen the young able to fly on April 3rd.

6. What birds breed the fastest?

Bob White quail are the fastest breeding birds I know of. If not molested they will beat the English sparrows more than double. The quail raises two broods a year, and quite often three. I know a pair of quail that reared thirty-eight young in their first two broods. These were in charge of the old male bird on October the 10th, while the female had a brood of tiny chicks that I could not count.

What handicaps this little potato-bug-destroyer has! She is exposed to all kinds of enemies the whole year round, especially during December, January and February, when nature is clothed in her white robe (Bob cannot change his color) while the English sparrow, or flying rat, has a hole prepared that he lines with feathers and only has to come out an hour or two during the day for food.

7. What are the best trees and shrubs to attract birds?

This depends largely on the trees and vines your soil will produce. My soil is clay loam, first class corn ground. I am planting mulberries and elderberries, wild grapes and red cedars, and some sumach which grows fairly well; but sumach will, of course, do better in sandy soil.

I know of nothing to equal mulberries. I have mulberry trees only five years old and it is hard to believe the amount of bird food one tree will yield, starting to ripen about June 15th, and continuing all through the fruit season, or, in other words, from six to ten weeks.

The red cedar is another tree we must have, as it affords shelter as well as food, the berries, like the wild grapes, hanging all winter.

Where the climate will permit, by all means plant some mountain ash. The big crimson clusters of fruit hanging on the mountain ash trees in northern Ontario are more beautiful to me than the great Woolworth, or the General Motors office building of Detroit; and what they look like to the hundreds of birds that feed on them during the fall and winter months can only be imagined when we are returning from a moose-hunt, late at night, cold, tired and hungry.

But the two outstanding ones, to me, are mulberries and wild grapes, the berries for summer, and the grapes for winter.

8. How can I get the birds to come to my window in the winter?

Make two movable self-servers and nail each to top of a barrel. Feed cracked nuts, a little suet, etc.

Set your feed-racks a rod or two apart, back among your shrubbery. As soon as you have a nice bunch of birds coming keep moving your racks toward your house; this can be done by just moving the farther one around in front of the other, each time.

9. How long does it take our common birds to hatch and fly from the nest?

Robins set from thirteen to fourteen days, and fly in about two weeks. But wild birds are not like our domestic fowls. If the latter leaves the nest, or stays off one night, that brood is about sure to all die. But if a robin is disturbed, such as staying off the nest for six or eight hours at a time, the young are very apt to hatch. I have known cases of this kind when the eggs didn't hatch until the fifteenth day.

I once set a hen on nine wild duck eggs. She started out fine, and set steadily for two weeks. Then she changed her mind, so I changed hens; but number two was no better. I then took the eggs and put them under hen number three, who finished the job on the thirty-second day, when seven out of the nine hatched, but they were very weak. Yet I managed to raise five of them to mature ducks. Duck eggs should hatch in twenty-eight days.

Barn swallows fly in about thirty-five days from the time the first eggs are laid; yet it must be remembered that young swallows must be able to float in the air before they leave the nest.

"BLACK RAIN" CAUSES FEAR.

Warsaw, April 28. — The phenomenon of "black rain" has been observed in Southern Poland and the superstitious were excited and feared it was a forecast of epidemics and a bad harvest.

JOHN ARTHUR VANCE.

Word has been received of the sudden death in British Columbia on Sunday of John Arthur Vance, of Winnipeg, formerly of Millbrook, and well known in this section of the Province. Mr. Vance was seized while on a train, and died in a short time. Scout News

2ND (ARMOUR) TROOP.

The troop has four patrols. A patrol consists of a patrol leader, second, and three or four boys. The names of the patrols are Woodpigeons, Beavers, Ravens, and Wild Geese. The meeting was opened by P. L. Peters, who showed the troop how to do the silent signals. The patrols were dismissed to patrol corners, where instruction and a patrol council was held. Troop was again formed on the floor, where they were shown two more silent signals. The troop, after giving a rousing yell, went downstairs uttering their patrol calls.

Next came games and nigger-in-the-woodpile was played. While the troop leader gave a talk to patrols, the leaders formed a class under the S.M. A short sing-song was held. "Scout silence" followed, and the troop was dismissed . A leaders' class and Court of Honor were held after the meeting.

WHEAT PRICES FALL SUDDENLY

Profit-taking By Speculators Causes Drop of Six Cents a Bushel.

CHICAGO, May 1. — Canadian Press. — Wheat prices suffered a tremendous break to-day on general selling out in a wild attempt to realise paper profits on speculative holdings. Nearly six cents a bushel fall in value was shown in some cases, the Sept. delivery of wheat dropping to 1.60½, as against 1.66 1-8 to 1.66 3-8 at yesterday's finish.

SHORT FILMS SENT FOR EMPIRE WEEK

Will Be Used in Local Theatres to Continue Interest Aroused.

Following Empire Shopping Week, the Chamber of Commerce has been successful in obtaining from the central committee, motion pictures or "trailers," described in telegram by Alex. Marshall, honorary secretary of Empire Shopping Week in Canada: "Can you arrange regular use this week of beautiful two-minute trailers in picture shows? These have been used in twenty-six large theatres in Toronto. Fine follow-up to Empire Shopping Week."

The pictures have just arrived in Peterborough and Secretary Frank Stinson of the Chamber of Commerce is negotiating with local theatre managers to have the trailers used during the balance of the week, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

Real Christianity is freedom of the highest kind. It is not compulsion by the assumed authority of ecclesiasticism or by one's own unenlightened conscience. It is that, that gives rest from any efforts of our own. The true Christian has commandments to keep ,but those commandments to him are not grievous. Further, those who live in this liberty, have fellowship with all who do likewise. Real Christianity delivers from the guilt, power, and pollution of wrong-doing. It relieves from a sense of sacrifice and slavish fear. It gives to the participants an assurance ,and enables them to speak with authority. It brings back man to normal living. It is supremely the best thing in the world. M. T. BUTHER.

ASK REDUCTION IN FEE CHARGED OUTSIDE PUPILS

Deputation From S.S. 3, Smith, Thinks $38.50 Each is Too High.

INTERVIEWS BOARD

Cessation of Federal Grant for Vocational Education Likely to Prove Costly.

Reeve J. A. Middleton headed a deputation from S.S. 2, Smith, which attended the Board of Education meeting last night to ask if some reduction cannot be made in the fee charged the section for the pupils attending the Queen Alexandra School. Dr. Yelland was chairman in the absence of E. B. Fowler.

At present the board charge $38.50 a year for fifty or sixty pupils, or a total amount in the neighborhood of $2,000. This is figured on a basis of eighty per cent of the average cost a pupil in the public schools. The finance committee of the board was instructed to go into the matter of costs, and bring in a recommendation in the matter.

Mr. Middleton pointed out that the school section is not getting any further ahead through this payment. If the amount is to remain as it is it will be cheaper to build a school. The city has the accommodation, and the presence of these pupils cannot make the cost much higher.

Mr. Edmison supported the arguments of Mr. Middleton. It would be a different matter if the board had to hire an extra teacher to care for these pupils, but they are scattered through different rooms.

Dr. J. J. Craig recalled that last year when the price was fixed he had opposed it as being too high. The money is largely found money and as long as the board has the accommodation it should try to provide for these people and get whatever remuneration it can. The section will not be content to go on paying such a sum from year to year and he suggested sixty per cent. as a reasonable charge.

Mrs. Morris proposed that the Finance committee consult with Inspector Mowat to find out to what extent the presence of these pupils increases the cost.

W. R. Turner pointed out that the figure had first been fixed at the full amount, but had been cut to eighty percent after a deputation had appeared. It had been fixed at eighty percent because that is the amount fixed by the Department of Education as the charge to be made for county pupils in high schools. The eighty percent is calculated only on the salaries and upkeep, no allowance being made for the interest and sinking fund. He doubted if the section could provide a school for these pupils at a smaller cost.

Loss From Grant.

Something of the loss to the city because of the Federal Government's intention of cutting off the grants to vocational education at the end of

No Hope Held For Safety of Crew of Dutch Steamer, Callisto.

32 MEN IN CREW.

SYDNEY, N.S., May 2 (Canadian Press).—The wreck of the Dutch steamer Callisto, hidden by dense fog since she crashed ashore last Saturday night, was located to-day on the jagged rocks of Port Nova Island, one mile off the south-eastern coast of Cape Breton. Wreckage strewn along the south side of Scatari Island today included parts of three lifeboats, found near the spot where the body of a man previously had been washed ashore, and no hope was held out that any of the Callisto's crew of thirty-two survived. No bodies were reported to have been washed ashore at Port Nova and very little wreckage, prevailing winds having carried this down to Scatari Island.

Excited New Yorkers Crowd Streets In Honor of Trans-Atlantic Fliers

NEW YORK, May 2 (Canadian Press). — This was officially labelled a day of rest on the schedule of the Bremen fliers, but it was no sort of rest they ever had in Germany or Ireland.

To enable Baron Von Huenefeld, Captain Koehl, and Major Fitzmaurice to recuperate from the rigors of the official welcome Monday, the daylight program yesterday included no more than a visit to a newspaper office, a brief ceremony at the sub-treasury and calls on the German and British Consulates.

This might have been restful enough if New Yorkers had seen their fill of the fliers Monday, but it turned out that they were just as avid for a glimpse yesterday, and still had the voice to indulge in cheering.

When the party left their hotel in the morning, they found some 6,000 persons massed in the streets The progress to Park Row was between sidewalks crowded with other cheering thousands and scores of police were needed to conduct them through jostling throngs jammed about the World Building.

After a call on executives of The World and the newspaper syndicate which sent two planes to Greenely Island to assist them, the fliers were driven to the corner of Broad and Wall streets, where across the way from the Stock Exchange and the Morgan offices therey laid wreaths at the base of the statue of George Washington on the sub-treasury steps.

EGYPT REGRETS INTERVENTION OF BRITISH IN ITS LEGISLATION

Reply to Ultimatum is Delivered After Prolonged Discussion By Cabinet.

HOPE FOR UNDERSTANDING.

Are Desirous of Insuring Safety of Egyptians and Foreigners Alike.

CAIRO, Egypt, May 2 (Associated Press). — The reply of Egypt to the British ultimatum was delivered to the British residency at ten o'clock last night, showing that there had been prolonged discussion of its tenor in the Egyptian Cabinet.

The reply states that the Egyptian Government, in its solicitude that no country should intervene in its affairs, regrets the intervention of the British in Egyptian legislation. Egypt is most desirous of ensuring the safety of Egyptians and foreigners alike, it said.

For the sake of good understanding between the two countries and in response to the British ultimatum, Egypt has done all that she could constitutionally by postponing examination of the Assemblies' Bill until the next parliamentary session, the note said.

The British Government, on the eve of consideration by the Egyptian Senate of a bill prohibiting the police from interfering with assemblies except in extreme emergencies, had demanded that the measure be withdrawn. It took the stand that the safety of foreigners might be endangered by such a law. A part of the British Fleet was despatched from Malta to enforce the demand.

AWAITS REPLY.

LONDON, May 2 (Canadian Press). —The British Government now awaits transmission from its representative in Cairo of the reply of the Egyptian Government to the ultimatum delivered yesterday, and concerning the Public Assemblies Bill.

The Cabinet will discuss the reply to-day, and Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of the Foreign Office, will probably announce in the House of Commons whether it is satisfactory to His Majesty's Government.

Consideration of the Public Assemblies Bill by the Egyptian Legislature has been put off till November. The British Government demanded that the Bill, which has been passed by the Chamber, and was to have been considered by the Senate, be withdrawn.

It is reported here that Nahas Pasha, the Egyptian Premier, and his ministers seem little disposed to listen to the extremists who have been urging them to resist British demands.

The hope is expressed in London that the crisis may lead to a revival of the negotiations for a treaty of alliance, which, it is understood, the British Government is still ready to consider on the terms of the rejected sarwat draft.

NOT SATISFY GOVERNMENT.

LONDON, May 2 (Associated Press). — Egypt's decision to postpone consideration of the Assemblies Bill will not satisfy the British Government, the Earl of Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, said last night in a speech here.

"They might as well save themselves a great deal of parliamentary trouble. It is useless to postpone it to November, useless to postpone for five or ten years, for never can a country with imperial responsibilities, with obligations to other European nations and the vital necessity of maintaining its own imperial communications agree to legislation like this, and never, in my opinion, will this country, under any Government, so agree," he said.

Business Block Gutted By Fire

FOXWARREN, Man., May 2.—(Canadian Press.)—Five business establishments on the main street of this little settlement were gutted by fire yesterday. The fire started in an implement store and spread rapidly to adjoining buildings. The volunteer bucket brigade was unable to check the advance of the flames and not until reinforcements arrived from Winecarth and Birtle, Man., was the blaze subdued. Until stocks in the stores affected are examined the damage will not be definitely known.

ELEVEN JURORS IN AGREEMENT TO AWARD SIR ARTHUR CURRIE $500 FOR LIBELLOUS ARTICLE

Court Room Crowded With Interested Auditors as Case Ends.

COSTS VERY HEAVY.

Customary Fifteen Day Stay Given at Request of Defence Counsel, Frank Regan.

COBOURG, May 2. — Eleven of the twelve men who composed the special jury in the $50,000 Currie libel action, found the defendants, W. T. R. Preston and F. W. Wilson, guilty of libel, and awarded General Currie damages to the extent of $500.00, after being out for three hours and forty minutes.

The entire costs of the action will be borne by the defence. These will amount to several thousand dollars. The usual stay of fifteen days was granted by Justice Rose when requested by Frank Regan.

Occasionally during the proceedings a slight demonstration by the spectators, when some particularly pleasing incident occurred, was promptly hushed by the court officers, and on rare occasions by the judge himself, but when Sir Arthur W. Currie walked through the court house lobby, and out of the building, the crowds in the lobby proclaimed him hero of another battle by a burst of applause. Canada's great soldier smiled and nodded his acknowledgment in a modest way as he passed along the passage which was quickly opened by the crowd. Sir Arthur had been vindicated by more than a judge and jury. He was the hero of the hour. Arrangements had already been completed to entertain him as a guest of honor at a banquet at the "War College."

When the jury returned to the court room at 4.27 p.m. the defendants were not present. Frank Regan was immediately sent for and he arrived just behind W. T. R. Preston a few minutes later. F. W. Wilson was not present when the verdict was returned. During the morning, while His Lordship was charging the jury, Mr. Wilson appeared greatly fatigued and worn out from the long days in the court room. T. F. Hall, K.C., did not arrive in time to hear the verdict. A reporter gave him the information in the lobby of the court house.

Asked in the usual way if they had arrived at a verdict, the jury replied through their foreman, George Anderson, Cobourg, that they had.

"We find the defendants guilty of libel," he said, "and award the plaintiff $500 damages."

In an attempt to fight the case to the last ditch Mr. Regan asked that the jury be polled. Eleven men agreed that verdict as stated was their verdict One man only failed

Dirigible "Italia" Flight Postponed

STOLP, Germany May 2.—(A.P.)—The flight of the dirigible Italia to Spitzbergen, scheduled to begin at midnight, was postponed by General Umberto Nobile because of unfavorable meteorological conditions prevailing over the Spitzbergen area.

Nobile, earlier, had decided that the weather was propitious for the Italia, which had been in a hangar here since April 16, to resume its flight to Kings Bay, Spitzbergen.

It was to use that northern outpost for several months as a base for exploration of the polar wastes. The mother ship of the expedition, Citta Di Milano is now en route to Kings Bay, but was believed to be contending with much ice.

In conformance with the first decision of the general, the dirigible had been made completely ready for the flight and it had been hauled into the open shortly before the hour set for the start.

At this juncture, General Nobile decided that a flight at this time would be foolhardy, and the takeoff was set forward, tentatively, to the early morning hours of Thursday.

LECTURE SERIES IS COMPLETED

John Tully Has Given Audiences Large Insight Into Psychology.

GIFTED ORATOR.

Last evening saw the close of the series of ten free lectures delivered by John Tully, of the Canadian Psychology Society, in the G.W.V.A. Hall, on the principles of applied psychology and the fine art of living. Though the lectures were not attended by as large audiences as they deserved, those who took advantage of the opportunity were treated to a broad elucidation of those principles which stimulate and govern human behavior. The speaker presented a vast amount of evidence, showing why men act as they do and not as they should, and then presented the case for the re-direction of the energy which would impel men to act as they should instead of as they do. The broad range of subjects covered by the lecture, the vast amount of scientific evidence presented in connection with each subject, marked the speaker as a deep student and investigator. To listen to Mr. Tully is to be convinced that he thoroughly understands his subject and has the ability to transmit his knowledge to the audience. As a speaker Mr. Tully belongs to that dynamic class who present their subjects with a rich warmth of delivery, clothed in an unstinted and well selected vocabulary that at times pours forth with the force, rapidity, and power of a mountain torrent, and again changes to a deep, calm, modulation bespeaking an inner wealth of sincerity or again changing to the clear, decisive methods of debate as he argues the point from the evidence presented. His lectures were interspersed with apt illustrations in which the elements of wit and humor were well balanced with sympathetic, highly inspirational quotations from many of the poetical masters.

Mr. Tully's demonstrations from the platform, in reading character at sight marked his power to demonstrate his operative ability in practice of those principles which he elucidated in his lectures. His one night of demonstration in mental healing showed that the ability of the mind to heal the body is a real, workable factor. To sum up the man and his work, Mr. Tully has a personality that compels from the first respectful attention, which deepens as he proceeds till the wealth of information which he unfolds and the manner of its presentation leaves no doubt in the minds of his listeners that he thoroughly understands his work, and that the authority of which he speaks is born of that knowledge that gives confidence and self-mastery. In short, to hear Mr. Tully speak is to learn something. He is an educator and an orator, with the ability to demonstrate in action the principles which he elucidates in his lectures.

GRANT'S WORK IS REVIEWED

Principal Taylor Tells of Efforts of Predecessor on Behalf of Queen's.

AT CONVOCATION.

(Special to The Examiner.)

KINGSTON, May 2. — Principal R. Bruce Taylor, at Queen's University Convocation to-day, presided over by Chancellor Sir Robert Borden, spoke on "Principal Grant, on the Fiftieth Anniversary of His First Convocation." He recalled some of the characteristics that made Principal Grant the power he was so as to impress those of this newer generation the qualities which anywhere and in any age would have made him a man of note. He spoke of the early days of Queen's, when Fate had been none too kind to it, for in the previous forty years it had suffered blow after blow. Controversy within Presbyterianism, political influences for centralization of university teaching, commercial disasters, and grievous internal strife had quenched the life or broken the spirit of men whose names are now held in reverence. There was need for money to carry on. Principal Snodgrass did not feel equal to the task, and eyes centred on George Munro Grant, as the man who could do the thing needed to be done. He had courage. It was indicated when he lost part of his right hand in a hay cutter. The night following the accident he was found practising writing with his left hand. This same courage he manifested in meeting many another shrewd blow. The principal studied at Picton Academy, went to Scotland to train under Norman McLeod for the ministry. He succeeded and Scotland tried to keep him, but his native land made the greater appeal. After years St. Matthew's Church, Halifax, gave him outlet for his power, and his fame soon ran throughout the land. The trip across the continent with Sir Sandford Fleming and the struggle to bring Nova Scotia into the Canadian Confederation were influences that inspired and ennobled him. He spoke with vigor, with power, but with all good feeling. "In the last address he ever gave to the students of Queen's," said Principal Taylor, "his mind went back to those days as he maintained that the preacher had to be prophet also, citizen as well as saint. 'Mr. ——— is not coming to church,' one of the elders said to me in an icy tone, 'because he is offended at you for having spoken in Pictou in favor of Confederation.' 'Has it not occurred to you that I may be offended

WILSON AND PRESTON INTEND TO APPEAL COURT'S DECISION BECAUSE OF JUDGE'S RULINGS

Knows Nothing Of World Flight

WASHINGTON, May 2.—(Canadian Press.)—Major Thomas C. Lanphier, commandant of Selfridge Field, Michigan, and close friend of Colonel Lindbergh, said yesterday that he "had no knowledge" of any flight he might make with Lindbergh this summer, as has been reported. Major Lanphier flew from Langley Field, Virginia, yesterday morning to spend the day with Lindbergh, but his conversation was "private" he said. He planned to rejoin the first pursuit group at Langley Field last night, if weather conditions permitted the flight.

Charge to Jury and Exclusion of Evidence Suffice Cause, Says Wilson.

REGAN WILL ACT.

Also Charged That Tilley Exceeded His Rights During Address to Jury.

TORONTO, May 2 (Canadian Press). — The verdict of the jury at the Cobourg Assizes yesterday awarding Sir Arthur Currie five hundred dollars, and costs, in his libel action against W. T. R. Preston and F. W. Wilson, will be appealed by the defendants, Mr. Wilson, in a long-distance telephone conversation from Cobourg to-day, said: "Certainly there will be an appeal. We have very good grounds for one."

Mr. Wilson, speaking to the Canadian Press from Cobourg, said "We consider that we have abundant points on which to make an appeal, the judge's stand in regard to excluding our evidence and his charge to the jury."

Mr. Wilson said that Frank Regan would represent him in the appeal, but it was not certain how Mr. Preston would be represented, though the latter would jointly appeal with himself. The publisher of the Port Hope Guide pointed out that there was a sufficient length of time legally allowed for the appeal to permit of proper consideration of the grounds on which the appeal would be made, and it would not be filed at once.

Mr. Regan told the Canadian Press that an appeal would be taken in regard to the rejection of certain evidence, the judge's charge, and the summing up of W. N. Tilley, K.C., for the plaintiff.

Substantially the appeal would be made on the following grounds, he said:

1—That the judge erred in rejecting certain evidence submitted by the defence.

2—That the judge erred in his charge to the jury.

3—That the counsel for the plaintiff in his address to the jury exceeded the restrictions placed upon him by law and by practice.

RIVER CHANNEL 600 FEET WIDE IS ADVOCATED BY ENGINEER

Needed For Safe Navigation of St. Lawrence From Kingston to Prescott.

ENGINEER EXPLAINS.

Cost Would Be Greatly Increased If It Were Effected on Canadain Side of River.

OTTAWA, May 2 (Canadian Press) —The steamship channel between Kingston and Prescott in connection with the St. Lawrence deep waterways proposal should be six hundred feet wide to make navigation safe, Duncan McLachlan, chief engineer for Canada on the project told the special committee of the Senate investigating the proposals to-day. To use the United States channel from Kingston to a point a few miles above Brockville and the Canadian channel the rest of the way, would, he believed, eventually cost four million dollars, although the estimate now submitted was considerably less than that as the United States engineers did not think expenditures which need not be made until some time after navigation started should be included.

To make an all-Canadian channel 25 feet deep from Kingston to Prescott would cost eleven million dollars, Mr. McLaughlan estimated, as below Gananoque a great deal of work would be necessary where present Canadian channel is narrow and crooked.

Mr. McLauchlan explained from sectional maps the waterway from Lake Superior to the sea, as it now exists and how it is proposed to alter it. The Canadian locks at the 'Soo' had a depth of 18½ feet, whereas the channel above and below was about 21 feet. The new United States locks there are 24½ feet, so that practically all the heavily-laden boats downbound use United States locks, which enable them to load deeper. The dam at the Soo, he estimated, held up the general level of Lake Superior slightly over a foot and had the effect of lowering Lake Huron level three or four inches. There was no Canadian steamboat channel in some parts of the St. Mary's River, and he did not think it would be feasible to build a Canadian channel there.

$4,000,000 PAID BY T. EATON CO.

Trade Creditors of C. D. S. L. Will Receive 37 Cents on the Dollar.

DEFICIT TWO MILLION.

TORONTO, May 2. — Canadian Press. — An offer of four million dollars for the assets of the Canadian Departmental Stores Limited, was fully confirmed to-day when the T. Eaton Company Limited paid over to the trustees of the concern a certified cheque for four million dollars. In return the Eaton organization will control the Canadian Departmental Stores, twenty one store properties which are located all over Ontario and in Montreal.

The transaction is the largest of its kind on record.

The stores will continue under the same name, and will deal substantially in the same classes of merchandise. Various Eaton policies, however, will be adopted.

The concern was incorporated in 1926 and got into financial dificulties last autumn, interim receivers being appointed on Nov. 30 last. The statement of assets and liabilities by the receivers showed nominal deficits of $2,026,725.

An official statement by the National Surety Company, representing the largest body of trade creditors, indicated that the trade creditors of the Canadian Department Stores would receive about 37 cents on the dollar and the income bond holders 43 cents on the dollar while the first mortgage bondholders would receive payment of their claims in full with accrued interest.

Work on Highway Begins

Work has commenced on Kerr's hill, on the highway between Peterborough and Omemee. The hill will be lowered fifteen feet at the top. A number of men arrived from the Dufferin Construction Company, last week and erected the shanties for sleeping quarters. The steam shovel will arrive this week. It is reported that the road will not be closed to traffic, while the work is in progress as one half will be finished before the other half is commenced.

The river has also lowered suddenly, leaving the land still wet, but exposed to the sun and wind.

Fence building will provide many days' work for those who must repair damages as the water subsides.

SOCIAL EVENING.

Many Attend Social Gathering Held in Apsley Parish Town Hall.

APSLEY, May 2.—The monthly social evening for Apsley people was held in the parish hall on Friday, and judging from the number that attended and the zest evinced in the old-fashioned square dances and old time games, such as Paul Jones, and the Grand Duke of York, bids fair to become the most popular event of the season. John Coones very kindly provided the music for the occasion, and the ladies contributed generously to the refreshments which were served at 11 p.m. after which further dancing was indulged in for an hour and a half. It was a real community event, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Ice is Gone

The ice went out from Jack's Lake on Saturday, and Loon Lake will soon be free from ice though it is still strong enough to allow venturesome persons to walk across it. The Peterborough Lumber Company's drive is now going down Eel's Creek, being more than two weeks later than last year.

Maple syrup makers are finishing up, most of them quitting on Saturday. There is still quite a quantity of snow in parts of the woods and in sheltered places.

The last three days have made an improvement in the roads, some of the bad places drying up noticeably allowing the road graders to come into action.

JOINT SERVICE HELD AT NORHAM

Young People's League Hold Special Service With United Church.

LADIES' AID MEETS

NORHAM, May 2.—As the Young People's League meeting would fall this week on a fifth Monday of the month, and as no program was outlined in the course of study, a special meeting in the form of a joint service with the United Church took place on Sunday evening. The Rev. D. R. Clare spoke to the young people from Proverbs XXXVII, using as illustration the habits of the ant, spider, conie and locust respectively as given in the lesson. He emphasized four qualities to be developed by young people foresight, patience, perseverance, and unity or teamwork. His advice was "Choose your life work, then study to prepare yourself for your life's vocation." The hymns for the evening were chosen to fit the young people's service.

Ladies' Aid Meets.

Mrs. N. Gummer was hostess to the members of the Ladies' Aid at a meeting held at her home on Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. D. Evans in the chair. The scriptural lesson was read by Miss D. Diamond.

COMMUNITY HALL OPENED TO PUBLIC

Stirling Couple Celebrate Fiftieth Anniversary of Their Wedding.

STIRLING, May 2.—The new community hall was opened to the public on Monday, April 30, in an unusual way for such things but in a very happy way to those immediately interested. This date happened to be the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Morton. On April 30, 1878, the Rev. Jame Tomblin, of Sidney circuit, joined in the holy bonds of matrimony, Alex. Morton, of Rawdon, and Miss Sarah Finkle, daughter of Emory and Catherine Finkle of the school lot, second concession of Sidney; Martha Finkle and John Hyde were the attendants. After the ceremony, the happy couple drove to the seventh concession of Rawdon, where they resided until 1918, when they moved to Stirling village to enjoy the result of their labor on the farm. Two sons were born to them, the elder one dying several years ago at the age of 16, the other one, Charles, is now farming on the adjoining lot to where his parents resided for so many years.

The Rev. C. W. Barrett was chosen chairman for the evening, and Mr. and Mrs. Morton were presented with several gifts, including a purse of gold from their son, a gold headed cane, and several bouquets of flowers. Mr. Morton made a very suitable reply. The accompanying address was signed by William J. Johnston, Mrs. W. B. Totton, Mrs. Frank Treverton and C. L. Hogle. Telegrams were received from Mr McAdam, Toronto, Edith Robinson, of Detroit, E. and Margaret Morton, of North Bay; G. J. Sherry, of Peterborough. The Rev. W. H. Clark, and the Rev. Mr. Connell, former pastors of the Rawdon circuit who regreted their inability to be present and tendered their best wishes; Dr. J. E. MISSIONARY SPEAKS HAVELOCK CHURCH

Dr. Florence Murray Addresses United Church Congregation.

HAVELOCK May 2.—Dr. Florence Murray, Medical Missionary from Korea, was the special speaker on Church, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society on the occasion of their annual thankoffering service. A large congregation was in attendance and the sum of one hundred dollars which was the objective of the society as a contribution towards the work in Korea was realized. Dr. Murray gave a very instructive address on Mission work in Korea, which she divided under two headings, Medical and Educational. In dealing with the first she said it had often been her wish that the friends and supporters in Canada could go there and see just what the missionaries do and in order to give some idea of the work she took, the congregation on an imaginary visit for one day to the hospital where she was stationed. She depicted very clearly a typical sort of day with its many duties and problems including some amusing incidents, the attitude of some of the Korean patients, towards foreign medical treatment. The hospital is divided into three wards namely: first class, general and charity. A nurses' home is to be built this summer and as tuberculosis is very prevalent there the workers are hoping to have an isolation hospital built in the near future. All the staff are christians and beside their work have also to teach and preach. In speaking on the educational part of the work she said that there was no school for girls when the first missionaries went there. Later a school was organized and for some time the classes were spread over eleven buildings, now there are in two buildings and six years ago one of these was condemned as unsafe but it is still in use. The greatest obstacle they had to face in this department was that their school was not recognized as a school because they had no building. Graduates cannot get a license to teach or cannot graduate into other schools. The teachers are all christians and almost all the girls become christians before they graduate so as a christian agency the school is well worth while. The sum of $32,000 is needed for a school building before the school can be recognized as a school. In closing her address, Dr. Murray made a plea for this worthy cause.

Two anthems by the choir and a solo by Mr. R. Bonny were well given.

O'NEIL FACES MURDER TRIAL

Is Committed For Trial For Deaths of Employer and Daughter in Barn Fire.

AT FALL ASSIZES.

BARRIE, May 2.—Nearly three months after his arrest following twelve remands, George O'Neil, farm-hand, was yesterday committed for trial on two murder counts and one of attempting suicide. It is alleged that he is responsible for the deaths of Azor Robertson, Tecumseth Township farmer, and the latter's daughter, Mrs. Ruby Martin, whose charred remains were found in the ruins of the Robertson barn on February 4 last. O'Neil was their hired man and had received notice that his services were no longer required after March 1.

The prisoner will stand his trial on the murder counts at the Fall Assizes. On that of attempting to take his own life he may elect speedy trial before the county judge or come before the June sessions.

Skull Fractured.

New evidence brought out yesterday not introduced at the inquest when the jury recommended that O'Neil be placed on trial, was that of Dr. J. H. Erb, pathologist of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto. Dr. Erb performed the post-mortem on the body of the late Azor Robertson after it had been ordered exhumed by the authorities. He testified that there had been a fracture of the skull, just above the left eye and that a hemorrhage occurred. He also testified that his examination of the stained straw surrounding the spot where the body was found showed marked traces of human blood. The purpose of the Crown was to show that Robertson was struck before he was burned. Both legs and one arm were missing from Robertson's body. Dr. Erb stated, while Mrs. Martin's body was even more severely burned, making an autopsy impossible.

Ruth Martin, 12-year-old daughter of the deceased woman, gave her evidence in a concise, calm manner. She told of rushing to the barn at seven in the morning, getting out of bed when she learned that her grandfather had been injured. She told of seeing O'Neil on the steps leading to the loft, where it is believed the fire started.

Neighbors summoned to the fire by telephone, told of seeing O'Neil rolling in the snow to extinguish his apparent burning clothing and of later seeing him stripped to the waist, his arms and head badly burned. The burns were said by accused to have been received endeavoring to release the stock from the burning barn. These same witnesses, however, testified to having later themselves turned out the horses and cattle from the stable in which there was no fire but much smoke.

Clash Between Counsel

There was a clash between defence counsel, H. R. Creswick and Crown-Attorney Evans, over the admissibility of a statement alleged to have been made by O'Neil, the night after the fire, to Ora Rastings, who spent the night in the Robertson home administering to O'Neil's wounds at the soliciation of the county constable. Hastings admitted to Mr. Creswick that he was also there to see that O'Neil did not run away and to find out what he could from accused for future use.

Despite objection, Magistrate Jeffs admitted the statement in evidence. O'Neil had first said he received the burns from falling embers while releasing a heifer, and when informed that the cattle had been released by neighbors without danger of fire, remarked "I don't know how I got burned."

Four days after the fire O'Neil slashed his throat in Barrie police cells with a knife, but recovered after six weeks in hospital. He has since put on much flesh and is looking well, although perceptibly nervous yesterday.

Mrs. Robertson, aged widow of the deceased farmer, just out of a sick bed, was in court, but was not called as a witness.

MESSAGE CHEERS GENERAL CURRIE

Father of Last Canadian Killed Hoped Commander Would Win.

COBOURG, May 2. — All the time Sir Arthur Currie sat in Court here yesterday awaiting the verdict in his libel action against W. T. R. Preston and F. W. Wilson, he had in his pocket a telegram from James Price of Port Williams, N.S., father of George Lawrence Price, the only Canadian soldier killed on Armistice Day. That telegram, dated April 30, was made public at a banquet tendered to General Currie by Cobourg veterans last night. It read:

"As father of George Lawrence Price, the only Canadian reported killed on Armistice Day, I wish to convey to you, sir, my humble wish that you succeed in bringing to justice their responsibility for bringing this case before the public. All this discussion simply renews old wounds that are better forgotten."

Private Price, as the evidence at the trial showed, was killed by a German sniper three minutes before the "cease fire' 'at a point between the Village of Havre and the Canal du Centre, between 7,000 and 8,000 yards east of Mons.

THE BEST THAT'S MADE IN EVERY GRADE

Bailieboro

BAILIEBORO, May 2. — Franklin Bannister, of Garden Hill, addressed a large congregation in the United church on Sunday evening, when he spoke to the fathers and sons under the auspices of the local Victor Tuxis Square.

The speaker told of the origin of C.S.E.T. work. Tuxis work commenced eight years ago. Taylor Stratton first thought of this movement among the 'teen age group of boys. He desired to build up an organization that would include all the boys and young men throughout the Dominion of Canada. The laws and aims were founded on Luke 11-52, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favor of God and man." Tuxis means training for service, Christ the centre, you and I on either side, and no one but Christ between us. The speaker also explained the four-fold program as set up by the boys' work board. They consist of the mental side, where the boys indulge in debates and public speaking contests where the mental side of the tuxis boy is trained. The physical side is second, the program calls for games and athletics, and thus the boys' physical side of life is developed. The religious side of the program is possibly the greatest. The program calls for devotional services, Bible study, encouraging young men to lead in prayer, etc. The tuxis boys' program does not leave out the social side of the four-fold program, and the various squares visit each other's organizations. The boys become acquainted at election campaigns and at the boys' parliament, fully developing the social side. The tuxis boy is being trained to take his place in life and through the training of the C.S.E.T. groups the tuxis boy of to-morrow will be a better citizen.

The tuxis boys' movement is financed by a bond selling contest. The dividends on the bonds is a better citizenship in this fair land of ours.

In concluding his address the speaker urged the fathers to stand behind the sons' organization. To encourage it in every way possible, and in the future the fruits of the C.S.E.T. training would come out in the young men as they take their respective places in life.

The local tuxis boys took entire charge of the song service and several special numbers were ably given by the boys, including an anthem, "Pilot Me, O Gracious Saviour," in unison. A vocal solo by Eldridge White. A quartette, "The Little Brown Church in the Dale," by Messrs. K. Lang, E. White, K. and P. Barnard. Miss Viola White presided at the piano.

Archie Deyell, the pretor of the local square, acted as leader, while the announcements were made by the pastor, the Rev. H. W. Foley. The Benediction was pronounced by Rev. A. H. McConnachie. Charles Barnard and Herb Dean acted as ushers and handled the crowd, which completely filled the church, in a most competent manner.

Laurence Dunbar, representative of the older boys' parliament for this district, was to have taken the service, but owing to the death of his grandmother on Saturday evening he was unable to be present and the mentor of the Garden Hill square, Franklin Bannister, consented to take his place.

Archie Deyell, on behalf of the local boys thanked the speaker in a few well chosen words, for the excellent address.

Six of the centre seats of the church were completely filled with fathers and their sons, while about twenty of the tuxis boys constituted the choir. The excellent manner in which the fathers and sons took part in the service made the service more attractive.

One night Professor Gazer, the great astronomer noticed through his telescope that various stars in one of the great constellations had different numbers of points to them. He was able to group these odd stars. This discovery so startled the scientific world that it was decided to find out what it all meant. After two months research it was decided that one of the planets was using this method to send the world an important message. By mathematical calculation Professor Gazer was able to decipher the message. His colleagues naturally wanted to know all about it, but he would not give them the message. He told them to work it out for themselves.

How He Did It

"You will notice," the professor told them, "some stars have three points, others four points, some five, or six points, etc. The number of points each star has determines what letter of the word of the message that star stands for. For instance if a star has three points it is the letter a. However, if it has four points it is either d, e, or f. Some stars represent only one letter, some 2 letters and some 3 letters. I have worked out the table code for you, now you count the number of points on each star and try to find what letter each star stands for, by referring to the table code. I have correctly arranged the stars so that each row of stars spells a word of the message. In order to help you a bit the first word is "Greatest."

IRONING OUT GRIEVANCES.

The report presented by the special parliamentary committee, appointed to investigate the question, makes a number of recommendations that should serve to remove some of the sources of grievances among Canadian returned soldiers.

In fact, the committee urges a score of changes, all aimed at bettering the conditions of ex-service men and their families, and The Examiner is confident that public opinion will be behind anything that promises to have this effect.

The Canadian people want to feel satisfied that everything in reason is being done for the men who offered themselves when the war drums sounded, and that grievances that have arised shall be remedied.

The country has not been niggardly to its returned men, inasmuch as the amount spent in regard to ex-service veterans from July 1, 1915, has reached the huge total of $775,105,718, of which pensions alone accounted for $338,208,846, but there have been legitimate causes for complaint in certain particulars, and the recommendations now made, it is hoped, will result in alleviation of some of these troubles.

A square deal for every man who fought should be the bases on which the whole system operates.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

The Toronto City Council has passed a resolution favoring a system of old age pensions for Ontario.

The motion, as published does not call for this Province participating in the Federal scheme of pensions by which the Dominion Government will pay half the cost, but merely favors some system of pensions.

The Toronto city fathers might have been more definite in their stand on this question if their intention was to add to the pressure that is being brought to bear upon the Ontario Government to take advantage of the Federal plan.

It would be of considerable value to know what the civic government of Ontario's largest city thinks of participation in the general scheme, and the resolution, whether through carelessness in its wording or purposely the public has no means of knowing, does not make this point clear.

Incidentally, some pronouncement from Premier Ferguson in regard to old age pensions has been foreshadowed in a speech by the Attorney-General, and Mr. Ferguson's statement is being awaited with considerable interest.

The people of Ontario are deeply concerned in this question of relief for the needy poor, and expect action from Queen's Park.

CO-OPERATE WITH THE DEPARTMENT.

Fire Chief Gimblett has issued a warning and a request, both of which should be loyally acted upon by the citizens generally.

In the first place, the public is warned against burning rubbish within the city limits without proper permission having been secured from the fire chief.

This practice is invariably associated with a good many calls for the assistance of the fire department and is decidedly dangerous.

There is no reason why the lives of firemen should be endangered answering calls that have been caused by careless actions on the part of citizens, and there is the further risk that while the apparatus is at one end of the city on such an errand a serious fire elsewhere may obtain a big start.

The request of Chief Gimblett that citizens generally co-operate with the department by removing fire hazards from their property is one that should meet with a ready response.

Thanks to the inspection work done by the department, conditions in the business section in regard to fire hazards are greatly improved, and the same state of affairs is possible in the homes of the citizens where inspection is not feasible but where the people on their own initiative should see to it that sources of fire danger are eliminated.

MAKE USE OF THE LICENSE SYSTEM.

While educational campaigns, designed to impress upon the motorist and the pedestrian alike the necessity of being careful, will undoubtedly do much to cut down the number of accidents, much more than that is needed.

There are people who are not fit to be entrusted with the responsibility that devolves upon the driver of an automobile—that is, they are either careless to a degree that is little short of criminal, or they are too nervous to be trustworthy in a tight corner.

Some way of weeding out such drivers must be found.

The license system should work to that end, but it is not doing so, largely because it does not seem to be anybody's business in particular to see that the law in this regard is obeyed.

There is no check-up to see how many drivers of motor cars are without operators' licenses.

There must be a large number in all parts of Ontario who will get away with it so long as they are lucky enough to keep out of an accident.

The best contribution that the Minister of Highways can make to safer driving conditions, The Examiner submits, is a more rigid licensing system that will eliminate those who for one reason or another are a menace to the public safety.

The drunken driver, the reckless driver, the incapable driver, must be driven off the highways; that done the sensible folks of Ontario can be appealed to with success to co-operate for greater safety.

CAMPAIGN NOT OVER.

To-day is the last day of the special Empire Shopping Week in Canada, and it should be signalized by a whirlwind wind-up to the campaign. "Wind-up," however, is not the correct expression, for the movement which has been promoted this week is intended to continue, not only throughout the year, but indefinitely. No spasmodic effort will suffice to achieve the objects which the organizers of the campaign have in view. It is only by persistent, habitual purchasing of British goods that the Empire will derive worth-while benefit. Eighty per cent. of Canada's imports were sent to us by foreign countries last year. That is an astonishing fact. The value of purchases from the United States alone during the year 1927 was $707,270,000, whereas Canada bought from the whole of the British Empire together in that period goods worth less than $250,000,000. These are striking figures, and they are taken from official sources.

The difficulty of rectifying a situation of this kind, which is so obviously unsatisfactory, is that the individual is not prepared to take a personal hand in the reform. It is left to the other fellow, consumers being inclined to place the responsibility on the merchants. An instance of this occurs in the letter from a correspondent, in which he complains that stockings purchased in a local store were marked of German origin. The fact that they were so marked should have been a sufficient warning in this particular case. The time to make sure that one is buying British goods is at the time of purchase. Merchants will respond to the demands of the public; it is essential for the survival of their business that they do so. The customers have the matter entirely in their own hands. They are not compelled to buy what they are offered if they do not approve; they are in a position to dictate policies. It is, therefore, to the consumers quite as much as to the retailers, if not more so, that this appeal to favor native and Empire products is addressed. In shopping, give the preference to Canadian and British goods, and the success of the Empire shopping movement is assured.—Hamilton Spectator.

A JACOBITE RISING.

From Scotland comes the news that "the heather is on fire." The fiery cross has sped forth, carrying to every part of the Highlands and even to the Lowlands the call to arms; the pibroch is sounding o'er hill and dale, and the clans, in all the glory of the tartan, are on the warpath. Except that the pen has taken the place of the claymore, and that ink is being shed in liberal quantities instead of blood, the ferment has all the vehemence of a Jacobite rising.

To the Scot, both Highland and Lowland, there are few things more sacred than tradition. It is the fountainhead of a sentiment that has made glorious the history of his race, that has stimulated and preserved his patriotism shaped and colored his character, and inspired his native literature. Upon it is based the national motto: Nemo me impune lacessit ("Touch me if ye daur!"), and nothing arouses the perfervid spirit therein expressed more intensely than any suggestion that Sandy's loyalty to the past is either misplaced or open to doubt.

From a base Sassenach, such a suggestion might be treated with contempt as a sneer on the part of an old and prejudiced enemy; coming from a "brither Scot," and a Highlander at that, it assumes the complexion of an act of treason, and a provocation to something approaching civil war. If that condition has not yet been reached, it is not the fault of a daring Celt of the name of Evan M. Barron, who, from the very heart of the Highlands, not far, indeed, from the historic field of Culloden, has launched a thunderbout which has set all Scotland in a blaze.

Mr. Barron is a well-known Scottish journalist and an authority on Celtic history, whose regard for historical accuracy is more profound than his respect for national sentiment. In a public lecture, recently delivered, he had the temerity to challenge a tradition that Scotland has cherished for centuries. "The popular belief," he declared, "that to be a Jacobite was something admirable, was a myth which in the interests, not only of history, but of the Highlands, ought to be exploded once and for all."

According to this Highland heretic, "Jacobitism was nothing to be proud of, and the Jacobites in the eighteenth century were not people whom Scotsmen ought to admire and reverence. The people whom they ought to admire were those Highlanders who had the sense and courage not to be Jacobites. To them the country owed its freedom to-day."

Mr. Barron is certainly to be admired for his courage, but if he really entertained the notion that Jacobitism was a myth, the storm of protest evoked by his utterance must have rudely undeceived him. From all parts of Scotland has gone up a cry of wrath which would seem to indicate that, whatever the Jacobites of the eighteenth century may have been, their descendants are still loyal to their memory and faithful to the names of "Bonnie Dundee" and "Bonnie Prince Charlie."

Perhaps what the lecturer desired to correct is the widespread assumption that Jacobitism had its origin in the Highlands, and that it was essentially and distinctively a creed of the kilted men of the north. There were as ardent and active Jacobites in England and Ireland in the eighteenth century as any of the Highland chieftains who fought for the Pretender; and in the case of the latter, their attachment to the Stuart cause, at no time undivided, had its root in clan dissension and in the sentiment inspired by Montrose and Dundee, and inflamed by the massacre of Glencoe, rather than in allegiance to "the King over the water."

Misguided, and futile though it may have been, it was a sentiment which had in it the elements of romance and picturesque adventure. Loyalty and devotion to a hopeless cause, chivalrous service and self-sacrifice are qualities that always appeal. It was these which kindled the imagination and touched the feelings, without influencing the judgment, of Scott and so many other Scottish writers; and it is the memory of them, embalmed in song and story, that preserves the spirit, if not the principles, of the Jacobites.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Peterborough's Industrial Exhibition has evidently no intention of resting upon its laurels. It goes from good to better.

Daylight saving retains its popularity in the centres where it has been given a trial over a period of years, but its adoption there is not exactly a convenience for the rest of us.

It is to be hoped the bunion derbyists will find that the first couple of thousand miles were the worst.

Anyway, James Stevenson Park would make an ideal wading pool if the water were warm enough.

If the radio announcer had used the real names of Delaney and Sharkey the other night the fight would have been over before he could broadcast "Orvilla Chapdelaine" and "John Joseph Cuckoshay."

With the libel case over, Cobourg will fall back on watching the car ferry come in as the most exciting event of the day.

Paper underwear is going to be the thing during the hot weather, according to a fashion writer. Chicago people, however, will stick to the same old cast-iron vogue.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., May 2 (Canadian Press).—The demand from foreign buyers for Canadian grain continued of a limited character here yesterday and little business was transacted. The trade in cash grain in the local market was also slow and prices were unchanged.

Little business was done in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour, but prices were well maintained.

The feature of the millfeed trade was again the urgent demand from United States buyers and further large sales were made including 22 cars of bran for shipment to Boston at $45 per ton delivered. A good steady trade was also done for local and country account and prices were firm. The inquiry for standard grades of rolled oats was dull but prices were unchanged.

The undertone to the egg market was firm with a moderate amount of business passing in all grades. The receipts were 3,648 cases.

The potato trade was extremely dull and the tone of the market was easy, but there was no further change in values.

A weaker feeling developed in the butter market and prices scored a further decline of ½c to ¾c per lb. This was attributed to the indifferent attitude of buyers and the fact that supplies of fresh made butter were accumulating. The receipts were 371 packages.

The trade in cheese was inactive, but values were well maintained for all grades. The receipts were 3,964 boxes.

The market for imported beans was quiet, but prices ruled steady.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 2 (Canadian Press).—Enormous selling to realize profits tumbled wheat prices wildly downward yesterday, and brought about big selling also to stop losses. The maximum break in values was 5¾ cents a bushel.

Reports at hand pointed to likelihood that the 1928 domestic crop of wheat in the seven principal soft wheat States will be only 46,000,000 bushels, against 129,000,000 bushels two years ago. Apparently, however, these reports had been discounted in advance.

After a day of unusually rapid price changes, the wheat market closed flurried, 3¼ cents to 4½ cents net lower, with corn 1⅝cent to 2¼ cents off; oats 1⅛ to 2⅝ cents down, and provisions varying from 15 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Severe setbacks in the price of wheat began to develop as soon as trading started, but the full violence of the storm of selling came only after monthly crop summaries from the leading experts here had been issued. The reports themselves proved to be more unfavorable even than the majority of recent buyers were looking for, but as a stimulus to still higher quotations were a complete failure, so far at least as yesterday was concerned. The average of the various estimates was for a winter wheat yield of 472,000,000 bushels this season, 122,000,000 bushels less than was indicated in May a year ago.

Abandoned acreage of winter wheat, according to the average of yesterday's estimates, will amount to 12,448,000 acres, leaving 35,449,000 acres for harvest against 37,972,000 acres last year.

The condition shown is 75.4, the lowest on record with three exceptions. This exhibit, together with news of dust storms prevailing in Nebraska and elsewhere yesterday threatening further crop damage, gave fresh stimulus to buying on the breaks in price. At one time, most of the day's loss was wiped out but selling again broadened out, and prices were crumbling fast as the day drew to an end.

Corn and oats turned heavy in the late trading owing to wheat weakness. Earlier, corn had risen to a new high price record for the season, and there had been considerable buying of corn against sales of wheat.

Provisions were irregular, with strength in cotton offsetting to a large extent the influence of declines in the grain market as well as in hog values.

GOD'S MINUTE

Knock and it shall be opened unto you.—Luke 11:9.

Our Father Who art in Heaven, help us to start this new day with Thee. May its first moments be laid on Thy altar, and may the dew of refreshing sleep irradiate the sacrifice. Thou hast taught us that prayer is incense; may the fragrance of our morning petition be detected in Thy holy place. The path that leads to sunset is unknown. There may be swollen streams, dangerous ravines, dense thickets, and unseen foes on Thy plan for this day. Cloud's may darken the sky which laughed at sunrise and noon on our journey may witness a severe moral struggle. We would choose to walk where they flowers bloom, the birds sing, the brook ripples, and clouds vanish into thin air. But our choice we would submit to Thine approval, for we covet Thy presence when the darkness falls. In loving, generous, and prompt obedience to Thy will may we find a new zest in our waking hours. May new vistas of beauty and new visions of service stir our hearts. May souls where our path winds be glad that we travelled their way. And when the stars shine out, invisible by day, may they beckon the best that is in us to worship at the Throne of Him Who has promised to make wise souls to shine as the stars. We proffer our petition in the Name of Him who taught us to pray. Amen!

ASK REDUCTION IN FEE CHARGED

March, 1929, was explained by Mrs. Morris, who reported on a meeting of the Urban Trustees' Association executive. At that meeting it was decided to ask the various boards to send as large a deputation as possible to interview the Hon. Peter Heenan in an attempt to have an extension made. Chairman E. B. Fowler and G. A. Gillespie, chairman of the Advisory Vocational Committee, will represent the Peterborough board.

The Federal Government has, since 1919, paid 25 percent of the cost of vocational education provided the provincial government made an equal grant. The grants were to be made for a period of ten years, which expires next March. As far as the capital cost of the school and any equipment which is bought in the ensuing few months is concerned the city will receive the grant, as the agreement will be made before that period expires, but for maintenance and salaries it will receive only this year's payments.

Mrs. Morris reported that the trustees associations had received a letter from Mr. Heenan in which he suggested that there was little use sending a deputation as the matter had been finally settled. Premier King had also stated, in reply to questions by the Hon. Mr. Manion, that warning had been given three years ago that the grants would be discontinued and that it was part of a general policy to hand back entirely to the provinces the matters reserved for the provinces by the British North America Act. The money will in future be paid to the Research Council being formed.

Premier Taschereau of Quebec is heading a deputation from Quebec which will join with the Ontario deputation in Ottawa on Thursday for the meeting with Mr. Heenan.

Some boards, continued Mrs. Morris, have had full use of the grants. Others, like Peterborough, have come in late for them, while still others are still considering the matter and will lose the money at the most critical time, when experimenting in courses, etc., is going on, and mistakes are apt to be made. In other provinces vocational education is not as far advanced as in Ontario and Quebec and the schools there will feel it more. Some provinces pay their twenty-five percent only because it is necessary to do so to get the Federal grant, and are likely to cut it down or discontinue it entirely.

Band for Inspection.

Capt. V. W. S. Herron, District Cadet Officer, will be authorized to hire the Peterborough Rangers Band for the inspection of the Public School Cadet Battalion on June 1. This is done in other places, the charge being paid out of the cadet grant, and, as the local battalion is being presented with colors at the inspection this year, Capt. Herron felt that it would be particularly advisable to have the band present. It will be suggested to him that the citizens will get a better opportunity to see the boys if they march as far as Charlotte street, headed by the band and carrying their colors.

The Supervision committee was instructed to consider rules regarding the hall in the Collegiate Institute and report to the board at the next meeting what should be done about renting it to various bodies and the type of meeting that should be allowed. This case as a result of an application from the Kiwanis Club for use of the hall for the concert part of the Produced in Canada Fair, consideration of which was postponed until after this report has been presented.

The Supervision committee was authorized to advertise for tenders for text books and let the contract, and the Property committee was given the same power with regard to coal.

The attendance report for April was as follows:

Tombstones Banned In Guelph Cemetery

GUELPH, May 1. — Guelph has taken the first step to abolish tombstones. In the new Roman Catholic cemetery to be opened soon near the Jesuit Novitiate on the Elora road, not a single memorial will be permitted. Rich and poor alike will lie beneath small tablets two and a half feet long and six inches wide. Rev. Father Wafer Doyle, S.J., who planned the cemetery, does not believe in lofty cenotaphs and costly headstones.

HAROLD F. RITCHIE ACQUIRES ENO FIRM

Canadian Buys All Shares of Century Old English Company.

The ownership of the firm of J. C. Eno, Limited, of London, England, makers of Eno's "Fruit Salt," changed hands last week.

All the Preferred and Ordinary shares were purchased by Harold F. Ritchie, of Toronto and New York. The sale to Mr. Ritchie took place on the celebration of Mr. Eno's birthday. Mr. Eno was born in 1828. One hundred years later, the business changed hands. The firm is also celebrating their diamond jubilee this year, as this is their sixtieth year in business selling Eno's "Fruit Salt" in every civilized country in the world.

This is Mr. Ritchie's twenty-first year with the firm as Sales Representative, having started in Canada, and now handles "Fruit Salts" and many other lines of Proprietaries in Canada and Newfoundland, United States, Mexico, Central America, South America, the West Indies, Australia, New Zealand, Hawaiian Islands, Philippine Islands, Pacific Islands and China, all through the Ritchie Sales Organization.

There will not be any change in the management of J. C. Eno Ltd. The Board of Directors will remain and continue the progressive policy which has given this fine old company the greatest proprietary business in existence.

The sale was brought about for family reasons. After the death of Commander Harold W. Swithenbank, who was a son-in-law of Mr. Eno, and also one of the trustees and executors of Mr. Eno's will and estate.

Surely enough, in true British fashion, Mr. Ritchie was given every consideration, due to his long years of service to the company, and when the business was to be sold, he received notice and first chance.

Mr. Ritchie states that factories will be opened in several countries, first in the United States and Australia.

The deal involved a very large sum—in fact it is one of the largest transactions ever recorded in the Proprietary Field.

Mr. Ritchie sailed on the "Aquitania" on March 21st, 1928, for England, and returned on the "Mauretania" April 27th, 1928.

SCOTCH NIGHT GREAT SUCCESS

Third of Series of International Nights at Temple Well Attended.

PROGRAM EXCELLENT.

The third of a series of National Nights that have been held at the Temple brought together a crowd that holds the record for these interesting events. It was Scotch night, and it was a real gathering of the clans for Campbells and Camerons, MacKays and McKies, McIntoshs and MacTavishes seemed to be drawn to the Temple, to say nothing of the Scotchmen from Glasgow, Aberdeen, Edinburgh and even "London" Scottish. A genial chairman in the person of the Rev. W. S. Edgar of Gilmour Memorial Church was introduced to the audience by Honorary Bandsman J. Grieves, who was responsible for the program of the evening, and in a few remarks said that he was delighted to be in the atmosphere of a Salvation Army meeting, for he well knew of the Army gatherings. "I am reminded of the early days of the Army in Glasgow when, as a boy, the red guernsey, the poke bonnet, and the tambourine had, in conjunction with my friends, a peculiar attraction for us. But I am also glad to be in a Scotch atmosphere for we are proud of our land."

The Rev. Mr. Edgar drew attention to the part played by Scotland in Empire building, mentioning many names that have become household words in reference to the Empire. He pointed out that six out of the Prime Ministers of England that had held office during his lifetime were Scotchmen; also that the Archbishops of Canterbury and York are both Scotchmen. In referring to the valiant deeds of the Scottish troops during the late war, he paid eloquent tribute to the sacrifice they had made.

The program was a feast of Scottish song and music, in which the Pipe Band, under Pipe Major J. Smith; the Caledonian Choir, led by A. Clark; Miss C. Taylor, violinist, Miss Hemphill, accompanist, and R. Hendry, humorist participated.

With other incidental items these gave a really enjoyable program. To attempt to describe each item would be a long job, but suffice that all was real good. The singing of choruses by a little group of Scotch children was an item that gave considerable pleasure to all. The exquisite violin solos by Miss C. Taylor were also greatly enjoyed. To Mr. Clark considerable credit is due for the proficiency of the choir in their part songs, notably the effects introduced in a number "A Hundred Pipers."

A humorous dialogue on the perplexities encountered by a ticket clerk was given by a party of Scotch "lassies" and gave some wholesome fun to all. Next to the playing of the Pipe Band, the Butterscotch sucker donated by Kerr Bros. of Toronto was undoubtedly a popular item.

The final of this series, an "International Night" at which items will be given by Canadian, Scotch, and English parties, including some new features, will be well worth attending on Monday, May 7th.

Amongst those who supported the chairman were Dr. Clark of the Sons of Scotland; Mr. Veitch of the Caledonian Club; Alderman R. S. Cotton and Ensign E. Green.

Are You Nervous? Sleepless?

Mrs. Ada Taylor

St. Catharines, Ont.—"I was in such a nervous and rundown state of health that I could hardly get around to do my work. I could not sleep and the least noise or excitement would completely upset me and throw me into a nervous spell. I was advised to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I was soon well and strong and have never had another spell of nervousness since.

"I always keep a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets in my medicine chest: they are the only medicine I have ever taken that would regulate the liver and relieve constipation without causing distress."—Mrs. Ada Taylor, 46 Wiley St.

HEALER DIES.

Professor R. L. Mulveney, who died suddenly in Toronto recently, was very widely known as a healer. He is shown above in the costume he wore when he toured the country as a dentist and healer. He used his Indian costume, musical programs and efforts as a ventriloquist to help his sales in Canada, the United States and the British Isles. Around his neck may be noticed a string of teeth he extracted on his tour. He carried his forceps in his belt, the same as the Indian might carry his scalping knife or dagger.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate)

FOR THURSDAY, MAY 3, 1928.

Many conflicting planetary influences are strong today, according to astrologers, who warn against impulsive action of any sort.

Under this direction of the stars the temptation to speculate may be strong, but it should be avoided.

While foresight is likely to be good under this sway it is well not to succumb to the temptation to make money rapidly.

Neptune is in a place that seems to presage increase of immense fortunes and widespread extravagance.

The seers prophesy that in this country there will be a standard of magnificence in living never before attained by any people.

Where the few have possessed great estates in the past in Europe the many will procure great holdings in this country, astrologers forecast.

From the desert vast wealth is to be gained in this century by means of new devices, the stars indicate.

This is a day when it may be easy to lose one's temper and it is especially nerve-racking for those who change their places of residence.

There is a sign inclining persons to be forgetful and to lose possessions of various sorts.

This should be a lucky day for starting ocean voyages or for investing in certain stocks, notably oil.

Women now come under a benefic direction of the stars which is stimulating and encouraging.

This is read as a lucky wedding day, making for lasting love and loyalty. Financially the outlook is not so good.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year that drains the bank account and causes some anxiety about money matters.

Children born on this day probably will have lives of constant progress, but they may be inclined to be extravagtan and self indulgent.

BRITAIN OBJECTS TO U.S. ACTIONS

Revenue Cutters Enter Island Harbors in Defiance of Agreement.

WASHINGTON, May 2.— (Canadian Press.) — The controversy between the British and United States Governments over violations by the United States prohibition enforcement probably will be carried to President portably wil lbe carried to President Coolidge.

It is rumored here that Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg has informed the Treasury Department, which is in charge of Coast Guard ships, that the British Government is not satisfied with the explanation offered of recent invasion of British ports in the West Indies by anti-smuggling ships from the United States and that the whole question will have to be referred to the President and his Cabinet.

Executive departments here will neither confirm nor deny the rumors concerning the controversy, nor will the British Embassy comment. It is known, however, that Sir Esme Howard has conveyed to Secretary Kellogg, in the usual formal manner, protests against recent incidents in the West Indies.

On March 11 the American revenue cutters Travis and Guyahoga entered the harbor of St. George, Bermuda, and remained there for three days without giving reasons, which was in contravention of the Bahamas agreement concerning movements of United States and British ships in those waters.

A similar incident a year ago had called for sharp protests from the British Embassy here. On that occasion United States ships Herriot Lane and General Greene entered Nassau Harbor and remained without giving reasons. Despite these two protests from the Embassy, the United States' revenue cutter Tiger went into St. George's Harbor on April 6 last. It signalled for permission to enter, but did not wait for permission.

The British Embassy has lodged another protest, and it is understood that Mr. Kellogg has decided to refer the whole matter to the President and Cabinet.

THE EXAMINER PICTURE PAGE

Members of the Ontario government, the judiciary, and legal profession gathered in Toronto to pay their last respects to the late Mr. Justice H. M. Mowat. Among the prominent persons were Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., F. W. Harcourt, K. C., and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, who are shown, left to right, in picture No. 1; Mr. Justice Middleton, Mr. Justice Kelly and Sir William Mullock, left to right in No. 2.

Capt. George Wilkins, an Australian and famous explorer, has made history by completing his flight over the polar regions, presumably across the North Pole. Picture No. 1 shows the Vega at Point Barrow with Wilkins and his pilot, Lieut. Eielson, the "Gipsy of the Air." No. 3, the Vega taking off from Fairbanks for Point Barrow.

Col. Lindbergh (in flying togs) is shown immediately after his arrival at Quebec, where he flew from Long Island, N.Y., to carry pneumonia serum in an effort to save the life of Floyd Bennett, who was taken ill at Murray Bay just before hopping off for Greenely Island in the rescue plane carrying spare parts for the Bremen. The serum proved to be the wrong type. Bennett, it is believed, was too far gone to have benefited in any event, as he died a short while after Lindbergh's arrival. Standing alongside Lindbergh, with the precious package of serum, is Commander Byrd who rushed to the bedside of Bennett as soon as he learned of his illness. Bennett more than once saved the life of Byrd and was to have been pilot of the latter's pending South Pole aerial expedition.

Three remarkable cures are reported from the Normal school for girls at St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, where it is said, the touch of a reliquary containing bones of the recently beatified Jesuit martyrs, suddenly cured Alice Provost, 20, of La Presentation, Que., Marie Blanche Armande Nichol, 17, of the same village, and Therese Morier, 17, of St. Mathias sur-Richelieu, Quebec, of well defined infirmities. Three doctors confirmed the cures, and the medical reports with X-ray photographs, have been taken to Rome by one of the Jesuit fathers. The above pictures show (1) Armande Nichol, who prior to the "miracle" had been deprived of the use of her left leg and foot as the result of infantile paralysis; (2) is the St. Hyacinthe Normal school, in a classroom of which the cures took place.

The Canada Steamship Lines are adding to their fleet the magnificent new S.S. Quebec, which has just been launched at their shipyards at Lauzon, opposite Quebec city. Mad. ame Taschereau christened the ship and Premier and Miss Taschereau also attended. The ship is to run on the Montreal-Quebec route, and in order that the passengers may be undisturbed will make the trip from one city to the other without any intermediary stops.

Hon. Joseph Edouard Perreault, dominion minister of colonization, mines and fisheries, is shown just before sailing, with Mrs. Perreault, for Paris on the Ile de France. Mr. Perreault went to take part in conference as representative of Quebec.

Brother and sister, these two, shown at the top, are representative of the bonnie type of British immigrant coming to Canada. Mary and David Strong arrived in Canada only the other day and declared themselves delighted with their brief experiences of this country. In the lower picture are three brothers who also seem happy in their newly-adopted land.

Chiang Kai-Shek (1) Nationalist commander-in-chief, and Feng Yu-Hsiang, (2), his ally, are advancing steadily in a concerted drive on Pekin the historic northern capital. Foreigners are leaving the district. A missionary has been reported slain. Feng has been sweeping in a northeasterly direction down the Yellow River while Kai-Shek has been advancing in a northwesterly direction.

Winter is still resisting the onslaught of spring in many parts of Ontario. This scene was taken as recently as April 21. It shows a big snowplow trying to break open a section of highway between Silver Centre and Cobalt.

For the second time in two years the Standard Bank branch at McCaul and Elm Streets, Toronto, has been robbed by armed thugs, who got away one day recently with $25,000.00 in cash and securities. The bank staff and a girl client were forced into the vault. The picture shows: 1, Manager Ralph W. Gordon; 2, the scene of the robbery, while the police were investigating inside the branch; 3, Miss Mildred Stein, a customer, who was in the bank at the time and was forced into the vault with the staff of three. BELOW, 6, is the treasury box which the gunmen kicked open and looted of $25,000 in cash and securities; 4, the ledgerkeeper, Roy L. Cartan; 5, the teller, John A. MacCallum ;7, S. A. Smith, LEFT, and E. W. Taylor, RIGHT, who were outside and heard shots fired, but did not know what the trouble was.

Hon. Mary Ellen Smith, M. P. P., of Victoria, B. C., shown at the LEFT, addressed the Ontario Women's Liberal Association, at the dinner in honor of W. E. N. Sinclair, RIGHT, elected president of the association. Mrs. Smith was recently elected president of the National Federation of Women's Liberal clubs.

Above is a photograph of the late Floyd Bennett, pilot of the relief plane which attempted to fly to the aid of the trans-Atlantic fliers marooned on Greenely Island, but who suffered a severe cold en route, and died from subsequent pneumonia. His wife, who rushed to his bedside when the news of his grave condition was heard contracted tonsilities and was confined to the hospital at Quebec. Bennett was born in the Lake George District.

Wheat Prices Drop After Opening Gains

CHICAGO, May 2. — Canadian Press. — Wheat prices turned sharply downward to-day after an opening advance. Showers in the southwest led to heavy selling here that more than counterbalanced an unexpected advance at Liverpool.

Opening 1-8 to 1½c higher, Chicago wheat soon underwent a setback of 4¾ in some cases, as compared with initial top figures. Corn sympathised with wheat's weakness, starting at 1-8c off to ¼c up and afterward showing a decided set-back. Oats were relatively firm.

Opening prices were: Wheat May, 167 5-8; July 166¼; corn, May, 109 July 112½; oats, May, 64 3-8; July 57½.

Advance At New York Tapers Off After Noon

NEW YORK, May 2 (Canadian Press)—The stock market headed upward to-day, stimulated by heavy buying of public utilities, motors, and investment railroad shares, although prices tapered off somewhat shortly after noon in sympathy with a wide selling movement in oils. A number of ordinarily obscure issues came into prominence as professional traders sought out the laggards in the list. New peaks were established by a long list of high grade issues, such as American Telephone, American Can, Southern Pacific, and Southern Railway. Radio scored an extreme gain of six points and General Motors, Graham, Paige, Electric Auto Lite, and New York Traction shares had advances of 3 to 4½ points.

The low-priced shares, responding to the rapid movement of Chicago and Alton Common, which sold as high as 18, just double its closing quotation on Monday, were in sharp demand. Minneapolis and St. Louis was turned over in round amounts, selling up to 6¾, compared with yesterday's close of 4¼. Chicago and Alton Preferred touched a new peak at 26⅝, but met heavy realizing sales and slipped back to 20, dragging the Common back from its high level. New York, Ontario, and Western was heavily accumulated in the early afternoon, rising three points to 38½. The speculative buying of oils apparently had ceased, for the moment, at least, and most of them fell back on extensive profit taking and short sales.

Mine Market Firm With Good Gains Made

TORONTO, May 2 (Canadian Press). — Despite occasional soft spots, the market on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning was firm, with Noranda and Pend Oreille conspicuously strong. Noranda at 20.10 and Pend Oreille at 19.50 were each nearly a dollar higher than yesterday. Sherritt Gordon at 6.30 and Sudbury Basin at 9.85 were also well advanced, while moderate gains were scored by Pioneer at 59, Lake Shore at 23.90, Kirkland Hunton at 21½, Dome at 10.30, and Amulet at 3.45. Among the easier issues Kirkland Lake softened two at 1.75 and Laval Quebec was a point lower at 16½.

International Utilities Leaders At Toronto

TORONTO, May 2 (Canadian Press).—International Utilities issues were the active leaders in this morning's busy session of the Toronto Stock Exchange, the 'A' stock firming 1½ at 40½, and the 'B' improving to 13½. Page Hersey was a strong spot in the generally firm list, with a three point advance at 103, and MacKay Common was one higher at 119. Nickel firmed to 90½. Massey Harris was one of the few weaker issues, losing fractionally at 42¾. In the curb market, which was exceptionally active, price changes were generally very small. British American Oil was steady at 38½, Imperial a little firmer at 65, and International Petroleum unchanged around 41⅛.

Mine Market Soft With Losses Small

The mining market has continued soft. With but one or two exceptions losses have been negligible. Buying almost measures up to actual selling and the short side of the market has lost its attraction. This would seem to indicate that stocks are under steady accumulation, especially the better ones. Such movement would presage another upward swing to the market but it would seem that an easing in the monetary situation, especially on the part of the banks, will first be necessary.

Meanwhile, it is a specialty or selective market, not altogether based on the volume of good news. An evidence of this is the Sheritt-Gordon report. The directors issued a statement setting forth the main points of the report of John Rogers, consulting geologist. He set out that his examination showed an average content of ore valued at $206,000 per vertical foot. Immediately the stick dropped. There arose the usual crop of rumors and complaints. One was that the report did not indicate the depth the ore carried to. The report did say that it had been cut at 400-ft. on the west end and that deeper drilling was being undertaken on the east end where the ore was wider and richer. There is no basis in fact to the many wild rumors going the round and mining men generally accept the report as indicating a tremendous body of ore that is going to allow for very cheap mining and which they will be able to treat at less cost than that of Flin Flon because it is a coarse ore.

Quite a spectacular gold-copper discovery has been made in the Herb Lake section of Northern Manitoba. It caused quite a rush of companies to secure an option and also a rush of prospectors to stake additional ground. Here the aeroplane came into play, as Manitoba Basin Mines, which owns its own planes, was able to beat the other companies in the race and secured control of the discovery. Manitoba Basin is a new concern organized as a holding company and has taken up several blocks of ground in vicinity of Sherritt-Gordon, at Reindeer Lake, Herb Lake, owns two aeroplanes, will establish a custom essay office at The Pas and is reported to be negotiating for an interest in a large new Red Lake operation and a couple of Newfoundland ventures.

Howey's report was a disappointment but it was expected that facts that would come out at the annual meeting would make up for this deficiency. It failed to do so. It was expected that Manager Horace Young would have considerable good news about the better values secured on the 500-ft. level. This was mentioned, that is all, and the shareholders, came away not impressed. Considerable liquidation has resulted. Howey shapes up as a low-grade mine of considerable tonnage for the present, but surface indications would leave the impression that the next couple of months' work will open richer ore that will bring the average of the whole operation up to the level where it will be commercially profitable. It is doubtful, under present conditions of power and transportation, if $7 ore can be commercially profitable in Red Lake. The fact that there is considerable new activity in the vicinity of Howey, with two or three large operations getting under way, makes the outlook for Howey in the matter of power and transportation much better.

While optimistic and constructive reports are coming out in regard Teck Hughes and Lake Shore, Wright-Hargreaves continued under liquidation. The writer has always been optimistic in regard to the outlook for the latter company despite the bearish reports. It will take the market some time to absorb the selling and get a proper stock distribution, as confidence must first be restored, yet a great many sound mining men have been taking up the stock, firm in the belief that the mine is in as good shape as it ever was. Lake Shore will jump its tonnage to 1,000 daily which should give a gross production two and a half times the present capitalisation.

Standard Royalty Shares On Market

An offering of preferred and common stock of Standard Royalties Limited in Units of 100, is being made by the Mid-Continent Bond Corporation, Toronto.

The cumulative 12 per cent. redeemable preferred stock, in units of 100 shares, is being offered at $1 per share, and the common, in units of 100 shares, at 25 cents per share.

Standard Royalties, it is stated, own royalty interests in 1,750 acres, with 117 wells, giving a daily production of approximately 35,000 barrels of oil. The company's share of this oil is said to be producing an income in excess of $9,500 monthly, being ample to meet all requirements of the company, including the monthly preferred dividends of 1 per cent.; the sinking fund which is being deposited with The Imperial Trusts Company of Canada and the fund reserved for common stock dividends, leaving a large surplus for reinvestment in new producing oil royalties.

All of the royalties owned by the company are located in the well known oil fields of Oklahoma, including Seminole, Bowlegs and Earlsboro.

Additional royalties are being purchased from time to time from the funds received from the sale of the stock and surplus accruing out of income from the company's share of Royalty Oil.

This stock is being offered as a safe investment and not as a speculation; the Preferred Shares have all the earmarks of a high class bond, as they are redeemable in fifteen years at $1.10 a share, and after the Preferred has been redeemed, the common stock will participate in the entire income of the company.

It is reported the sale of these units has been most satisfactory, due no doubt to the highly protective features incorporated into this company's charter and the fact that it is a purely Canadian Company and its directors are well known Canadian business men.

Dome Mine Makes Better Showing In 1927

Special from the Financial Post Syndicate.

Dome's horizon of activity seems to move along with the calendar.

President Jules Bache of Dome Mines told shareholders at the annual meeting that the Dome property was good for at least two years more. He recalled that he told shareholders the same thing two years ago and said that he hopes to be able to tell them the same thing two years hence. The past year was better than the previous one for Dome, and that was about all that could be said. Dome dividend is $1.00 per share per year and the company in the last couple of years has earned almost double the amount needed for such a distribution before making substantial depletion and depreciation allowances. Dome has never made a serious effort to find a new mine.

It has optioned a number of properties and carried out a certain amount of work before dropping the options. It is evident that the management wants to get a "grass root" proposition that will show up as a mine quickly and failing the discovery of such a group to date, the best that can be said of the exploratory effort is that the funds so expended have been wasted. Engineers are of the opinion that Dome will take the chance of, gambling sufficient funds on a operation to really test it out.

The same thing was said of Nipissing for many years but a couple of years ago, it launched two real efforts, one in South Lorrain and the other in Mountbray Township, Que. These two ventures are reviewed in the annual report just released. The Robb Mountbray group opened out three lenses of ore and when this was sufficiently developed to justify a larger operation, Nipissing decided to let the shareholders shoulder the burden. It rearranged financing so that Nipissing got all its money together with a substantial block of stock and sufficient new funds to continue the development. The outlook for the property is quite excellent.

The south Lorrain property has proved a teaser. Just sufficient silver has been secured to keep the operation driving ahead, in the hope that at any moment a typical Lorrain high grade shoot might be encountered. Silver produced from this ground to date has been hardly sufficient to care for the expense involved.

Net income of Nipissing on all its operations was $347,059 or more than double that of the previous year. The increase was not due so much to increased profits from the Cobalt property as to lessened costs due to curtailed exploratory effort. The surplus, on the other hand declined $1,300,000 to $3,685,987, and during the year $450,000 was distributed in dividends. Ore reserves are down 109,000 ounces of silver to 685,000.

Things are looking better at Wright Hargreaves. Long shots of $12 ore have been opened up and as the company has completed a great amount of development work, it is that so much low grade will be sent through the mill. This should result in a better grading than last year, when the average content of the ore was around $9. Wright Hargreaves is working into a position similar to Lake Shore's and Teck Hughes, where the mine will open development period and the opening up of new levels, dilution of ore is bound to occur and at the same time this diluted ore must be got out of the way quickly. There is no time to mix it with better grade ore to hold up the average. This is the story of the poor showing of this operation last year.

There is a great deal of gossip on the street in regard to Lake Shore and Teck Hughes and what these stocks are going to do on the market some time this year. This optimistic gossip is based on the fact that Lake Shore will increase production of 1000 tons daily whereas the production at Teck Hughes has already placed it second to Hollinger in the producers. The talk is that there should be substantial increases in the dividends of both companies this year.

Barry Hollinger's new ore is opening well below the 1000 ft. level; Sudbury Basin has found ore in a new drill hole a quarter mile west of the previous holes. Bidgood is reported to have cut ore on the 600 ft. level. These are some of the latest reports.

GRANT'S WORK IS REVIEWED

because he has spoken against Confederation." This viewpoint was so novel that a puzzled look was the only response. 'Tell him,' I replied, 'that I am not at all offended, and that he has too much good sense to deny me the freedom which he himself takes.'"

Principal Grant's early work for Queen's was emphasized. In his splendid strength he toiled gathering money here and there, "sitting up in a train that the college might not be burdened with the cost of a sleeping train." His first effort increased the revenue by $7,500 a year. Twice afterwards he carried through endowment campaigns, "and," added the speaker, "even as he wore himself out in this way he was doing more than gathering money. Fathers and mothers in the pews thought that besides helping him with their substance ,they would like to send their sons to Queen's to be under so fine an influence, and the number of undergraduates rapidly grew."

Principal Grant, in the academic sense, did three great things. He introduced options in the Arts courses, instituted the Faculty of Applied Science and brought back to the University the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Kingston; in a word he created the university as distinct from the college. He laid down the lines of policy which his successors have but continued. He was indeed a great Canadian, a great Imperialist, a great man.

The speaker recalled some of his special qualities. (1) He was a man, a man's man. His vitality put something of itself into all who met him. (2) He had imagination. He saw the greater things possible. He dreamed of a great liberality unloosed by a great cause. The wider view was always his. His dreams came true "even though he was not permitted to take his place in this stately hall (Grant Hall)." He was tolerant and liberal ,he saw the viewpoint of the other man and to picture a higher stage in which they might yet be comrades of the intellect. He was in almost every field in advance of his time. This was so in religious scholarship; had he not been hospitable to new ideas, Queen's had not become what it is to-day. (3) He had a genius for friendship. He was very human, with laughter in his eyes and with humour in his heart, and with a genuine interest in his kind. (4) He was quite selfless. He was a great figure of his time. He could have gone to any sphere. He could have entered politics in Ontario as Minister of Education, and one can well understand that to put so congenial an opportunity behind his back was no small sacrifice. But Queen's was his life; if Queen's prospered nothing else mattered. He was generous beyond his means and Queen's shared no small proportion of his salary. (5) He was deeply religious. Grant's busy life never meant any heedlessness in the care of his own soul, but his outlook was national rather than individual. Grant was a prophet, an Amos, not a Jeremiah. Even if he had known nothing of the grace of God, courage would always have been one of his characteristics. What happened to him personally was never a main consideration. His aim was the making of a better citizenship, a land that in character would match its physical greatness. "His life and faith have been such that his name endures as a saving element for the generations that are to follow," concluded Dr. Taylor. "Fifty years since Grant began his work here. Yes, and at the hundredth anniversary our successors will be singing the same praise and trying in the same inadequate way to measure that power."

COL. JOHNSTON ASSUMES OFFICE

Takes Over Keys of County Jail From Henderson Nesbitt.

VETERAN RETIRES.

H. Nesbitt, gaoler a the Peterborough jail for over half a century, relinquished the keys of office yesterday to Lt.-Col. T. Dalton Johnston, former M.P.P. for East Peterborough. Col. Johnston's appointment was announced some days ago by Sheriff F. J. A. Hall.

Mr. Nesbitt has wished to retire for some two years and it was only at a special session of the county council held this spring that he was granted a retiring allowance.

Many notable prisoners have passed through Mr. Nesbitt's hands during that time. He has held men in the death cells waiting to be hanged. He is a veteran of the Fenian Raids, having served under the command of Captain Edwin Poole with the Peterborough Rifle Company.

IN POLICE COURT

A rather heavy docket was presented to Magistrate Langley when police court opened this morning. One man thanked His Worship for sentencing him to the Ontario Reformatory and the reply was "Don't mention it."

The first man called pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $10 and $4.50 costs. Then came John Victor, who was charged with being intoxicated while driving a car. Through his lawyer, J. A. O'Brien, he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to one week in the common jail with hard labor. Mr. O'Brien asked that the minimum sentence be imposed as the man had a lot of work to do and it was his first offence. He even urged that a fine be imposed.

His Worship: "No one has successfully urged that with me yet."

Mr. O'Brien: "I appreciate that, but you even have the power to suspend sentence."

His Worship: "I do not think the government ever meant that view to be taken in regards to this charge."

Chief Newhall said it was the prisoner's first offence and that he was arrested late last night on George street. A quantity of Government control liquor was found in the car.

"Seven days in the common jail with hard labor," was the court command.

Harold Sanderson, who gave his age as 16 years, nearly 17, and who has been let out on suspended sentence twice, pleaded guilty to stealing a small electric motor, the property of the Empire Milking Company, and was sentenced to the Ontario Reformatory for a period of three months with an indeterminate term to follow thereafter, in all not to exceed one year.

A. Goselin, an American citizen, but who has previously been convicted in Winnipeg, on a theft charge and here for vagrancy, provided the only comedy of the session. He was arraigned on two charges, one of stealing a motor generator, the property of C. H. Eastwood, Smith township, and the other of receiving what he knew to be stolen property. He elected to be tried by His Worship and pleaded guilty to both charges. Chief Newhall told of the prisoner's previous convictions.

G. W. Hatton, K.C., addressed His Worship on behalf of the Crown and asked that the man receive a sentence. 'He had a bunch of keys which no person is allowed to carry and he evidently is a bad citizen and we do not want him in this city," said the Crown Attorney.

His Worship immediately passed sentence, sending the prisoner to the Ontario Reformatory for one year with an indeterminate sentence thereafter, not to exceed in all two years less one day.

"Much obliged," said the prisoner.

"Don't mention it," replied the bench.

"A fine looking man like you," continued Magistrate Langley, "ought to be able to find honest work. The next time you come before me it will be a penitentiary term you will get."

"I don't believe in work," replied the prisoner as he was led from the court room by a constable.

T. R. McClennan failed to appear on a charge of not sending his child to school, but his wife was there with the boy, who is about ten years old. James Abraham withdrew the charge against Mr. McClennan, but His Worship gave the boy a severe talking to and pointed out the results that would follow if he did not attend school.

Under the act the parent, or guardian is responsible for his child's attendance at school and if he or she fails to have the child attend school the school attendance officer may bring the offender to court, where if found guilty the minimum sentence is $5.00 and the maximum $20.

Too Many Lawyers, Says Loewenstein, In Toronto To Settle Share Dispute

TORONTO, May 2 (Canadian Press). — Captain Alfred Loewenstein, Belgian capitalist, reached Toronto from Montreal with a party of eight to-day, by private car. He planned to leave for New York late this afternoon in the big airplane he has just purchased in the United States, which was to be flown from Montreal to-day in time to take the party back to New York.

In the few hours that he was here, Capt. Loewenstein held a series of interviews with officials of the Brazilian Traction, Light, and Power Company in an endeavor to reach a settlement of the grievances of the Belgian shareholders in Rio Janeiro tramways, which are now part of the Brazilian organization, with head offices in Toronto. On his arrival here, the Belgian millionaire threatened that if he had to make a protracted stay in trying to effect an agreement "some one would suffer." He complained there were "too many lawyers" in Canada.

RILEY AND HICKEY YEAR IN BUSINESS

Young Men Have Made Good Start in Clothing Trade.

Ed. Riley and Bud Hickey passed the first mile-post on their path of business on Tuesday, May 1. It marked the completion of the initial year of their partnership. They started their business with considerable confidence, with a good connection both in the trade and among the people of this city and district, and gradually realized that their confidence was well founded. They set high standards of value and service, received every visitor with courtesy, and carried out their promises to the fullest possible extent. On that foundation and in the cheery, genial atmosphere of their attractive shop, they have securely established their business within their first twelve months of endeavour; and they have every expectation of an increased volume in their second year as a direct result of their efforts and the satisfaction which they already have to their credit.

For the young business men it has been a busy, successful year. They appreciate the patronage which they have obtained from the city and district and acknowledge it with promises of any possible improvement in quality, price and service. The name of Riley and Hickey is already regarded throughout this community as a hall mark of smart clothing for men, a reputation which the young proprietors will endeavor to enhance during their second year.

Scout News and Notices

6TH PETERBOROUGH TROOP

The Sixth Peterborough Troop's meeting was held on Monday evening. The meeting opened with flag break and inspection. The Scoutmaster then gave a short lecture on fire prevention. He pointed out that the Boy Scouts should always be on the alert for the prevention of forest fires. Camp fires should always be put out three times according to Boy Scouts' rules.

Instruction period was then held for half an hour. At the completion of this period several lively games were played. In a relay message the Fox patrol finished first, having the correct message in record time. The patrol competition terminated with the Chickadees finishing in first place. The Foxes were a close second with the Beavers taking third place. A great deal of interest has been taken in this patrol competition and the winners worked hard to obtain first place, as may be shown by the fact that but eight points separated the first and third patrols.

Council fire then followed during which a well acted pantomime was put on by the Foxes. The boys then organized two softball teams, piloted by Scouts G. Duffus and H. Gainey. A few songs then were sung, ending with God Save the King.

The troop was then dismissed after Scout Silence and the lowering of the flag.

The Sixth Peterborough Troop extends a challenge to any of the other Boy Scout troops in the city to a game of softball.

POVERTY SOCIAL GREAT SUCCESS

St. Paul's Young People Enjoy Meeting—Come in Old Clothes.

PROGRAM SUITABLE.

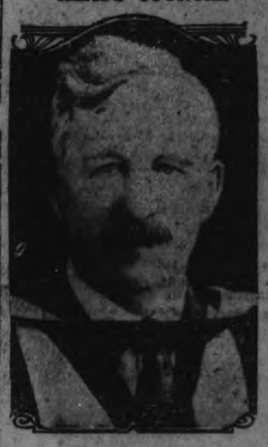
St. Paul's Y.P.S. held a very novel social on Monday evening in the form of a "poverty social," which was voted by all to have been a huge success. All the guests were dressed in worn-out "glad rags," and the president was fined for wearing a brilliant tie.

The evening commenced with the "Hobo's March," during which the mistress of ceremonies gave them a very strict inspection as to the quality of their clothing. This was followed by a game of dusty miller. Next on the program was the appearance of an amateur Houdini, who guaranteed to guess any word which the crowd could concentrate on. This proved to be a puzzler for most for a few minutes, then some solved the mystery. Following this a varied program of games and contests was carried out, community singing was indulged in, and then came a real hobo's lunch of hard tack and coffee.

During the course of the evening the "Agony Quartette" persecuted a very attentive audience with many selections.

Announcement was made that next week's meeting would be addressed by Mr. Cutting of the staff of the "Farm and Dairy" of this city.

HEADS COUNCIL.



Dr. Henry Marshall Tory, D. S. C., LL. D., F. R. S. C., president of the University of Alberta since its inception in 1908, has decided to retire from that position and to accept the position of president of the National Research Council of Canada, a position which he has held in an honorary capacity since October, 1923. The appointment will become effective on June 1 next and is in accordance with the expansion of the National Research Council, announcement of which was made by the minister of trade and commerce during the present session and in connection with which the initial sum of $750,000 capital outlay for the erection of national laboratories is to be spent this year.

1839 Locomotives Back In Nova Scotia

MONTREAL, May 2. — Back to the scene of their original labors, where they were almost the first "puffing billies" used in Canada, two old locomotives, the "Samson" and the "Albion," reached Montreal last night over the Canadian National Railways en route to Nova Scotia. The locomotives were the property of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

The railway on which they operated between the Albion mines near Stellarton and the loading ground on East River, Pictou Harbor, was opened in 1939. The company imported the locomotives from England, and used them in hauling coal, these being the last engines used on this railway. The company finally disposed of its mines and all of its properties, tore up the tracks and sold the rolling stock.

When the famous Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Exhibition was over, the company gave them to Nova Scotia, and the formal presentation of the engines to the province will take place on June 21. The locomotives have been overhauled and are in splendid condition, though naturally no attempt has been made to make them in condition for operation under steam.

Old Agreement Shows How Farmers Used To Pledge Milk To Factories

The season has again come when farmers are deciding what they will do with the produce of their dairys during the next six or seven months.

This decision is an annual affair and has been so for over half a century with the farmers of this locality as the following interesting agreement will show whereby the pioneers of this community pledged themselves to furnish the produce of the number of cows following their respective names.

Brighton, October 9th. 1873.

We, the undersigned inhabitants of Brighton Township and vicinity hereby agree and bind ourselves to furnish to the Directors of the Codrington Cheese Company the milk of the number of cows set opposite our respective names for the term of ten years from the first day, May 1874, according to the terms of agreement between the Maker and Directors.

OBITUARY

ELIZA JANE McCOY.

BONARLAW, May 2. — The death occurred this morning of Eliza Jane McCoy, at the home of John Downard, Marmora Township. Deceased was 72 years of age, and had suffered a stroke on Saturday. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon to Zion Church.

John Edwards

KEENE, May 2.—The funeral of the late John Edwards, Sr., took place on Thursday afternoon, April 19, from the United Church, Keene, the Rev. John Archibald, of Keene, and the Rev. Ernest Honey of Welcome officiating. A private service was held at the home of his son, David, previous. Interment was made in Pine Grove Cemetery, Keene.

Mr. Edwards was in his 89th year and had been in poor health for some time but had been quite active until a week previous to his death. He was born in Otonabee in the year 1839, and had lived there all his life. Mrs. Edwards predeceased him about seventeen months ago. They celebrated their golden wedding a few years ago. Mr. Edwards had always been a fine church worker, holding offices in the former Methodist Church and on the occasion of the Union, of the two churches, in Keene, was made a honorary elder.

There are left to mourn his loss, one son, David, of Keene, and four daughters: Mrs. Andrew Brown and Mrs. Edward Wright of Peterborough and Mrs. William McNevan and Mrs. Charles Edwards of Keene. A daughter, Mrs. Joseph Taylor, died eight years ago.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Amos Edwards, Archie Kempt, David Tucker and Gordon Taylor, all of Keene.

MRS. BEN HILL.

The citizens of Boissevain and district were shocked on Monday morning when they learned that Mrs. Ben Hill had passed away during the night. For seventeen years Mrs. Hill had been afflicted with diabetes, but it was not thought that her condition was serious. As President of St. Paul's Ladies' Auxiliary she presided at their meeting on Thursday last. On Friday she was also doing church duties and was down town, and apparently was in her usual health. On Friday evening it was found necessary to call in medical attention and on Saturday Mrs. Hill became coma and never came out of it, passing away early Monday morning. Mrs. Hill has at all times been a very active church worker; for a number of years was secretary of the Ladies Aid of the Methodist church and this year was elected to the position of president of St. Paul's United Church Ladies' Aid. Mrs. Hill was also an active worker in the I.O.D.E., of which Society she was vice-president at the time of her demise. Previously to being appointed to the position Mrs. Hill for a number of years held the position of Secretary in the Order. As a citizen of our town she was highly respected by all. At all times Mrs. Hill had a kind and sypathetic disposition and could always find something nice to say about everybody.

The deceased was born at Peterborough, Ontario, in 1865 and came to Boissevain with her husband in 1906. She had six children, five of whom are still living, Charlie having given up his life in the great war.

Besides a loving and devoted husband the following children are bereaved: Rixon of Virden, Man.; Mrs. O'Neil of Canwood, Sask.; Mrs. Keyes of Killarney; Mrs. J. L. Todd of Pasadena, California, and Mrs. H. McCausland of Fairburn; also one brother, C. J. Baugley of Collingwood, Ontario. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved ones.—Boissevan Manitoba Recorder.

MRS. ELIZABETH KINGSTON.

STIRLING, May 2. — Mrs. Elizabeth Kingston, widow of the late Charles Kingston, who died several years ago, suffered a stroke on Saturday from which she never rallied, passing away on Monday, April 30, at the age of 79.

The deceased had been twice married, her first husband being Mr. C. Jones of Thurlow township; to this union were born two daughters, Mrs. Egbert Sills of Foxboro and Mrs. John L. Ashley of Picton.

The funeral was held in St. Paul's United Church on Tuesday at 1.30 p.m., Rev. C. W. Barrett officiating.

WEDDING BELLS

BLAIR—BOYCE

WARKWORTH, May 2. — A very pretty wedding was solemnized at 1 o'clock on Saturday at the home of Mrs. John H. Boyce, when her youngest daughter, Pearl, became the bride of Ernest W. J. Blair, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Blair of Oshawa.

The Rev. W. S. Boyce of Brighton, uncle of the bride, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. George Boyce of Napanee, looked very charming in a gown of white georgette with crystal trimmings, and wore a wreath of orange blossoms which her mother wore when she was married, and carried a shower bouquet of ophelia roses with pink and white carnations and lily of the valley.

Miss Nina Boyce, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of ashes of roses georgette, and carried a bouquet of butterfly roses. Mr. George Haines of Oshawa was best man.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where a sumptuous dinner was served. The dining room decorations were carried out in pink and white with table decorations of daffodils which presented a pleasing effect.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes by motor for Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in a navy flat crepe dress with gold trimmings, plaid tweed coat and hat and shoes to match. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Blair will reside in Oshawa.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Blair, and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Gay of Oshawa. Miss Rosa Baldwin, Napanee; Miss Clara L. Ewing, Toronto; Mrs. W. S. Boyce and Miss Lillian Boyce, Brighton.

MAHOOD—McKENNA.

OMEMEE, May 2. — On the evening of April 18, a quiet wedding was solemnized by the Rev. Lawrence Sikey, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McKenna 104 Lindsay avenue, Toronto, when their only daughter, Jessie Louise, was united in marriage to Robert Roy Mahood, of Toronto, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mahood of Reaboro.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a period gown of flowered blue georgette and carried a bouquet of butterfly roses and sweet peas.

Mrs. Lewis Adams attended the bride as matron of honor, and Mr. Lewis Adams assisted the groom.

After a quiet reception, Mr. and Mrs. Mahood left to spend a short honeymoon with the groom's parents, the bride travelling in a grey ensemble with hat and shoes to match. They will reside in South Parkdale, Toronto.

to agree. He was George A. Mouncey, agent, Alnwick. Mouncey has an overseas record and was one of the two returned men to sit on the jury. When the case had been finally dismissed he shook hands with Sir Arthur Currie.

The verdict was given amid a deathlike stillness. People through the court anxious to hear the final words of one of the greatest cases ever tried in the civil courts of Canada. Even the taller spectators stood on tip toes and craned their necks to see and hear everything that was taking place in the little area just in front of the bench. On the benches in the rear people stood two deep, keeping their balance by a miracle as they listened with bated breaths to the words spoken from the seat of justice.

The Lindsay cream truck made its rounds on Thursday for the first time this season. They are buying both eggs and cream this year.

Car Upsets.

On Sunday a touring car driven by a gentleman who was just learning to drive, took a nosedive into the deep ditch on the north side of the road in front of William Whitfield's farm. The car was going slowly at the time, so very little damage was done. Help was sent for and by means of block and tackle the car was hauled back to level ground.

Literary Society.

A novel and delightful time was spent on Friday evening in the basement of Springville Church by the members and friends of the Springville-Fairmount Literary Society. This being the social event of the month, the early hours of the evening were spent in games and conversation, after which a conundrum tea was served. This feature provided much merriment, and many surprises for all. Those who wrestled with their perplexing menu cards before ordering what appeared to be an appetizing lunch, were sometimes disappointed when they were served with a toothpick and butter as a result of ordering "a chip off the old block" and "An unruly sheep." The menu contained many desirablee dishes, such as baked beans, potato salad, doughnuts, sandwiches, cake, pie, coffee etc. but the conundrums were baffling, and to err on the safe side, many found it necessary to order the whole luncheon, which cost just twenty-six cents.

As the busy season for farmers is at hand, there will be no meeting next week, but from time to time during the summer months meetings will be held which will prove of educational and sport value.

The first of a series of community dances in aid of the band fund was held last night in the Armouries by the Peterborough Rangers Band. About three hundred people attended during the evening, enjoying round dances on the main floor of the Armouries to music by members of the band, and square dancing in the band room to the strains of a piano and a violin. The wives of the bandsmen sold refreshments at two booths at the east end of the hall. The regular parade of the regiment was curtailed to enable Col. Hall and his officers and men to take part in the dance, while Major Dodds and officers and men of No. 3 Company, 4th Battalion, C.M.G.C., attended in uniform. Officers of other local corps were also present.

An interesting event designed in honor of a native of this city, who spent much of his early life here, and has several brothers and sisters in Peterborough, took place recently in Welland, when W. J. Hickey, first president of the Welland Builders' Exchange, was guest of honor at a banquet held at the Hotel Dexter, under the auspices of the Exchange, and attended by a gathering representative of the varied business and professional as well as active interest of the city Mr. Hickey, who has retired from business, and was unable to be present in person owing to illness, was made the recipient of a beautiful solid silver tea service in token of the appreciation of the integrity and his self sacrifice on behalf of his fellows, by not only the Builders' Exchange, but also by representative Welland. The banquet was featured by addresses of felicitation from the heads of many phases of life in the community, including Mayor Anderson who spoke of Mr. Hickey as his own personal friend, and gave one striking instance of the reputation for sterling honesty and integrity sustained in the community by the guest of honor when, some years ago, architects from Hamilton, stated that an architect's inspection of a certain building would be unnecessary, because Mr. Hickey was to be the contractor. Other addresses in a similar vein were made by Alderman G. C. Scott, A. S. Wilkinson, president of the Board of Trade with which Mr. Hickey was actively identified, Frank Springer, chairman of the Public School Board, and David Ross, former chairman of the board, Jas. Atherton, of the Atherton Woodwork Company, Russell Scott, representing the Boy Scouts, who said that Mr. Hickey's life and career exemplified beyond cavil the fact that a man can succeed financially and every other way, and remain clean, upright, and without the sordid attributes often charged to business success. John Young, representing the Rotary Club, A. B. McLean, chairman of the High School Board, Eyre Davis of the Welland branch of the Navy league, City Engineer Coulson and H. J. Foster, of the Welland Evening Tribune. J. H. Gardner and J. Diffin, both competitors in busines of the guest of honor added their meed of praise, the former saying: "I am Mr. Hickey's keenest competitor, but he has never refused to give me a helping hand." Mr. Hickey, who lived for some years in Orillia, after leaving Peterborough, went to Welland nineteen years ago. Among the structures which he has left to posterity there are the Ross school, said to be one of the finest buildings in the district, the west side fire hall, the Temple building and the annex to the Presbyterian church. He also did a great deal of work in concrete sidewalks, and the construction of residences.

CHOOSING GOOD WORDS

We are so apt to consider disease as a definite thing which attacks us unaware, and to which attacks we are always subject!

Some of those words most common in our language are "ailment," "attack," "seizure," "infection," "sickness," "complaint," "disorder," and such words calling up word pictures of certain unpleasant conditions which we identify by these words describing disease.

Our directed thinking is done by a series of pictures in the mind, brought out by words with which we are familiar. Speech is a series of emotional or imitative sounds which express pain, fear, anger, love, etc.

Another kind of thinking is that which we do in our dreams, whether during sleep, or in what may be called "day-dreaming."

Therefore, when we think of disease when we are talking or writing, our minds jump from one word picture to another. When we sit and meditate we imagine certain conditions with which we have been familiar. Such imaginative and emotional thinking makes us live over again experiences of either pleasure or pain.

The memory aspect of the mind can only think with whatever material it has been given through conscious thinking. Thus we learn to think of disease as a certain thing we remember under the name of "apoplexy," "fever," "tonsillitis," "tuberculosis," etc. In this way we form the habit of classifying diseased states, and the more we talk and write about "attacks," "strokes," and the like, the clearer our mental pictures of these unpleasant conditions become, and which grow into vicious monsters always waiting just around the corner.

As the sum total of our mental powers depends so largely upon our thinking in word pictures, is it not logical then to be careful in our selection of GOOD words with which to direct the process of the mind into wholesome mental "movies?" Is it not wise to turn from images of pain and tragedy to those of health and joy, and in this simple way build up a wealth of good mental pictures which are not only pleasant to contemplate, but have the magic power to grow into super-pictures by attracting other thoughts of like nature?

The physician has the most difficulty with the patient who uses the largest vocabulary in describing his symptoms. If this kind of patient can be taught to avoid words and thoughts of sickness, and be just as loquacious in the use of such words as "vigorous," "well," "hardy," "strong," etc., he is already on the road to health, and the same mental power he used in describing and looking for disease is then used in an earnest search for good health.

The lesson in this article is this: LEARN TO THINK IN GOOD WORD PICTURES, AND BE DILIGENT IN YOUR QUEST FOR ALL KNOWLEDGE WHICH WILL LEAD TO LIVING A HEALTHFUL LIFE! You will then have no time nor inclination to think in terms of disease, and such an expression as, "I feel ill" will soon give way to "I'm feeling FINE today!"

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. P. O. J. asks: "What foods cause diabetes?"

Answer: There are no particular foods which in themselves cause diabetes, which is a disorder of metabolism. In curing diabetes, it is advisable to eliminate starches and sugars for some time, but this is also true in the treatment in most disorders. The sugar appearing in the urine is glycogen from the tissues, and does not come directly from the sugar you eat. Special articles for the cure of diabetes will be sent to you upon request if you will send a large, self-addressed stamped envelope.

Question: Mrs. Hal K. asks: "Will you please tell me the proper diet for a child two and one half years old? He does not seem to be ill, but has rough red spots on his cheeks at times, and is usually cross and irritable after waking from his afternoon nap."

Answer: Try giving him four feedings of milk a day, using eight or ten ounces of milk at each feeding. At the second, third and fourth feedings give him a generous dish of minced spinach, carrots, string-beans, summer squash or celery. It is a good plan to use also one of the vegetables raw along with the cooked one.

Question: M. K. L. writes: "I have been reading your health and diet advice and am very much interested. Will you please tell me why the upper lip is swollen every morning?"

Answer: Have your teeth examined. Perhaps you are suffering from pyorrhea or have some abscessed teeth which are poisoning your lip during the night.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This season trimming may be placed at the back or the front of frocks. Both arrangements are employed by Patou of Paris. The black satin crepe frock has pleated ruffles and a beige crepe yolk at the back, while the figured chiffon frock with front trimming has gathered ruffles.

Weary of the conventional sort of entertainments, a woman I know gave a crazy sort of party the other evening with dessert served first and appetizers last. That wasn't entirely original, but she carried out the idea by having the guests enter by the back cellar entrance and requested the ladies beforehand to arrive with their frocks on backward. After the dinner they danced—or tried to—to the music of music of a piano player with the music set to run backward and, by way of diversion, watched some amateur motion pictures in which they had all appeared. These, too, were run off backward. Names were written backward on the place cards. It was really most ridiculous.

The surprising thing, however, was that evening gowns worn backward didn't look so odd as we had expected. In fact, one woman who wore a new frock copied from one of the latest models from Jenny had trouble in making any one believe that her frock was on the wrong way. The only odd thing about it was that it drew a little at the shoulders. But it was one of those new frocks with ruffles arranged at the back, as we have been used to seeing them arranged at the front, and a moderate V neckline with a narrow ribbon looped at the point of the V—all of which made a perfectly good front arrangement.

Plenty of the new frocks when worn as they were meant to be worn really look as if they are on backward. We have grown used within the past five or six years to having the back of our skirts left flat and plain with any drapery, godets, flounces or ruffles arranged at the front. And this tendency still persists in some of the new things. On the other hand, many of the French dressmakers are making experiments with frocks showing fullness of one sort or another at the back. Some of these are spoken of as the 1880 revival—and there are even bustles to carry out the picture.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE MOST IMPORTANT THING

I do not think that Mr. Watt
Thought out an engine on the spot,
Or even Mr. Stephenson,
Like that, an engine that would run.
I guess they studied quite a bit
Before the right idea they hit.
And had a lot to do and learn
Before the wheels began to turn.

Come down today and see the mill;
You want to come, I hope you will.
And then I hope you do not miss
A lot of lessons such as this.
Yes, sonny, there is one mistake
I wouldn't like to see you make;
Don't think the biggest wheel, my son,
Is always the important one.

For there is many a little wheel,
Perhaps that bigger ones conceal,
That always has to do its part
Before the bigger wheel can start.
For I don't know a wheel, or man,
That isn't part of all the plan,
A single task there is to do
That isn't most important, too.

The boy who brings my morning mail
May fool along the way, and fail,
Or pass a hundred bigger chaps.
And help me more than them perhaps,
His promptness many a time, no doubt,
Has straightened many a matter out.
If to our task our best we bring—
Well, that's the most important thing.

Insect-killed timber dries rapidly and adds seriously to the fire hazard. Fire-damaged timber forms a favorite breeding ground for certain species of injurious forest insects and thus favors their rapid multiplication. Fires, insects, and fungi are taking part in the destruction of Canada's forests; foresters, forest entomologists, and forest pathologists are co-operating in their defence.

Men and women from the United Kingdom are always pleasantly surprised, when visiting Canada, to find in Red Rose Orange Pekoe a tea which the best teas in the Old Country cannot surpass. They prefer Red Rose Orange Pekoe because it is a blend of the finest teas grown—put up and packed under the supervision of men trained in the London tea markets.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE SYMPATHIZE WITH OTHERS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Some writers tell us that man is by nature selfish, that he wants all he can get for himself, that life is a war of all against all, each man for himself and the devil take the hindmost.

Man is also capable of altruism, self-sacrifice, and genuine sympathy. We all get a lot of satisfaction in being kind and courteous, in helping another person even when it costs us something. We do sympathize with others.

There are four types of sympathy. The first three in the list are natural enough. They are born in us as part of our physical and psychic inheritance. The last type, rational sympathy, is acquired through training and education.

1. Physical sympathy is unconscious for the most part and almost wholly mechanical. It is illustrated in the fact that when a speaker coughs or clears his throat every one in the audience feels a peculiar reaction in his own throat and will cough sympathetically. Yawning when other yawn, smiling when others smile are further examples of physical sympathy.

2. Biological sympathy is the fellow-feeling of kinship for those of our own flesh and blood. Family and racial ties create a special attitude of sympathy that is inherently strong.

3. Psychological or emotional sympathy is illustrated in the desire to feed a hungry child. The salesman uses this type of sympathy when he tells jokes and otherwise transfers his optimistic mood to his prospective customer.

4. Rational sympathy is a highly developed type of understanding based on reasoning and a sense of justice and fair play. We sympathize with people on this basis even when we despise their views or hate them personally. One need not get excited to exercise rational sympathy. It is an enlightened attitude which enables us to combat race prejudice, party prejudice, religious prejudice and every other type of narrow provincialism in behalf of justice and a common brotherhood.

The forests of Canada form the most important factor in equalising stream-flow and therefore have immense value in relation to power development. The basic requirement in water-power development is continuity and equality of stream-flow. Flood and low-water extremes not only add to the expense of installation, but greatly increase the cost of operation.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE FIVE HILLS.

"Have you had your supper?" growled the Bob Cat to the Fox one evening.

"Supper!" snarled the Fox. "Don't talk to me about supper! I haven't even eaten breakfast yet!"

"Neither have I!" whined another voice over in the bushes near the den of the Fox, to which the Bob Cat had come on a visit.

"What's that? Is it Uncle Wiggily?" whispered the Fox, with a hungry look around his mouth.

"No, worse luck! I wish Uncle Wiggily would come along, though!" went on the whining voice, and the Woozie Wolf slunk out of the bushes. "Have you anything to eat?" asked the Wolf.

"No!" growled the Fox and the Bob Cat, and the three hungry bad chaps stood looking at one another until, all of a sudden, out of the bushes popped the Black Bear and the Skillery Scallery Alligator with the double-jointed tail.

"Did you bring anything to eat?" snarled the Bob Cat.

"No, but I can tell you where Uncle Wiggily is, for I heard you talking about him," said the Black Bear. "He is down by his bungalow making a garden, and to keep the animal children out of it he gave them a puzzle to do—a puzzle to guess the names of four plants in pots."

"Did the children guess the puzzle?" asked the Fox.

"Some did," growled the Bear. "The names of the flowers were sort of twisted, or jumbled, you see. But I was hiding in the bushes near by, and I easily guessed them. One was ROSE, another was TULIP, the third was PANSY and the fourth was DAISY."

"It's a pity you didn't bring Uncle Wiggily with you when you came away," said the Wolf. "We're hungry we'd like to eat him!"

"So would I," agreed the Black Bear. "But Uncle Wiggily is smart. If I had jumped out of the bushes to grab him he would have hopped into his bungalow, locked the door and then he would have telephoned for the Police Dog to arrest me. If we catch Uncle Wiggily it must be by a trick."

"Then I know the very trick to play on him!" howled the Bob Cat.

"What kind of a trick?" the Wolf asked.

"Listen!" whispered the Bob Cat. "Back there," and he pointed with one paw, "back there are five little hills. Now four of us can sneak off and hide behind four of the hills. One of us can go down to Uncle Wiggily's bungalow and tell him to come up here to see the beautiful sunset. When that rabbit gets here we'll jump out from behind the hills and grab him. There are five hills—one for each of us."

"Yes, but who will go down and get Uncle Wiggily to come up here to look at the beautiful sunset?" asked the Black Bear.

"You shall go," said the Fox. "You can roll in the white dust of the road until you look like Mr. Whitewash, the Polar Bear, with whom Uncle Wiggily is friendly. He'll come with you if he thinks you are Mr. Whitewash. You lead him to the five hills and we'll be hiding there."

"All right," agreed the Black Bear. So he made himself white by rolling in the dust and then he shuffled down to Uncle Wiggily's bungalow.

"Hello, Unkie Wig!" growled the Black Bear, pretending to be cute and friendly. "Come with me to the five hills to see the beautiful sunset."

"Oh, hello, Mr. Whitewash!" greeted Uncle Wiggily, who was fooled for the time being. "I love to see beautiful sunsets and I'll go with you in a moment. But, speaking of five hills, here is a little puzzle."

With a black stick for a pencil and a piece of white bark for paper, Uncle Wiggily drew a puzzle picture of five hills. Showing over the top of each one was an object easily guessed. Then Uncle Wiggily said to the pretended Polar Bear:

"Behind these five hills are five men each one holding up something he uses in his work. Name the five men without seeing them."

This was such a hard puzzle that the Bear began scratching his head.

Elaborate Ceremonies For Opening Game at Toronto

DOYLE MAY BE PITCHING CHOICE

Leafs in Good Shape for Opening of Toronto Season.

IN SECOND PLACE

TORONTO, May 2. — Burning up over the inexplicable action of Manager Jack Dunn of the Birds in postponing Monday's game at Baltimore, "Bill" O'Hara of the Leafs and his second placers arrived home yesterday afternoon for the inaugural game with Newark to-day at the stadium. The game could have and should have been played in the opinion of the Toronto born manager of the Queen City entry in the International League and the only reason that he can advance for the calling off of the fixture is that the "Pooh Bah" of the Orioles was apprehensive that his team would have to take another beating.

"And that is just what would have happened," said O'Hara emphatically. "The Leafs have struck their stride, and with Doyle and Prudhomme ready to pitch we would have made it more than hot for the Birds."

The Leafs have shown improvement in every game played, according to Mr. O'Hara, who is confident that with the facilities for practice afforded at home that they didn't get on the road that they will retain their position close to the top. He had nothing but praise for the pitching of "Rip" Collins, who has won both his starts; Jess Doyle, who last effort was a victory, and Prudhomme, who more than redeemed himself at Reading for the disaster at Newark. In the latter game the young right-hander was not at fault altogether, as his support failed him utterly.

"Lefty" Martin also came in for commendation. In the opinion of the Leafs' leader he is one of the best young southpaws to come into the league in a long while. Clarence Fisher and Don Hankins have not shown much to date, but they are sure to be heard from when the weather gets better. Frank Reil and Fraser, the recruits from Wilson and Portland, are still with the club, as is Don Songer, the left-hand twirler who came here from New York last fall. They will be given full opportunity to show their worth before the season is much older.

Alexander's batting has featured all the games played by the Leafs and he is expected to add many homers to his string of four at the Leaf's new park. There is no harder hitter anywhere than the big first baseman who is a sure fire major league prospect in the opinion of Fred Buchell, the former manager of the Newark club, who is Mr. O'Hara's right hand man. The latter also thinks highly of the ability of Joe Rabbit and Warren Cote and is decidedly enthusiastic over the team as a whole. Webb and Burke round out a great infield, and there are few clubs with as much speed in the outfield as the Leafs with Sheedy, Jacobson and Rabbitt on the job.

Either Doyle or Collins will be on the mound against Mamaux of the Bears. Both veterans are ready and anxious to pitch. Rensa or Phillips will look after the catching. The line-up otherwise will be the same as in the other games played by the Leafs.

LINCOLN, Ill., May 2. Canadian Press. — Great Britain's hope in C. C. Pyle's coast to coast race, Peter Gavuzzi, yesterday increased his lead over Andrew Payne of Claremore, Okla., when with Seth Gonzales of Denver, he led the 70 surviving runners in the 59th control.

Gavuzzi and Gonzales time for the 32.6 miles from Springfield was 3:52. 24. The bristle bearded Britisher has traversed the 2230.7 moles from Los Angeles in 366:15:14. 5 hours 26 minutes and 45 seconds faster than Payne. The Oklahoman ran ahead heat with Roy McMurtry of Newhall, Calif., and Phillip Granville, Hamilton, Ont., negro, yesterday, to finish 8th in 4:38:55.

Harry Rea of Long Beach, Calif., outpaced John Sale of Passaic, N.J., but the easterner held on to third place with an elapsed time of 403: 41:39. Rea finished third yesterday in 3:54:28; and Sale fourth in 4:12: 02.

The other leaders in the transcontinental race and their elapsed time are:

Fourth—Phillip Granville, Hamilton, Ont., 407:11:57.

Fifth—Mike Joyce, Cleveland, 417: 39:49.

Sixth—William Kerr, Minneapolis, 418:38:09.

Seventh—Ed. Gardner, Seattle, 419:09:45.

Eighth—Giusto Umek Trieste, Italy, 423:36:31.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

'Sfunny how a lot of people will holler about not having junior baseball. Then why be a knocker? Let's all together and help boost the City League this season. Let "Co-operation" be the password.

The East Peterborough League should be a strong drawing card for the baseball fans this summer, judging from the general outlook at present for this loop. Bethany intend to have a regular line-up, and will give the remaining three teams a run for group honors. Frank Scully, who played for the Cogs last year, will be on third base for the Crescents this season, and it is expected that Foley and a few other players of hockey renown will be with Brioux's gang. There is as yet some doubt as to whether Masterson will play for the Crescents or the Cogs. With that triumvirate of baseball stars, Crary, Rooke, and Vannest, and the addition, Billingsley, who played for the Crescents last year, the Cognawagas will prove strong contenders for the loop championship.

Unsettled weather failed to discourage the Holy Name League youngsters in their first practice held at the Sacred Heart Grounds last week. About fifteen bantams were on hand with a couple of new faces, who showed up well in the workout. The Sweetman brothers as catcher and shortstop put up a snappy showing, and promise to be a real aid to whichever team they are signed on. Others of the gang who were seen on the field, Charlie Kay, Bert Bailey, Gainey, Sullivan, Begley, F. O'Brien, and J. Bailey. The juveniles had a poorer representation, and a better crowd is expected to be presented at the next practice, which will be held some time this week. The manager of St. Peter's juvenile team would like the following players to be present at the next workout, date and place of which will be announced later in this column: E. McDonough, F. Feeley, H. LeFave, A. Morocco, J. Johnston, G. Kay, J. Huard, J. Carroll, E. Archambault, G. Reynolds, L McCarthy, J. Roach, and W. Campanaro.

Every effort is being made by the City League officials to round up twelve teams before the schedule is drawn up. Last year only six teams participated, two in each of the Bantam, Juvenile, and Junior series. Riley & Hickey, local George Street merchants, are showing a real sporting spirit by backing a bantam team in the league. Bill Prindible is president of the league this year, and has proved himself during the past few years to be one of the strongest backers of boys' sport around the city. A final meeting of the league will be held on May 8, at 8 p.m., in the Board Room at the Duffus Building. All entries of teams are expected to be in on that night, and final arrangements will be made for the season's schedule. All team representatives and managers are asked to be on hand, as items of importance will be discussed.

Ladies' softball will be given a strong boost by the Canadian General Electric ladies' six-team league this season. Jack Pilling and James O'Brien are the officers of the league, and both of these sportsmen have had experience in handling the ladies' league. The ladies of the local Electric plant have always featured prominently in the baseball line, and at the same time their interest in the game has helped to keep this branch of sport alive in these parts. With six teams in the ladies' league and about twenty in the men's intershop league, it means that more than two hundred and fifty employees will be participating in softball in the local works. That in itself is a record, and it is doubtful whether any other factory in Ontario could equal it. The leagues will get under way as soon as the grounds are fixed. Some of the ladies' games will probably be played at Confederation Square.

BELLEVILLE BOYS ARE UP ONE PIN

Manufacturers Team Wins Home Game, But Loses Out on Round.

The Belleville Hardware bowling team were in the city on Saturday night bowling a return game at the Duffus Bowling Alleys with a team from the local Manufacturers League. The locals won the game on Saturday night but had been defeated previously in Belleville by 190 pins. The result of the win here put them down one pin on the round.

It was real bowling all the way through and the visitors returned home with such a small margin that another challenge is expected in the near future. The Belleville boys were royally entertained at a banquet after the game and they went home promising to come to Peterborough on many more occasions. In Belleville the Petes total pinnage was 2939 and Belleville had 3129 while the games here were Belleville 2821 and Peterborough 3001.

Individual scores were:

Belleville		Peterborough
Bassett	566	Shadgett	661
Harriss	502	Coursey	515
Whalen	705	Cullen	571
Doran	450	Gray	586

SIX TEAMS FOR GIRLS' SOFTBALL

Teams Entered at Second Meeting of C.G.E. Association Meeting.

DISCUSS RULES

The Canadian General Ladies' Soft Ball Association held their second meeting last night. Jack Pilling, the president of the league, occupied the chair and after the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, the team entries were received.

Six teams have made application, from the Meter, Punch, Press, Wire, Industrial Control, Office and Tractional Departments.

It was moved by Mr. Campbell, and seconded by Miss White, that the present entries be received and that the secretary immediately proceed to draw up the schedule.

After much discussion it was decided to play under Ontario Ladies' Softball Rules. Shop rules, such as are used by the men's intershop league, will be drawn up by the executive.

The managers of the teams will be elected right away and the six team schedule will begin as soon as the grounds are fixed.

An all star team will be chosen from the six teams to represent the works in outside competition. It is expected that they will play a game in Orillia on June 23, when the local plant holds its annual picnic.

GIANTS REGAIN LEAGUE LEAD

Take Second Straight Game From Brooklyn Robins by Score 4-2.

FITZSIMMONS HIT HARD

NEW YORK, May 2.— (Canadian Press.)— The New York Giants regained the league lead here yesterday by winning their second straight game from Brooklyn. The score was 4 to 2.

Fitzsimmons was hit hard by the Robins, but was saved time after time by spectacular support. Two catches by Roush were particularly brilliant. Jim Faulkner relieved Fitzsimmons as the Robins started an eighth inning rally, and held the visitors without hits or runs through the rest of the game.

Vance held the Giants to nine hits, two fewer than Brooklyn got off Fitzsimmons, but his support was erratic, and the Giants bunched their blows at times when they were effective. Ott doubled with the bases full in the fifth and Harper hit a home run in the sixth, the seventeenth Giant homer in twelve games.

Carmen Hill gave the Chicago Cubs only five hits at Pittsburgh and the Pirates made it two wins in a row over the McCarthy crew. The score was 4 to 1.

The Cubs' only tally came in the fourth inning on two singles and an out. Thereafter Hill did not permit a safety.

George Grantham had a perfect day at bat with two singles and a double, the latter wallop driving in two runs in a three run rally in the sixth.

Cuyler played a great game in right field for the Cubs and threw out two runners at third base.

The Boston Nationals gave the Phillies another push into the cellar yesterday by taking the second game of the Philadelphia series 5 to 3 by more timely hitting in the pinches.

Both clubs collected ten hits, but the locals lacked the punch needed to make use of their hits and eight men were left on base. Burrus hit his second home run of the series off Walsh in the second inning, while a trio of doubles rattled off the right field fence.

The Cincinnati Reds pounded Grover Cleveland Alexander for twelve hits and six runs in seven innings at St. Louis and won from the Cardinals, 6 to 3. It was the third consecutive defeat for McKechnie's men. The Cards suffered from the absence of Hafey, O'Farrell and Holm on the injury list. Bill Sherdel joined the hospital squad yesterday with a badly swollen ankle.

MEDALS PRESENTED TO FOOTBALL TEAM

Good Program Given at Meeting of Prince of Wales H. and S. Association.

Members of the football team of the Prince of Wales school, champions of the football scholastic season, were presented last evening at the regular meeting of the Prince of Wales Home and School Association, with silver Eversharp pencils, the presentations being made on behalf of the Football Association, By Messrs. Stewart and Gilmour.

The president, Mrs. O. L. M. Kirkwood, occupied the chair for the meeting, which was featured by a splendid program, and was attended by a large number of parents of the school's pupils. Miss G. Glover gave an interesting review of her trip to Europe last summer, and Mrs. W. Wilson reported on her attendance, as the delegate from the school, at the Easter meeting of Home and School societies in Toronto.

G. S. Mattice's room won the banner given for the largest attendance of parents present at the meeting.

The program included a chorus by Senior girls, a violin selection by Kenneth Gadd, a reading by Verna Huffman, and solo numbers by Gwen Fisher and Russell Rowan.

The direct revenue received by the Federal and Provincial Governments from their forests in the form of rentals, royalties, stumpage charges, etc., amounts to about $15,000,000 annually. In addition, the wood-using industries contribute through property, income, business, customs, and other taxes a large proportion of municipal, provincial, and federal revenues.

RUTH MAKES FIFTH HOMER

Yankees Defeat Senators 8-5 in Third Game of Series.

PHILLIES WIN 5-3

NEW YORK, May 2 (Canadian Press).—Aided by Babe Ruth's fifth home run of the season, the New York Yankees defeated the Washington Senators, 8 to 5, at the Capital yesterday in the third game of the series. Fred Marberry was pitching in the first inning when Ruth caught a twister and gave it a ride into the centre field bleachers. No one was on bases. Ruth got three other hits for a perfect day at bat.

A four-run rally in the seventh was responsible for the 5 to 3 win which Philadelphia got at Boston. The victory was the seventh straight win for the Mack clan. The rally started when Tarbert, Red Sox right fielder, lost Hauser's fly in the sun.

Cobb's single later scored both the tying run and the tally which proved to be the winning run.

Johnny Hodapp, whose errors on Monday were partly responsible for the defeat of his team, redeemed himself yesterday by batting in four tribal runs, enabling the Indians to take the second game of the Cleveland series from St. Louis 4 to 3. Blue's error paved the way for the Redskins' extra tally in the eighth inning. Grant started for Cleveland but was replaced on the mound in the sixth by Joe Shaute.

Even Series.

Getting 16 hits, seven of them doubles, Detroit walloped the White Sox 10 to 5 at Chicago to even the series.

With the exception of Tavenor and McManus, every Tiger in the line-up bagged a two-base hit. Rice batted in seven runs with a homer, double and single. Blankenship and Adkins were hit hard in the early innings.

The Sox drove Billings out of the box in the seventh with a five-run rally. Barnabe's pinch hit home run scoring three runs and Falk's single two more.

A. Wardle of Manchester, the new amateur billiards champion of Great Britain, is one of the youngest men to hold the title. He is now twenty-seven years old and has been playing the game ever since he was a youth in school.

Do You Pick Your Service Station?

When you need motor oil how and when do you buy it? Do you drive to the nearest service station? Do you buy from the dealer who says he can save you a few cents on your purchase? Are you one of those motorists who believe that all oils are alike? Or do you ask for and get Veedol?

If you realized the tremendous responsibility that rests upon the oil you put into your crankcase, you would never again take chances upon "any kind of oil." Hundreds of busy repair shops could tell of costly repairs due to poor oil—simply because car owners have imagined that "any oil would do."

The thin film of oil that covers the vital parts of your motor has to stand up against the most intense heat. It must ward off the threat of tearing, grinding friction. The instant this oil film breaks, scorching heat beats upon exposed surfaces and friction attacks unprotected metal. This is why the responsibility of a motor oil is so great.

Veedol is a super oil. It gives that "film of protection"—thin as tissue, smooth as silk, tough as steel—that fights to protect your motor. Modern high-compression motors operating at high speeds present a new and difficult problem of lubrication. Tide Water has solved this problem. Heavier bodied, tougher, longer lived than ever, the entire line of Veedol motor oils has been reformulated to give that extra margin of safety so vital to your motor. Correct for the new motors, Veedol is better for any motor. Have your crankcase filled with the new Veedol and give your motor the extra protection it requires.

46 WHIPPET CARS BOUGHT BY ONE FIRM

Dominion Stores Places Record Order With Willys-Overland Ltd.

The Dominion Stores have just completed the purchase of 46 Whippet Coupes for use in the organization throughout Ontario and Quebec. This order comprises the largest single shipment of cars to any one concern in Canada made by the Willys-Overland Company.

N. McLeod, who has been appointed Retail Sales Manager of the Toronto Branch of Willys-Overland consummated the deal just prior to his promotion. The value of the order is in the neighborhood of $37,000.

Willys-Overland have this year entered the field with a line of cars selling from $695 to $3,925, and are marking big inroads into the Commercial as well as Passenger car markets.

Emphasis is placed by this recent deal on the possibilities confronting them in the fleet business. It is understood they competed for the order with practically every other manufacturer in Canada.

For Commercial work, the Whippet it is claimed, provides transportation at the lowest cost per mile of any car built on the continent.

PLANING . BUILDING . FINANCING
DECORATING . FURNISHING . GARDENING

PERMANENT AND FIRE-RESISTING

Ernest Flagg, Architect.

This very interesting and unusual home was erected primarily as an example to home-builders of the desirability of avoiding all sham constructional effects, and building in an absolutely honest manner. Consequently, the beams in this home are real beams; the stone is real stone; and every feature is serving some purely utilitarian purpose in addition to its artistic effect.

It is an object lesson, too, in permanent fire-resisting construction. Imagine 16 inch walls of concrete poured behind a facing of granite, a heavy sea-green slate roof, and solid plaster interior partitions formed by plastering both sides of a hanging jute net. Truly this is obeying Ruskin's famous admonition to build that men may say "See! this our fathers did for us."

Conspicuous features of the exterior are the dormer windows located at the very top, or ridge, of the roof. These eliminate stuffy hot attics and will aid the maintenance of a cool house during the summer months.

Consideration of the plans will quickly convince the reader of their merit, for less than ten percent of the floor area is sacrificed to communication, the rest being solely bright useable room, or closet, space. The ground floor accommodation includes the living and dining rooms with their big hooded fireplaces, the maid's room, store room, kitchen, pantry and one bedroom with an adjacent bathroom.

Two bedrooms, and another tiled bathroom with a built-in bath, are located on the second floor.

The actual cost of this home exclusive of lot was $16,500, but this figure could be substantially reduced without greatly affecting the design or the materials.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service, 345 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont., who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention design number 121. Copyright, 1928.

TAKING THE DREAD OUT OF FINANCING

Arranging building loans is easy if you follow these simple rules.

Generally speaking it is better to plunge a little than skimp a lot, for it is usually possible to sell a well-built house with modern conveniences without much trouble if it becomes too heavy a burden to carry; whereas a skimped and inconvenient structure is invariably a drug on the market.

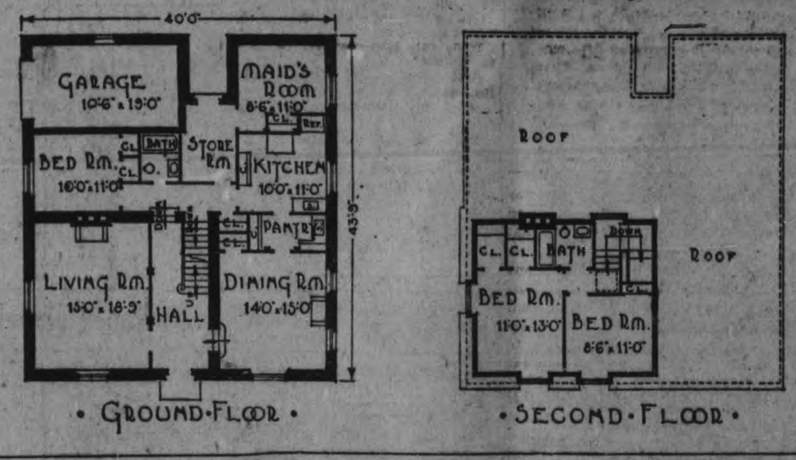
As to cash, it is necessary, as a rule, to have available about twenty to forty per cent of the combined value of the lot and the building. Suppose, for instance, that your lot is going to cost you $2,000, and the home you propose to build will cost another $8,000. On this total of $10,000 it should be possible to arrange mortgages to about $5,000. If you already own the lot the cash necessary to swing the transaction will amount to $3,000, or about 30 per cent of the total value.

Building and loan companies, trust companies, trustees of estates, private individuals and other sources will usually lend from forty to sixty per cent of their own estimate of the total value of land and buildings on first mortgage security and you will usually receive this in three payments as follows:—

1. When roof is on, 50% of loan
2. When the first coat of plaster is on, 25% of loan.
3. Thirty days after completion, 25% of loan.

Should additional funds be required there are reputable firms making loans on second mortgages as security. Such a loan should be for as small an amount as possible and payable in full within five years. It is necessary to pay a bonus for such accommodation.

When giving a mortgage, deal only with reputable firms or individuals and get dependable legal advice. The terms of payment of principal and interest vary a great deal. Very often a first mortgage should be what is called a straight mortgage or one on which interest only is paid periodically and the principal not until the end of five years. This is particularly desirable when a second mortgage must be carried as in this case substantial periodical payments plus accrued interest must be made on the principal. Consider how your commitments would affect the sale of the property at a later date.



THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE"

With its excellent cast and production, direct from its phenomenal runs of twenty-nine and thirty weeks, respectively, at Pittsburgh and Cleveland, Anne Nichols famously successful appealing comedy, "Abie's Irish Rose", will be presented by the world-famous author-producer for an engagement of one night at the Grand Opera House Tuesday, May 8, and unless all signs fail Peterborough will be another city to be added to the long list of records established by this truly remarkable play, which has been the cause of more discussion than any play written since the Bard of Avon started writing.

"Abie's Irish Rose" is not only brimful of good clean wholesome comedy, there being a hearty laugh in almost every line, but in its unfolding discloses one of the pretticst little love stories ever told, which in its simplicity is at once winning.

Miss Nichols has written all told seventeen plays. She was also responsible for "Just Married", which is still playing throughout the country with great success, also "Linger Longer Letty" in which play Charlotte Greenwood, the elongated comedienne, scored her biggest hit. However, it was "Abie's Irish Rose" that placed Miss Nichols name in the hall of fame for having written a play that has unprecedented engagements in New York—now in its sixth year at the Republic Theatre. It has also broken all long run records in Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Montreal, Toronto, Washington, Baltimore, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Atlanta, New Orleans, etc. etc.

AT THE REGENT.

"NOT FOR PUBLICATION."

In the dual role of star and director of "Not For Publication," Ralph Ince is said to score another signal triumph in this latest of his FBO pictures which opens Thursday at the Regent Theatre.

Ince is one of the very few stars who has succeeded in directing himself and others in the cast of a production, and his rare talent in this phase of motion pictures is said to have developed a remarkable screen success in "Not For Publication." This story is a modern romance of the West, centering about the construction of a gigantic dam project.

Ince plays the role of "Big Dick" Wellman, contractor, who uses politics and his power as a political boss to gain a big dam building job in the West, though he is sincere in his efforts to honestly complete the gigantic task facing him. However, his methods arouse the suspicions of the press and Rex Lease, in the role of a star reporter, is assigned to the work of exposing Wellman.

Both Ince and Lease are remarkably well cast, and their characterizations are said to be outstanding. A strong thread of romance is woven into the story when Lease, on the eve of divulging to his editor, what he finds, is faced with the problem of exposing, as a criminal, the brother of the girl he loves. Petite Jola Mendez plays the role of the girl.

The story reaches an intensely dramatic climax in the flood waters of the great dam project, when with a grand gesture of self-sacrifice, its builder evolves a smashing effective denouement to exonerate those he loves from all suspicion.

The dramatic emphasis of "Not For Publication," its intensely appealing love theme, its pathos, mystery and surprising disclosures, lend this story an appeal which is universal. Its massive background in the great West and the tremendous nature of the great building project which forms an important part of the story, together with the splendid cast which enacts the principal roles, add vitally to its appeal.

In addition to Ince, Lease and Miss Mendez, the cast of "Not For Publication" includes Roy Laidlaw, Eugene Strong, Thomas Brower and Tom McGuire. The picture is based on Robert Wells Ritchie's story, "The Temple of the Giants," and was adapted by Ewart Adamson.

A scene from Abies Irish Rose, the play that broke the worlds record, now in its 6th year in New York City.

AT THE CAPITOL.

THE SCREAMING "COHENS AND KELLYS" ARE COMING TO THE CAPITOL FOR THREE DAYS COMMENCING TO-MORROW IN THEIR NEW, BIGGER AND BETTER "COHENS AND KELLYS IN PARIS"

The screaming 'Cohens and Kellys' are coming back in all their glory in the new, bigger and better, louder and funnier Universal production, "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris."

Tighten up all your loose ribs and learn to control yourself between now and Thursday, for on and after that date this theatre will not be responsible for sudden death due to hysterical laughter.

As you have no doubt suspected, that is the opening date of the aforesaid "Cohens and Kellys in Paris", in which George Sidney, the same old Cohen appears again in the role that made him famous in every part of the world where laughing is indulged in. Co-featured with Sidney is J. Farrel MacDonald, inimitable in the role of Kelly. Vera Gordon, who made a laughing hit in the first "Cohens and Kellys", will be seen in her old role as Mrs. Cohen. Kate Price, the peer of her type, is featured as Mrs. Kelly.

The entire cast is of stellar quality, Gertrude Astor, Sue Carol and Charles Delaney being among the other principals.

The Cohens and Kellys, grown rich in business partnership, love each other; but they love to battle each other, too. When pretty Sayde Cohen announces the engagement to young Pat Kelly in Paris, their fathers are right in the middle of one of their feuds, and both are determined to stop the marriage of their only child to the offspring of a dirty loafer, so they take the same boat to Paris to stop the wedding.

The things that happen to Messrs. Cohen and Kelly in Paris!

Ladies and gentlemen, dunt esk!

Fliers To Be Given Formal Welcome at Bolling Field.

TRAVEL BY TRAIN.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (Canadian Press). — The crew of the Bremen made a quiet entry into Washington to-day, arriving aboard the train from New York in the early hours, finishing out a good night's sleep, and then proceeding to their hotel for a brief period awaiting the formal welcoming ceremonies later at Bolling Field.

ENGINEER'S BODY IS TAKEN TO HOME

Mel Caterine, Killed in Train Wreck, Lived at Belleville.

SMITH'S FALLS, Ont., May 2.—(Canadian Press).—The remains of Mel Caterine, Canadian Pacific locomotive engineer, killed when his train hit a pile of stone at Bolingbrook on Sunday night, were taken to-day to Belleville, where he had lived.

Don't let the Joker hand you any Applesauce

BUY a so-called "cheap" paint and you'll get a good sized Joker in every can of it.

Maybe somebody assures you that this low-priced paint is just as good as SWP. That's just plain "applesauce." The "cheap" paint will not give you as beautiful a job, as durable a job, or as economical a job as SWP. It just can't do it.

There's a Joker in the "cheap" paint can.

The "cheap" paint isn't cheap at all. The low price per gallon is a delusion because many more gallons of it are needed. About one half the quantity of good old SWP will do the job. And when it's done with SWP it's done right. SWP will last longer and look better. It has the Quality that stands up to wear and weather. Long after the "cheap" paint job has gone—faded out—the SWP painted surface will be in good condition. No Joker here. No "applesauce." A little more per gallon in the first place but you won't need as many gallons. And you won't have to do the job all over again in a year or so as you will if you fall for the spurious economy of the low price paint.

Give the "cheap" paint joker a wide berth. Go to the store of the Sherwin-Williams dealer—"Paint Headquarters"—and get his advice on the work you contemplate. He'll tell you you how much SWP will do the job. He'll give you helpful advice and useful free literature, including copy of the Sherwin-Williams "Household Guide."

JACK MINER AND THE BIRDS

AND SOME THINGS ABOUT NATURE

A Republication of the Book by Permission of the Author, Jack Miner of Kingsville, Ont.

The chipping sparrow is about the fastest bird I know. On June 16th a female started building in a little cedar tree one rod from her other four babies that were still in the nest under the care of her mate. At noon the 17th she had her nest completed and one egg in it; June 18th, at 9 a.m. there were two eggs in the nest; and at 7 a.m., June 20th, she was setting on four eggs. At 3 p.m., July 1st, all four eggs had hatched, and on July 11th the four baby birds flew out of the nest into the other trees.

The mourning doves only lay two eggs at a setting, but still they breed fast as they raise four or five pairs each year. I have never seen three eggs in a mourning dove's nest; we quite often see one egg, but this is a case where some nest-robbing bird stole the first egg. On July 23rd two young doves flew from a nest; on the 25th and 26th the mother laid two more eggs in the same nest; on August 9th the two young were hatched, and on the 22nd both flew out. This spring was very backward, but there were young doves larger than sparrows in a nest right near my house on April the 19th. And they keep on laying right into September. I have tagged the young doves, but have only heard from one; that was killed in Georgia. Last winter a few doves wintered here with us.

I might also say that I have tagged dozens of young robins but have only heard from one; that was killed in Missouri.

But you can just rest assured where birds get peaceable treatment and shelter, all that can return do so. This can be said of all species, from the wren to the Canada goose.

10. What birds lay the largest eggs according to their size?

Killdeers and sand pipers lay the largest eggs according to their size of any bird I am acquainted with.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Questions and Answers.

11. What is the most powerful bird for its size?

The screech owl. I have known a screech owl that evidently did not weigh over four ounces, to kill a domestic fowl that weighed over six pounds the owl alighting on the hen's head at night, eating her eyes out, and eventually killing her.

12. What do you mean by pinioning birds?

Clipping means just simply clipping the wing feathers to prevent the bird from flying, but pinioning means to take the wing off, bone and all, at the first joint. This is usually done when birds are young, before the wings have developed. A sharp needle and thread is used for tying the two arteries. Then with the scissors the wing is snipped off. But remember, when this is once done, that bird can never fly again, as the wing cannot grow on any more than an amputated thumb upon your hand.

If a bird is slightly pinioned it may not be able to fly when it is fat and heavy, yet this same bird may get thin and on a windy day rise up and make fairly good headway in the air.

This operation may look cruel to some, yet while birds are young, before they can fly, their wings are apparently numb and they do not mind the operation at all. If birds are to be kept in captivity it is the proper thing to do.

But remember, one bird in the bush is worth ten in the hand; so do not let us figure on keeping them in captivity more than we can possibly help; for that is cruel.

13. How long do birds live?

This of course depends largely upon the variety of bird. Wild geese will undoubtedly live to be as old as a human being. I have two breeding pairs with their wings pinioned; three of these birds were originally wild, but Tom Johnson (Jack Johnson's son) was hatched here on May 17th, 1907. He paired off in 1911 with a goose that was wing-tipped in 1909, and old David and his sweetheart were both wing-tipped in 1911. So you see the youngest one of these four birds is at least thirteen, as they would be not less than a year old when they came here, but I have absolute proof that Tom Johnson is now over thirteen. And none of these pets shows any sign of old age. In fact, they play and frolic about the premises with their families as if they were the biggest boys and girls of the bunch.

Wild ducks will live to be over fifteen. Old Susan, the mother of the Mallberry family, was hatched here in May, 1909. I pinioned her. She raised a family every season until this year, but I have noticed that the last two winters affected her very much; in fact, now, when I go out to them, she acts as if she would like me to give her a cane to help herself up the bank. Another fact about her is that in 1921 she laid only seven eggs and raised six young, five of them drakes; the last year she dropped one lower and laid only six eggs; all hatched, but were very weak; one died in the nest but the other five lived to migrate. But all were drakes. Therefore, ten out of the last eleven ducks old Susan [illegible] were drakes.

Another old black duck [illegible] 1905 was killed by a great horned owl in January, 1918; she was fat and healthy when killed. I got the owl.

A greenhead drake came here in 1907. One wing was badly shot so I took it off. This drake died in 1917.

But in every case they show signs of weakness first during the winter; therefore it is plain to me that if they have the use of both wings and can migrate to a warm climate, wild ducks will live for fifteen and possibly twenty years.

However, this is a point that I don't think we hunters need worry a second about, as I am sure not one per cent. of our game birds die of old age. Out of the four hundred and forty ducks I have tagged, only three lived to carry the tag six years, to my knowledge, seventy-five per cent. of the tags being returned in less than three years.

14. How shall I build a martin house?

A Martin house can be built almost any style desired, say on a miniature scale of your own house; supposing your house is thirty feet square, build your bird house on the inch scale, which will be thirty inches square; or if you want to build a smaller house, build it on the half-inch scale.

By all means have a system to build on. I once heard a colored man say he didn't fear the average human family near as much as he did a yellow-jackets' nest, "'cos de hohnets am so doggone well ohganized."

The rooms in a martin house should be not less than six, and not over eight, inches square. The door should be level with the floor, same as our dwellings, the doorstep or verandah one-half inch lower than the floor or door. Door should be one and one-half inches wide, made in any style desired.

White is the best color to paint, trimmed to suit your own taste.

To set house up, first put in two ordinary fenceposts, about four to six inches apart, four feet in the ground and four out. Now put the martin house pole between the two posts with pole about three inches from the ground. Bore half-inch holes right through all three, one hole about three inches from the top of fenceposts, another about six inches from the ground, and bolt all three together through these holes. This leaves the pole high and dry, and by taking out the top bolt and loosening the bottom one, it permits you to raise and lower the house very easily when you want to clean it out or paint it in the fall. If left up, stop the door to keep out the "flying rats."

Now don't think it a difficult job to build a martin house. It is a sunny pastime.

Some years ago I happened to be in Brantford, Ontario, when a telephone call requested me to come over to the School for the Blind and give them a talk on birds. A second thought caused me to answer, Yes, and the accompanying plate will prove that these dear children listened to me, and I can assure you I listened to them, as several of these smart lads told me how and where they had "seen" different things. At the close, a vote of thanks was moved; the seconder, a youth of about sixteen, used some words I shall never forget. He said, "It is a pleasure to me to second this motion, but coupled with it I just wish to say, dear Uncle Jack Miner, that although we have never seen the sun, we are not blind; we can plainly see all you have been telling us. People often speak of the night being dark. With us there is no darkness. It is all light."

This last June I visited a few towns on the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence River. I took particular notice of the beautiful little parks, the neat way in which they were kept, etc. Really, fifty dollars put into a nice, neat martin house would add thousands of dollars to the attractiveness of these grounds, for I never saw more purple martins in my life where there were no bird houses than there were around those quaint, ancient Canadian towns, but not a bird house. The martins appeared to be building in the eavetroughs and the cornices of some of the old buildings.

15. How fast do birds fly?

This is a question hard to answer and prove, and one upon which we may differ. I have heard men say that geese migrate at the rate of one hundred and twenty miles an hour. While this may be true, I have no earthly reason to believe it.

My home is three miles north of the lake; these geese go to the lake to roost and in the morning they rise, high and as they reach the shore there is always some one with a high-power rifle to greet them; these volleys of shot on a still morning will tell you the very second the geese have reached shore and are coming our way; and in every case, it will be over three minutes before the geese get to my home.

Moreover, when they start for Hudson Bay I have time and again wired ahead of them, and on three different occasions I have got returns, and if they were the same geese I wired ahead of, they were travelling between fifty and sixty miles an hour.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, the aviator, tells me that he has often overtaken geese in the air, and the only way they could travel one hundred miles an hour was by dropping, which they did to avoid him.

Because a goose was killed at Hudson Bay three days after we tagged it here, and because another one was killed at the Belcher Islands, Hudson Bay, four days after being tagged here, at my home, this does not prove anything, as we have no proof how long these birds lingered here after being tagged, nor how long they were there before being shot. But there is one thing I am quite certain of: That the great majority of them make the flight from my home to Hudson Bay without coming down, and I firmly believe they go about fifty miles an hour, and not two miles a minute as some report them to.

16. What became of the Passenger Pigeon?

This bird was about twice the size of the mourning dove, and so much the same in looks, ways and habits, that the mourning dove could be called a miniature pigeon.

In the early '70's these pigeons migrated through Ohio in countless numbers, I might say in clouds. We came to Canada in '78, and I am sure I have not seen five hundred pigeons [illegible] people advance the theory that [illegible] blew them all into the lake. Why, bless your life, there is no lake in America that would hold them all!

I am firm in my belief that they were exterminated by a contagious disease.

The last three pigeons I shot, I shot in the fall of 1884. I was then nineteen years of age, and have a distinct recollection of what they were like. These birds were all three diseased, and were not over two-thirds the actual size of the healthy passenger pigeon. I took them home, but mother said they were not fit for food.

In northern Canada the snowshoe hare, or native rabbit, becomes so numerous about every seven or eight years that a disease sets in and fully ninety-nine out of a hundred—yes, I might say nine hundred and ninety-nine out of a thousand—of them die off. I have seen the skeletons lie in the swamps by the dozens, and when the snow came I hunted, three weeks later, and only saw the tracks of two rabbits. This same exterminating-disease system has controlled the native rabbit in Canada, and they have died off on an average of every seven or eight years, as far back as man has any knowledge of them.

Whether this is a correct explanation of the disappearance of the passenger pigeon, or not, I have heeded the warning, and have arranged my ponds on the bathrub system, and during the late summer months the water is all let out, and the ponds allowed to dry up; then I sow wheat and rye extremely thick in the bottom to purify the soil, as the sun, and the cropping of ground, will purify the soil the same as circulation will purify water. The overflow pipe is then closed, and when the fall rains come and raise the spring, the underland drain, which is laid from the pond to the spring, floods it over, and preserves the green food in the bottom of the pond for the birds when they arrive, as this green food in the bottom of the pond will not rot but will keep fresh so long as the water remains icy cold.

17. Whereabouts in Canada is your home? And what can you raise there?

My home is two miles north of Kingsville, Ontario. Kingsville is a neat little beauty spot nestled on the north shore of Lake Erie, due north of Sandusky, Ohio, and twenty-eight miles south-east of Detroit, Michigan. Its population is about two thousand, with three well-attended churches, and two first-class hotels.

By the way, Kingsville is the most southerly town in the Dominion of Canada.

Now we can raise almost anything here, from a flagpole to a boiling-hot political quarrel, but our chief crop is corn. We condense it into hogs, and ship them just as they run. Then we bank the money to buy more land to grow more corn to feed more hogs, and so forth, and so forth.

EATON'S ANNOUNCE PURCHASE OF DEPARTMENT STORES, LTD.

Rumors In Circulation For Some Time Finally Confirmed.

HAVE TWO STORES HERE.

Will Continue Under Present Names—Many Stores Operated By Big Firm.

Rumors which have been persistent for some time are finally confirmed to-day in the announcement by The T. Eaton Company, Limited, that their offer to purchase the land, buildings, equipment, and merchandise of the Canadian Department Stores, Limited, has been accepted, and they will at an early date hereafter control that company's chain of retail stores located in Ontario and Quebec.

When interviewed to-day, a representative of The Eaton Company stated that the stores will continue under the name, The Canadian Department Stores, Limited, and will include substantially the same departments of merchandise. They point out that the C.D.S. will be backed by the strong purchasing power of the Eaton organization, and will carry out the well-known policies which have contributed to Eaton's development and expansion—the guarantee of goods satisfactory or money refunded—the proven economy of cash dealing—and the elimination of night shopping. The stores will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., including Saturday.

Under the Eaton regime, they stated that the aim of The Canadian Department Stores, Limited, will be to furnish its customers with the qualities of merchandise for which the Eaton organization has become noted.

Acquiring the control of the C.D.S.L. by The T. Eaton Company, Limited, will bring twenty-one more department stores within the control of the latter organization, which is already widely known as the largest retail business in the British Empire. The Canadian Department Stores are situated at Ottawa, Hamilton, Brockville, Belleville, Picton, Napanee, Peterborough, Lindsay, Huntsville, Sudbury, Sault Ste. Marie, Chatham, Woodstock, Stratford, Hanover, Midland, Port Arthur, Pembroke, Brantford, and St. Catharines, Ont., and Montreal, Que.

The larger establishments of The T. Eaton Company, Limited, are located in Toronto, Winnipeg, Montreal, Hamilton, Saskatoon, Regina, Moncton, and Halifax, while Teco Stores operated by the Eaton organization are at Kitchener, Peterborough and Sudbury, Ont., Sherbrooke, Que., Lethbridge, Alta., and Brandon, Man. In addition there are the mail order establishments of The T. Eaton Co., Limited, in Toronto, Winnipeg, Moncton, Regina, and Saskatoon; and the Eaton, Groceterias which have been and are being established at numerous locations in the Dominion; and lastly, there are the Eaton factories, whose large production is sold entirely throughout the retail stores operated by Eaton's.

In view of the fact that the Teco Store, which is now well established here, is an Eaton-controlled business, the purchase of the C.D.S. gives The T. Eaton Company two stores in this community, and Eaton officials state that their plans call for a concentration of the two businesses in Peterborough along lines which will assure the best service to the community.

IN MEMORIAM.

HAMLIN.—In ever loving memory of our beloved sister, Edith Huston Hamlin, who passed away May 2, 1927.

—Brothers and Sisters.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of my dear wife, Edith Huston Hamlin, who entered into rest, May 2, 1927.

I've asked the question many times
Why God took thee from me,
I've glanced toward the starry heights
In hopes, thy face to see.

In fancy still I oft can hear
Thy dear and loving voice,
And in my grief would join thee, dear,
If I could have my choice.

But God knows best and in His love
Hath left me still two joys,
And oft I see thy smile again
Within our little boys.

I think of thee at dawn of day,
Again when shadows fall,
And these dear memories will live
Until I hear the call—

To onward go to realms above
Where is no grief nor pain,
And where, I know, the Lord will grant
That we shall meet again.

What is Permanent?

Nothing is permanent but change. The progress of to-day is the history of to-morrow. Our security of to-day is but a memory to-morrow. The abundant health which we now enjoy is too often dissipated and lost with startling rapidity. Who is there among us who can say with certainty that he will have health and happiness in a year, a month, or even in a day? Yet why these sudden changes? What has happened to rob us of the joy of living? Has something invaded the body as we pursued our daily tasks? Have we suddenly been gripped by some mysterious foe?

To the Chiropractor, who deals entirely with the cause of disease, this is no mystery. He knows that the vital energy which comes from the brain through nerves and upon which every function in the human body is dependent has been interfered with. He knows that some change has taken place in the spine which has produced nerve pressure. WE HAVE NOT BEEN ATTACKED BY DISEASE AS AN OUTSIDE FOREIGN FOE. A CHANGE HAS OCCURRED WITHIN THE BODY, AND THE ONLY WAY HEALTH CAN BE RESTORED IS TO CORRECT THE CONDITION RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DISEASE.

This the Chiropractor is trained to do. He knows that health is dependent upon the condition of the spine. He knows that air, food, water and exercise are necessary to health. He realizes the value of a well-balanced mental state, but he also knows that all of these things may be available and illness still exist.

Every organ and part of the body must receive its quota of vital energy through the nervous system. This cannot be supplied if spinal derangements cause constriction of nerves. The Chiropractor is trained to find and correct these defects and thus permit the natural forces within the body to heal the weakened tissue.

CONSTABLE MAKER SHOT DEAD

AN OFFICER—AND A GENTLEMAN

The late Provincial Constable Maker had earned for himself an enviable name due to his absolute fearlessness when called upon for duty.

By the law-abiding residents of the County and the City he was recognized as a gentleman, courteous and willing at all times to render whatever service lay in his power. Many of his missions to the back country were in quest of children who were living under pitiable conditions, with little or no food, and clothing that was scanty and filthy. He was a man who instantly won his way to the heart of a child, by his winning personality, and the laughs of the children as they munched happily at chocolate bars, of which he seemed to have a never ending supply, were a true indication of his love for them.

The time that Constable Maker was called out on the Dwyer case was another example of his thoughtfulness where children were concerned Little John, who died later, was lying in a corner of the attic, covered with bed clothes that were insufficient, in Constable Maker's opinion, to protect him from the bitter cold that prevailed. Immediately off came his overcoat to be placed over the boy.

To the lawless element he presented the most formidable problem with which they had ever been faced. His reputation for getting his man was common talk among them, and he travelled the well-known Ninth Line of Dummer at any hour of the day or night, despite threats that they would "get him." Many of his calls were in the early hours of the morning, when a man could have been excused for waiting until daylight. But Constable Maker was always loyal to his force; his periods of duty recognized no set hours and often involved loss of one or two hours' sleep before he would arrive back in Peterborough with the man he had set out to catch.

On one occasion a call came from Dummer, from a crowd that had given him a lot of trouble—daring him to go out. Never hesitating for a moment, despite the early hour, Constable Maker jumped into his car and departed for the house. Upon arriving, he opened the front door, stepped into the kitchen, and announced in casual tones, "Well, here I am. What do you want?" He had called their bluff and had once again proved himself their master. He has been threatened, with a reporter standing beside him, but his only reply was a smile, as he disdainfully turned on his heel, and resumed his conversation as if nothing out of the ordinary had occurred.

Called to Young's Point one night to investigate the death of a man who had been killed on construction work, he forced his way over almost impassable roads, taking over five hours to make the fifteen mile journey, finally arriving at his destination, soaking wet. He completed his investigation, and returned immediately to Peterborough in case he should be needed elsewhere

One could continue to enumerate his experiences, almost without end, as his life as a provincial constable was a colorful one, but the outstanding feature was an untiring devotion to duty whatever the consequences.

Constable Maker was born in England and was in his early thirties. At the outbreak of the war he joined the 1st Battalion of the Devons, getting to France with the first draft to the "Old Contemptibles." Despite his youth, early in the war, he won his spurs by reason of his gallantry in action, and was promoted to the rank of Transport Sergeant and received the Military Medal.

He came to Canada at the conclusion of the Great War and was employed with the Canadian National Railway as a special officer, leaving them to join the Ontario Provincial Police. He served for a year in Belleville, being transferred to Peterborough in the spring of 1924. Inspector Lougheed of this disrict was here last week and arranged the transfer of the late constable to Madoc on the 15th of this month. His relief, Provincial Constable McCoy, had arranged to meet Mr. Maker this morning at 9 o'clock, and was waiting for him when the tragic news was announced.

The late Constable Maker was a very gallant gentleman, a courageous soldier and a devoted police officer. No tribute could do him credit, and his example will live in the hearts of his comrades, as one who had fulfilled to the limit the proud traditions of the Ontario Provincial Police.

He was a sterling example of the unofficious police officer, a man of good sense who knew what little petty misdemeanors might be overlooked or checked with friendly advice, but who on the other hand, understood thoroughly when the law should be enforced. By his actions he won ungrudging respect for the law and its officers.

Provincial Officer Is Slain by David Montgomery Today; City Police Shoot Slayer

PROVINCIAL OFFICER STEWART IS GRAZED BY BULLETS FROM MONTGOMERY'S GUN

Search For Liquor and Arms Precipitates Gun Battle—Slayer Reloads Revolver and Makes Vain Dash For Freedom As Police Close In.

Norman F. Maker, Provincial Constable for the County of Peterborough, was shot dead this morning by David Montgomery on the stairs of the Montgomery Hotel, and a few minutes later Police Constable Leonard Matthews shot Montgomery when he attempted to fire his revolver at the local officer

Early this morning Provincial Officer Joseph Stewart received a call to go to the Montgomery Hotel, where David Montgomery, a boarder, was causing trouble. Montgomery, who had been under the influence of liquor for some days, frightened the other residents of the hotel when he commenced to make threats about shooting, for it was known that he had a loaded revolver and a rifle in his room.

Officer Stewart communicated with Constable Maker, who was at his home, and when Maker arrived at the police station they immediately set out for the hotel in Constable Maker's car, arriving at the hotel about 9.15. A search was conducted, but the guns and David Montgomery were not found.

Shot From Above

As the two officers were coming down the stairs, Montgomery came to the landing at the top of the stairs on the third floor, brandishing a revolver and as Constable Maker looked up, he fired The first shot went wide but the second struck the constable in the forehead and came out the back of his head, killing him instantly. Maker fell forward, striking the floor at the first landing. Montgomery sprang to the stairs. Officer Stewart fled down the final flight of stairs and as he got to the bottom, Montgomery, standing over Makers body, took two shots at Stewart, one bullet grazing his left hand and going to the floor at the bottom of the stairs.

Stewart ran to the street to call for help and met Constable Matthews, who was watching the banks as the clerks were returning from the clearing house. He immediately told the constable that Maker had been shot and Matthews rushed to the police station, called the officers on duty, and ran to the Montgomery Hotel. As he arrived, Constable Puffer and Detective Carey drew up in the police car. They found Maker lying at the bottom of the steps.

Constable Puffer knelt down to see if there was any life left. Looking up, he saw David Montgomery standing at the top of the stairs with the revolver pointed at him. He immediately stepped forward and drew his own gun and Montgomery disappeared down the hall. Carey rushed out to the back of the hotel. Puffer, when he found that Maker was dead, went up the stairs into several bedrooms before he found Montgomery. On entering, he found that Montgomery had escaped through the window. Carey, in the back yard, called that he was coming down the rope. Montgomery dropped on to the roof of a small shed, went down on old ladder to the ground, and bolted to the back door of the paint shop immediately adjoining the hotel to the west.

Constable Matthews, who was out on Simcoe street, noticed the front door of the paint shop open and Montgomery stick out his head. Matthews made for the door, and guarding himself as he pushed it open, came face to face with Montgomery, who had his revolver pointed at him. Matthews pulled the trigger first, and Montgomery fell to the floor in front of one of the cars. As Montgomery dropped, Matthews grabbed the revolver when the dying man made a second attempt to shoot him.

Arrested Last Month.

David Montgomery had appeared for the first time in a number of years in Police Court on April 16th, charged with being intoxicated in the Montgomery Hotel the previous Saturday nigh. To he charge he pleaded guilty, and was fined $15.00 and costs or 10 days in the common jail. He told His Worship that he would take the jail term as he had no money to pay the fine. On April 26 he was freed from the county jail.

Since his brother Frank, a former proprietor of the Montgomery Hotel, died some two years ago, David has been living in the hotel as his brother arranged in his will that David should receive his board and lodging in the hotel for the rest of his life.

While his brother was operating the hotel, David was usually to be found around the stables. He always took a great interest in horses, and up until a few years ago he made a practice of taking in unruly colts that were hard to break. In the summer he operated a small farm on the outskirts of the city, where he spent most of his time.

He was the last of the three Montgomery men. William was shot forty years ago, and Frank died of heart failure very suddenly a couple of years ago.

Since coming from jail, he had often declared that he, the last of the Montgomery family, would never be taken by police officers again, and it was known that he had a revolver and a rifle which he always kept loaded in his room.

Both Weapons Loaded.

The rifle, a .32 Winchester, was found by the officers in his room this morning after the shooting. The large magazine was filled with cartridges. The revolver which Matthew seized was a Frontier Army .44, a kind that is very seldom seen nowadays. It had one empty shell and five cartridges in the magazine and

Extra Operators Needed For Calls

The double shooting this morning was responsible for an unexpected rush at the local telephone exchange. Shortly after nine o'clock the switchboard was almost continually lighted from calls, and it was necessary to send out for extra operators to handle the calls.

BRITISH ARE IMPATIENT FOR TREATY ACTION

London Times Voices Demand That Chamberlain Press Negotiations.

PRAISES KELLOGG'S STAND.

Strongly In Favor of General Principles of American Plan.

LONDON, May 3. — That large section of British public opinion, which has since indicated in an unmistakable way its belief in the value to the world of the American peace note appears to be growing impatient with the apparent slowness of the British government in giving expression to a view so widely supported.

Its impatience deepened into uneasiness when Sir Austen Chamberlain made his cautious reference at Birmingham last week—apropos the Kellogg proposal and France's objections to it—to the inadvisability of throwing over old friends to gain new ones.

J. L. Garvin voiced his uneasiness in an editorial in the Sunday Observer. Mr. Garvin has been an ardent supporter of the American proposal from the first and the Observer's attitude caused no surprise

But the London Times, which as a rule voices the Foreign Office viewpoint, and which is generally considered a supporter of Sir Austen Chamberlain's policy, expresses this public impatience with the delay of the Secretary for Foreign Affairs in ranging Great Britain definitely on the side of the proposal. What is more, it by inference chides him for the way in which he expressed himself at Birmingham which "caused some not unnatural misunderstanding."

"The attitude of the last French note, continues the London Times, "was specifically and narrowly French. It did not represent the British view, nor could there have been a question of this country ranging itself on the French as opposed to the American side of the discussion.

Wanted Position Stated Clearly.

"It can be assumed and has already been shown that British opinion in this country and the Dominions is very strongly in favor of the general principles of the American proposal. It would be an advantage if that could be stated more formally and emphatically than the Foreign Secretary stated it at Birmingham when he said: "Such initiative from such a source is too valuable for any one of us to allow it to slip through our hands."

"If other things being on the way to settlement, the matter be considered as between the British Empire and America, how do we stand? The opportunity of formally and solemnly renouncing war as an instrument of policy in dealings between the Republic and the Empire cannot be missed.

"It would be an immense relief if the possibility of war between the British and American peoples on whatever ground could be eliminated for as far ahead as we can now see and imagine. It is impossible that the British government should not explore to the full and in a cheerful spirit the possibilities of this American initiative.

"The United States is in fact for the first time for years entering upon international negotiations. That is all the greater reason why the British government should strongly support this initiative. It is doing so, no doubt. Why should not it demonstrate this fact to the world?" It

SAYS ENGLISH DESCENDANTS OF TEN TRIBES

Rev. Pascoe Goard Traces Descent of Various Peoples of Northern Europe.

DIFFER FROM JEWS.

Some of Northern Nations Have Lost Book—King George's Descent Traced.

The origin of the different peoples who settled in the British Isles has been traced to the very district in which the Ten Tribes of Israel were lost sight of when they were carried away captive by the Assyrians in 721 B.C. and utterly disappeared from history, declared Rev. Pascoe Goard, LL.D., F.R.G.S., in his address at the Canadian Legion Hall last night.

Pascoe Goard's address was most interesting and educational, for he showed how the lost Ten Tribes of Israel could be no other people today than the English races and a few other northern European nations that have accepted the Bible.

He gave enough evidence to show that the British company of nations were the direct descendants of God's chosen people, who were punished for their wickedness (Leviticus, chapter 26), but were ultimately to be reinstated in the favor of God (Ezekiel, chapter 36).

"The first question," said the speaker, "that will naturally rise in your minds is 'Are you trying to make us out to be Jews?' No, not that. We have fallen into a strange system on naming things. Israelites and Jews have been synonymous but those names stand for two absolutely distinctively people. The Bible tells us that the house of Israel settled in the north of Palestine and the house of Judah in the south. The boundary was just the same as between America and Canada.

"Any man who takes the covenants and the prophecies and studies them will say that the Jews have failed in their promisess."

Mr. Goard, who is in the confidence of the English government, declared that it was the opinion of the political leader of Empire to-day, that its institutions are faced with a greater danger than at any time during the Great War.

"The word British is derived from two Hebrew words and the British names and titles go right back to the Hebrew, the mother tongue, but I do not build much on this.

'Beginning 1,000 B.C. Israel separated from Judah, and since then both have had their place in the Bible. What became of Israel? They are not included in the Babylonian race, but we have one way of identifying them. They must be a kingdom for the promise was made that the throne of David would last, so there it must be, a dynasty at least 3,000 years old. There is not a kingdom in Europe that can fill this qualification. Japan might be considered, but the history of the ruling house does not go back to the sev-

Budget Discussed In London Commons

LONDON, May 3.— (Canadian Press Cable.)— The budget discussion was continued in the House of Commons yesterday with Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, absent on account of an indisposition. A mild sensation was caused by the financial secretary of the treasury, A. M. Samuel, accepting a Conservative amendment reducing the duty on home made mechanical lighters by half. The amendment was subsequently withdrawn following the intervention of the chief Conservative whip. The opposition declared that the Premier's pledge that no protection would be introduced "by the back door" would be violated by acceptance of the amendment.

TEACHER SAVES HERBERT BOLEN FROM DROWNING

Miss Beatrice Wilson Wades Into Deep Pool to Rescue Boy.

LAD FELL FROM RAFT.

Was Playing On Pond Formed in Old Clay Pit Near High Street.

Herbert Bolen, aged seven, of No. 29 New Chamberlain street, had a narrow escape from drowning when he fell from a raft in a pond near his home. The water was several feet deep, and only the opportune passing of Miss Beatrice Wilson, a teacher at May's school house, prevented the boy from being drowned.

Miss Wilson waded out into the pool and brought the boy to dry land, where Dr. G. R. Scott, Dr. D. W. Clark, and the city firemen with the pulmotor, applied resuscitation. The boy was brought around spedily and is now quite recovered.

The pond is formed every spring in a pit which is a relic of an old brick yard which was once located on High street, and provides a favorite amusement centre for the boys of the district until the water soaks away.

MRS. R. M. WADDELL IS WINNER OF QUILT

Draw Made at Regular Meeting of Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Mrs. R. M. Waddell was the lucky winner of the Confederation quilt, which was drawn for at the regular meeting of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., held yesterday afternoon, with a splendid attendance in the green room of the Y.W.C.A.

The regent, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, was in the chair. Nine new members joined the Chapter.

Mrs. F. L. Robinson was appointed as a delegate to the National convention of the I.O.D.E., beginning in Toronto on May 28th.

A very fine report of the recent provincial convention in Hamilton, was given by Mrs. K. S. Wightman, a summary of which will appear in a later issue.

Nationalist Forces Closing In On Peking

LONDON, May 3.— (A.P.)— The Nationalist forces apparently are closing in on Peking. Even though hampered by bad roads and some show of defence by the Northerners they not only have occupied Tainan, capital of Shantung province, but according to advices from Peking have driven the Northern defenders back in the province of Shanhi.

Spanish Fliers Take-Off On Sunday On Attempted Non-Stop Hop To Havana

SEVILLE, Spain, May 3 (A.P.),—The Spanish army aviators, Jiminez and Iglesias, probably will leave at dawn Sunday, May 6, on an attempted non-stop flight to Havana, Cuba, it was learned here yesterday

The aviators are considering two routes; one along a northern course which would take them over Newfoundland, and the other to the south over the Canary Islands and thence to the Antilles.

Considerable excitement prevails here over the prospective start. The plane of the aviators, recently christened "Jesus de Gran Poder"—or in English, "Jesus of the Mighty Power"—has been fitted to carry 5,000 litres of gasoline for the trip.

The aviators themselves during their stay here have occupied themselves with the final preparations for their start.

Two Thurlow Residents Injured In Crossing Crash Near Belleville

BELLEVILLE, May 3 (Canadian Press).—Benjamin A. Clarke and Barton Fairman, residents of the 5th Concession of Thurlow and employed at the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company, Corbyville, are in the Belleville General Hospital seriously injured and not expected to recover, the result of their car being struck by the Madoc mixed freight due in Belleville at 5.10 yesterday.

The car was a complete wreck and was hurled some distance into the ditch. Fairman suffered injuries to his head and arms as well as internal injuries, while Clark received internal injuries of a serious nature. Doctors Tennant, Wallbridge and Faulkner, C.N.R. physicians, are in attendance.

The injured men left the plant shortly before 5 o'clock for their home in a car. Mr. Fairman is an aged man, having been employed at the Industrial Alcohol for over twenty-five years, and Mr. Clarke drove him each day. As the car reached the crossing, the train hove in sight, and it is thought the engine of the car choked and stalled. The car was struck broadside. Clarke, before being operated on in the hospital, confirmed the supposition of the stalled motor, stating that when he stepped on the gas the engine choked.

ARCTIC FLIERS EXPECTED TO RETURN SOON

Will Ship Plane Back By Steamer Inger Elizabeth May 15th.

WILKINS WRITING BOOK.

Hope To Leave On Steamer Hobby Within Short While.

GREEN HARBOR, Spitzbergen, May 3 (Associated Press).—Captain George H. Wilkins and Lieut. Carl B. Eielson, ice-bound here after their flight over the Arctic regions from Alaska, expect to be able to start by boat soon for Norway.

They plan first to fly their plane over to Advent Bay, another Spitsbergen harbor about a hundred miles distant, for shipment aboard the steamer Inger Elizabeth, due to leave for Norway on May 15. They will take off on the ice and doubtless land on the ice.

Wilkins himself hoped to be able to leave on board the steamer Hobby within five or six days, and Eielson may possibly accompany the plane, although nothing definitely has been decided about that.

Wilkins and his co-pilot are in the meantime still receiving heaps of telegrams from all parts of the world. The Captain himself is writing a book which he says will be published on his return to the United States under the title "My Polar flights."

In a conversation with the Associated Press correspondent, the Australian explorer answered questions in a modest way on some points of his recent flight over the Polar regions and his general Arctic experience.

Possible to Live.

"Yes," Wilkins said, "it is absolutely possible to live in the Polar regions without taking provisions. We had guns with us for hunting and if we had been forced to land it certainly would have been possible for us to have maintained life. We did not see any animals on the way because we had no time to look for them.

Eielson had enough to do with piloting and I with making observations. But talking about game in the Arctic regions I can tell you that during my various stays in Alaska I have been accustomed to hunting on long trips carrying gun and ammunition only and no provisions."

Asked whether there yet remained much exploration work to be done in the Arctic, he answered "Yes, a tremendous amount. There are many cross flights still to be made; for instance, from Franz Joseph's Land to Alaska. One will then pass regions which nobody has hitherto flown over or explored in other ways."

Remarking on General Nobile's forthcoming flight, Captain Wilkins said: "I do not quite understand why he intends performing what Amundsen and we have already chartered. Both his expeditions with Amundsen and Commander Byrd have conquered the North Pole and the Amundsen flight went beyond to Alaska. The exploration of Nicholas II. Land, however, is something different.

Asked whether he intended to realize plans he entertained in 1925 to explore whaling conditions in the Antarctic, Captain Wilkins said: "I should like to very much, but don't really know. I am convinced much can be done in the Antarctic with aeroplane mostly for commercial purposes.

To a question as to whether he believed future air routes would go across the North Polar region, he responded "Why not? The distance is shorter, in summer there is daylight all the time, there are many landing places, vast and good ones, especially near Alaska, although here in Spitzbergen it is more difficult to find them on account of the screw ice."

COMMEND WORK OF THE PASTOR

Final Meeting of Official Board for Seymour Charge of United Church.

PASS RESOLUTION

SEYMOUR, May 3.—The following resolution regarding the ordination of women was passed at the final meeting of the official board for this conference year of the Seymour charge, of the United Church of Canada was held on Monday, April 30 at the parsonage:

We feel that owing to the fact that the women's organizations of the church generally are not asking for ordination and whereas the case in question is that of a special request and whereas we feel the ordination of women to the ministry would have a tendency to relieve the challenge for the ministry to our young men, upon whom we believe it rightly falls and whereas we believe the time is not opportune for such an advance in the church, we, therefore ,as members of the official board of Seymour charge of the United Church of Canada, would declare ourselves as not in favor of the ordination of women to the ministry of the church at the present time.

After many words of commendation of the work of the pastor for his services during the past four years, a committee retired and brought in the following resolution which was unanimously adopted.

Realizing, according to the present church arrangements the following is not necessary, but owing to the fact that this year is the consummation of the old term of four years of pastoral relation and wishing to let our pastor know the feeling of the charge in this matter as the voice of our people place ourselves on record as highly commending the work of our pastor, the Rev. Charles D. Daniel and strongly urge that the present pastoral relations be continued.

FROSTS HARD ON FALL WHEAT

Much Damage Done in Cavan District by Cold Weather.

HOGS SHIPPED

CAVAN, May 3.—The severe frosts have been very hard on the fall wheat, which does not look as well as it did some time ago. Some farmers have quite decided to tear it up and sow something else, while others are waiting a few days longer to see what warmer weather will do.

Hogs Shipped

Messrs. Tinney and Lang shipped hogs from Cavan station on Monday. It was not their regular shipping day, but on account of a few farmers wanting to get rid of their hogs this week they shipped. The price paid was nine and a quarter. About fifteen or twenty hogs were shipped.

ANCIENT RITES ARE OBSERVED AS ARLEN WEDS

Marriage Ceremony at Cannes, France, Was Colorful Affair.

CHORUS OF COSSACKS.

Patriarch of Russian Church, Who Married Bride's Parents, Officiated.

CANNES, France, May 3.—(United Press.) — The romantic flare with which Michael Arlen enlivens his novels dominated the religious ceremony which united the author of the Green Hat and Countess Atlanta Mercati yesterday.

As the Patriarch Ostroumoff, venerable archbishop of the Russian church, finished the phrases of the ceremony, a chorus of Cossacks, all former officers in the white Russian army, commanded by the late General Baron Peter Wrangel, filled the edifice with the melodious strains of Russian hymns.

The prelate, now 73, had married the parents of the beautiful countess many years ago.

Splendid Affair.

The ceremony, rich in ritual, lasted about an hour, because of the complicated nature of the orthodox ceremonial, which included the picturesque details of crowning and anointing under a canopy of gold grocade held by four attendants of the bridegroom.

The countess wore a rich ivory satin gown with a train of old Alencon lace and real orange blossoms.

CAR IS BURNED.

HASTINGS, May 3. — Joseph Gould's car was destroyed by fire on Sunday last. Mr. Gould was driving at a moderate rate of speed, and noticed his engine was becoming somewhat heated and the varnish on the dashboard beginning to blister, and smoke was rising from beneath the footboards. Suddenly a mass of flames shot up in front of him. He at once applied the brakes and got out on the running board to steer the car off the road. The top and the entire body were soon a mass of flames. Very little insurance was carried by Mr. Gould on his car.

THREE CHARGED WITH STEALING

Series of Thefts From Farms in Northumberland and Other Counties Cleared Up.

HEARING AT WOOLER.

COBOURG, May 3. — E. R. Weatherall, Murray township farmer, and his two hired men, Edward and Wilbur Hart, are in jail here, facing charges of stealing chickens and sheep from farmers in four counties. They appear for preliminary hearing at Wooler on May 5.

Arrests followed investigation by Provincial Constable Harry Story of Cobourg, and Inspector W. H. Lough eed of Belleville, into a series of thefts dating back for nearly a year. Farmers in Hastings, Northumberland, Durham and Prince Edward Counties reported sheep, chickens and potatoes stolen.

Police claim that Weatherall has admitted the theft of sheep from one farmer and chickens from two or three others. The two hired men are said to have admitted stealing chickens.

SOCIETY MEETS AT HAVELOCK

Mrs. C. H. Roberts Receives Presentation From Members of Ladies' Aid.

APPRECIATION FOR WORK

HAVELOCK, May 3.—At a meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the United Church on Wednesday of last week, Mrs. C. H. Roberts was presented with a beautiful autógraph quilt as a slight token of appreciation for her faithful and capable leadership as president the presentation being made on behalf of the members by Mrs. George Rigby. A pretty design was embroidered on each block in addition to the names and on the centre block were the words "Presented to Mrs. C. H. Roberts by the Ladies of the United Church, Havelock, 1928."

Mrs. Robert, also taken completely by surprise, replied in appreciative terms.

Springville

SPRINGVILLE, May 3. — On Sunday the Rev. A. H. McConnachie delighted his audience with a description of Gipsy Smith and his great work in Toronto during the past weeks.

Mr. McConnachie was privileged to hear his wonderful discourse to the ex-service men on Wednesday evening and on Sunday shared his pleasure with his congregation.

At 6.30 over one thousand people had gathered outside of Massey Hall awaiting the opening of the doors. Early in the evening the great hall was filled and hundreds were turned away. Gipsy Smith took charge of the proceedings from the beginning and although a very unassuming person, showed himself a master of his work. His whole appearance radiated his Christ-like life. The ex-soldiers in the audience were his friends, showing their agreement with his stories by answering in unison in the affirmative or negative. His stories of life in and behind the trenches were awe-inspiring and proved how his extremely understanding nature helped him guide the soldiers to Christ as their Saviour.

The results of his meeting on Wednesday night when great numbers of ex-soldiers pledged their lives to Jesus Christ again proved their love for Him in their willingness to try and follow the life that he held before them as an example.

Rutherford and accompanied by an appropriate address read by Mrs. G. Rigby.

At 2.20 on Wednesday afternoon, the fire brigade was called to 302 Park street north. A painter, in burning off some old paint preparatory to a fresh coating apparently struck an opening which allowed the flame from his blow torch to set fire to some sawdust and shavings in the gables. Damage amounting to $100.00 resulted though the firemen used the 35-gallon chemical.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND SALLIE'S PARTY.

Looking at the puzzle picture Uncle Wiggily had drawn, the Black Bear kept on scratching his head, for the bad chap, covered with white road dust as he was, tried to think hard.

"Can't you do that puzzle, Mr. Whitewash?" asked the rabbit, for he still thought the animal who had come to invite him to the five hills to see the beautiful sunset was the Polar Bear. "Name the five men who are supposed to be behind the five picture hills, holding up the things they work with!" said Mr. Longears.

"Dear me! What a hard puzzle!" growled the Bear, and he scratched his head harder, which made the white dust come off, showing the black fur beneath. And when Uncle Wiggily saw the black fur he knew it was a trick. Snatching away from the Black Bear the piece of bark on which the pictures were drawn, Uncle Wiggily quickly hopped into his bungalow, locked the door and shouted:

"You can't fool me! I'll not go to the five hills with you to see the sunset. You aren't Mr. Whitewash at all! Go on back to the other bad chaps who sent you to catch me! I know you, Black Bear!"

With that the Bear gave himself a shake and all the white dust scattered off showing him in all his blackness. The Bear was very angry and would have rushed into the hollow stump bungalow to get Uncle Wiggily. But the rabbit gentleman telephoned for the Police Dog, who came and barked so loudly that the Black Bear shuffled away. Then Uncle Wiggily told the Police Dog the answers to the five hills puzzle.

"Behind one hill was a mason, holding up his trowel," said the rabbit. "Behind another hill was a soldier, with a bayonet on his gun. Back of the middle hill a carpenter held up his hammer. Now take the other two hills. Behind one was a postman with a letter and behind the other a milkman with a bottle of milk."

"Ha! Ha! Bow! Wow!" laughed the Police Dog. "It's very easy when you know the answer. But be careful about going out to the five hills to see the sunset, Uncle Wiggily."

"I shall!" promised the rabbit; and he was just going in to eat his supper of cabbage shortcake with lettuce cookies when, all of a sudden, there was a rustling noise in the bushes. "My goodness me, sakes alive!" cried the rabbit uncle, twinkling his pink nose. "The Bad Chaps are coming back!" He jumped into his bungalow, but before he could close the door, a gentle voice chattered:

"Are you coming to my party, Unkie Wig?" And there stood Sister Sallie, the little chipmunk girl, who was a cousin to Johnnie and Billie Bushytail, the squirrels.

"Your party, Sallie?" said Uncle Wiggily, no longer frightened. "I didn't know you were going to have a party."

"Oh, but I am, Unkie Wig—this evening—and I 'specially invite you to come. Listen!" Sallie whispered. "We're going to have ice-cream!"

"I'll be sure to come!" promised Mr. Longears.

Then he went in to eat his supper of carrot longcake with clover crackers and soon he was dressed to go to Sallie's party.

"Aren't you going to take her a present?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"Of course, I am," said Mr. Longears, wrapping something in red tissue paper. Then he hopped away over the fields and through the woods to the tree-house where Sister Sallie lived. There was laughter and singing and when Uncle Wiggily hopped in he handed Sallie a box on which were four pictures, just as you see here.

"There are pictures of four kinds of nuts, Sallie," said Uncle Wiggily. "They are puzzle nuts for you to crack. If you can tell me their names you may keep this present."

ALBERTA COAL.

Alberta coal of best quality is being brought into Ontario in quantities at the present time, and the opportunity is being given to the consumers of this Province to test thoroughly the Western article.

For years there has been an agitation to have Ontario secure a large portion of her fuel supply from Canadian coal fields, a step the wisdom of which should be generally recognized.

Difficulties in the way largely centred upon the cost of transportation, but under the present plan this obstacle will not be encountered in the next three years, and the way is paved for Alberta coal to capture at least a share of the local market.

Already the anthracite producers are campaigning to maintain their hold, and are to conduct an advertising campaign to sell hard coal in Ontario.

All of which means that it will be necessary for the friends of Alberta coal and for those who realize the importance of Canadians buying coal at home to use every effort to see that the Canadian fuel gets a fair chance to prove its quality.

THAT FEDERAL GRANT.

Peterborough is very much concerned with the success or otherwise of the deputation which is to wait upon Hon. Peter Heenan to-day in an effort to have the Federal grant toward vocational training continued.

Since 1919 the Dominion Government has paid 25 per cent. of the cost of vocational educational where Provincial Governments make a similar grant, but this arrangement expires next year, and it has been announced from Ottawa that there will be no renewal of this assistance.

If the deputation, which will represent many school boards in Ontario and Quebec, the Quebec delegation to be headed by Premier Taschereau, is unsuccessful in inducing the Government to change its mind, Peterborough will suffer after this year through the loss of twenty-five per cent. of the cost of maintenance and salaries, although, fortunately, the grant will be paid in regard to the capital cost of the new Collegiate and of the equipment bought this year.

The loss of this grant will be a serious matter to Peterborough and other communities, unless the Provincial Government increases its grant to make up for the loss of revenue represented by the announced action of the Federal administration.

AN INFORMATION BUREAU.

Suggestions as to an information bureau for tourists have been brought forward by several citizens, and there is much in their contention that such an office, situated where it would be easily located by visitors, would prove of much benefit, primarily to tourists and eventually to the whole community, in the favorable impression it would create.

True the Chamber of Commerce has been doing a very useful work in this respect, but that organization has many other activities to take care of, and in addition, the location of its headquarters in offices upstairs is a drawback.

A bureau with some one in charge who knows the whole district thoroughly, who would be able to answer questions as to conditions and accommodation at the various resorts, who would be in a position to direct visitors to any point in the section, would be of great service.

To such an official the proprietors of summer resorts in the vicinity of Peterborough would be able to report at least once a week the number of guests they could accommodate, information that should be readily available in order that tourists might be intelligently directed.

The tourist industry is one of the most profitable that the Peterborough district possesses, and should be developed and enlarged by providing every facility that will help our visitors and create in them a desire to come back and bring their friends here.

THE MANUFACTURERS' COMMITTEE.

Here and there throughout the city and along its fringes builders are busy erecting the signs of spring, concrete foundations and various forms of superstructure that will gradually evolve into houses. These are seasonal signs of renewing vitality, and a moment's recollection unreels in the memory of the native observer phantom films of Peterborough's substantial, if unhurried, expansion. Vacant fields of a few years ago are filling up with attractive houses that will soon be homes. Slowly but surely the city is extending its domain into its neighboring townships.

In these reassuring signs of sedate and unperspiring progress, both urban and suburban property owners may find subjects that stir up confidence and satisfaction, but deep down in the community's heart is a repressed desire for a solid boom, a glorious splurge that would inject new value, and plenty of it, into old lots that have been too long innocent of unearned increment.

One factor that is hampering Peterborough is the people's indifference or inarticulateness toward the main department that might promote the city's growth. The word department connotes a condition of organization and policy that is not continuous in the municipal committee upon which this very important opportunity devolves.

The selection of the Manufacturers' Committee of the City Council is generally a deplorably casual shuffle. It may not be an exaggeration to say that the Finance Committee, the Board of Works and probably the Fire, Water and Light Committee take precedence over the Manufacturers' in the annual hand-out of so-called honors, the several chairmanships. And so it happens that once in a blue moon the city is served in this committee by an alderman who has the personal qualifications for the position. A year or two of exuberant activity, of inflating ambitions, of restless effort, and then a long relapse. Follows a succession of amiable but inert chairmen, who achieved "the honor" by some degree of seniority, the customary, possibly the essential, qualification.

And so the position may go, and does often go, to some alderman whose vision of his opportunity and obligation does not extend much beyond a trip or two to Toronto, and, if Fate smiles through some favoring pretext, perhaps a junket to Montreal.

THROWING AWAY EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. R. M. Hamilton, D.D., of Brockville, protests against the attempt of certain members of one church to refuse to extend calls to men over a certain age, "say fifty years." He says that no body of workers are so shabbily treated as the clergymen of the country in regard to the period of their service. "Businessmen are not so handicapped; they hold their places so long as they are efficient, and this applies to all workers in the activities of life; but the ministers of experience, possessing the qualities that make for usefulness, are cast out because years are their misfortune.

We are not informed as to the reasons which have actuated the church members in question, and therefore are not qualified to pass judgment on them, but on the general question Dr. Hamilton seems to have right on his side. Young men would be discouraged from entering the ministry if they understood that their services would not be required after fifty years of age. In politics a man of fifty is rated as young, and there are many men active in business and the professions far beyond that age.

So long as his faculties remain unimpaired, a minister's usefulness should increase with age. He is consulted and made the recipient of confidences in the most intimate relations of life, and this wealth of human experience and knowledge of the human heart are among his most valuable qualifications. There are certain kinds of church work which require youthful activity, but it ought to be easy to obtain this kind of assistance out of the congregation. A minister of the gospel must be something more than a "go-getter" and organizer of whirlwind campaigns.

The pecuniary rewards of the pulpit are not great, and the minister must find his satisfaction in service. If he is told that his usefulness is to end at fifty or even considerably later, this inducement will be gone. No man likes the idea of being forced into idleness in years when his faculties are at their best and when he is capable of doing good work for humanity and the cause to which he has devoted years of study and service.—London Advertiser.

DIVORCE.

A report from the United States Children's Bureau says that one out of every five new marriages in the United States is taken to court. And a committee of the National Probation Association finds that divorce is the cause of an "incalculable loss to our civilization," urging as a remedy for family disruption the establishment of a "family or domestic relations court."

It is an appalling thing that 20 per cent. of the matrimonial ships of our neighboring Republic should land on the rocks, and it is not to be doubted that the children of these unions are the greatest sufferers. It is not surprising, of course, that children whose parents have separated should, as they grow older, esteem the marriage vow lightly and act accordingly. It seems to be a well-fixed state of mind across the line that marriage is only a convenient arrangement, to be severed at will. It means that many young persons decide on matrimony, secure in the conviction—and giving some consideration to that phase of the situation—that if they do not get on well together the bond is easily broken. This, of course, prejudices the success of the union from the start.

There are cases, undoubtedly, in which divorce of legal separation is the only way out in fairness to one or the other or both parties. It is equally indisputable, however, that the laxity of the American divorce system is a grave matter that must eventually work great harm. Marriage has been cheapened and even burlesqued. No wonder that divorces follow so quickly.

In Canada there has been a good deal of divorce argument of late, largely centering on the demand of the Rev. J. S. Woodsworth, Labor M.P., that a divorce court should be established in Ontario, and also that much stricter regulations should be set up to govern the remarriage of divorced persons. Mr. Woodsworth is not trying to facilitate the granting of divorces. Indeed, his proposed amendments to the law would materially change the whole situation by providing that a husband against whom a divorce petition has succeeded, must pay his wife alimony and maintain the children; compel the man to obtain a medical certificate of good health before being allowed to remarry, and prevent his remarriage altogether and make him liable to punishment as a criminal if he did so should the evidence in his divorce disclose him guilty of certain offences. Mr. Woodsworth believes the granting of divorces should be taken out of the hands of Parliament—where a committee of the Senate has, for years, looked after such matters—and turned over to a court in Ontario, as is done in several other Provinces.

It does seem that if divorces are to be granted they should come through the courts rather than through Parliament. In any event, the temper of the Canadian people will not be in favor of a system to make divorce easier. We have seen too many examples, across the line, of what an easy divorce system means, and few Canadians are desirous of having the American story repeated here.—Border Cities Star.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, May 3 (Canadian Press) — With the exception of some demand for odd lots of wheat, oats, and barley, the export trade in grain here yesterday was quiet. A feature of the domestic trade was the weaker feeling that developed in Canadian Western oats and prices were reduced one cent per bushel.

Owing to the further weakness in the cash wheat situation at Winnipeg the undertone to the market for spring wheat grades of flour was easier, but no actual change in prices was announced. The local and foreign demand was quiet. The tone of the winter wheat flour market was firm under a slow demand.

The trade in all lines of millfeed continued active under a continued good demand from United States buyers. The undertone to the market was firm. There was no change in standard grades of rolled oats, and business was quiet.

The egg market was moderately active and prices for all grades were firmly maintained. The receipts were 3,327 cases.

The demand for potatoes continued of a limited character, and the undertone was easy.

Extreme dullness marked the trade in imported beans, but prices were unchanged.

The feature of the butter trade was the further weakness that prevailed, and prices declined another ½ to ¾ cents per pound. This was attributed to the limited demand and the large supplies coming forward. The receipts were 515 packages.

There was practically no demand for cheese, and the market was dull and weaker. The receipts were 653 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 3 (Canadian Press). — Seven cents a bushel maximum broke in the value of wheat took place yesterday on top of nearly as great a smash the day before. Rains in Nebraska and Kansas yesterday and prospects of widespread moisture last night were largely responsible, heavy selling that accompanied yesterday's upset in prices and that appeared to imply substantially betterment of the crop outlook for domestic winter wheat.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous 2¼c to 5¼c net lower, corn 2½c to 3¼c down, oats ¾c to ⅞c off, and provisions showing a setback of 7c to 40c.

At first, the wheat market here tended upward, helped by an unlooked for advance at Liverpool, where speculative purchasing was in progress on account of uneasiness over drought which had been threatening United States winter wheat south-west and west.

Chicago price bulges, however, soon gave way when word came of showers in sections adjoining the drought

GOD'S MINUTE

For we know that all things work together for good...Romans 8:28.

O Lord how slow we are to recognize Thee when Thou comest in disguise. We know Thee when Thou comest in robes of light, but now when Thou art clothed in clouds. Help us to learn Thy ways, and to thank Thee for all that Thou doest. We would thank Thee when Thou puttest us into the fires of affliction, knowing that there Thou revealed Thyself as the gracious Sanctifier and great Deliverer. How often Thou hast come to us in lowly ways, and we have not seen Thee because we did not expect to see Thee there. Sometimes Thou comest to us in heaven's glowing chariots, and we do not mistake Thee then; but more often Thou comest through earth's common places, and like Mary, we suppose Thee to be the Gardener and not the Lord. But, O, may we as she, enquire of the gardener about Him Whom we love, and Thou mayest reveal Thyself to us as Thou didst to her. Thou hast been doing for each of us all that Thou didst for Thy saints of old, but the blight of unbelief has been upon us, and that which Thou didst design for blessing has been a curse. O, Lord, forgive! O Lord, forget! O Lord, prevent! To Thy wounds we flee and in Thy merits we hide. Wilt Thou Who hast given us life give us also spiritual sensibility, hearing, and sight, and taste for all that is divine. And now unto Thee, Father, Son, and Spirit, be glory and praise. Amen.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Sportsmanship.

My story would not be complete without giving you a handful of the material that built the foundation for my enjoyable life.

Now, as I see it, there is a great difference between a sport and a sportsman. As to the sport, I think the less said the better. But the word Sportsman spells a great many great words; first of all it spells others and self-sacrifice, for to be a real sportsman one cannot stand alone.

When I was a lad eight years of age and slept with my two brothers, I was awakened one morning by the touch of father's powerful hand, and he whispered, "Jack, do you want to go with me for a pigeon hunt?" and my bare feet were soon on the floor. About sunrise found father and me crouched in an old fencerow that bordered a wheat stubble, and the pigeons alighting, or trying to alight, on two dead-topped hickory trees that were in range of us. As they would hover, father would give them both barrels; and really, he made it rain pigeons for a while. Soon my little gamesack and father's hunting-coat pockets were filled to the limit and we were on our way back home, all smiles, and anxious to get there to tell how it all happened.

Father promised me when these pigeons were all eaten up he and I would go again. About the fourth day (or morning, I should say), we were off again; but to my disappointment father had invited another Englishman to go along, Mr. Thomas Perkins. Father called him Tommy. I was more disgusted than ever when we arrived at the shooting grounds, for what did father do but put Tommy in the same hiding and shooting place that we had occupied a few mornings previous, right between the two hickory trees, while he and I went across the field and watched by a big dead elm, where we had only seen a few flocks alight the previous morning. You see the pigeons would alight on these trees before flying down into the stubble.

The fun soon started. I say "fun" but to me it was a clear case of disgust, for every flock that came went to the two hickory trees, and father would almost lose control of himself, laughing, and chuckling over the way Tommy was rolling them down. "There" he said, "I am sure he killed eight that lick!"

Finally a flock or two came our way, and out of the four shots father fired we got only twelve, and really the dear man did not seem to be watching our side of the field, but got all his enjoyment out of his friend's success.

Finally Tommy waved his hand to us to go over, and as these two met, each tried to talk the faster. But as for me, I was disgusted right from my bare feet to my red hair; I did not have my little gamesack half full! However, I helped pick up pigeons and soon we were off for home. But every fence we came to, the morning's shoot was rehearsed by these two old English sportsmen. When we came to the spot where each went his way, Tommy reached out his hand and gripped father's in a firm-heart-warming way, as he said, "John, I want to thank you from the bottom of my 'eart. That's been the nicest bit of pigeon shooting, John, I hever 'ad." Then as he turned to go he stopped very suddenly. "Oh, 'ere," he said; "I don't want more than a half dozen of these birds, and you have a big family; 'ere, Jack, put um in your bag." And really the dear man loaded me down with pigeons.

That morning's sport did not stop there, but for the next forty-five years I had the enjoyment of hearing father occasionally rehearse the pleasure of seeing Tommy roll the pigeons down. And thus I was raised to know that when one invites another on a hunt, he is your guest, and the more pleasure your guest has, the greater your accomplishment.

Now I am a man that stands five feet, ten inches, and weighs about one hundred and eighty-five pounds; but this I am certain of: Any sportsman would have to be a bigger man to hold a bigger and a better time than I have had.

On the other hand, this earth does not produce bigger and better men than it has been my privilege to hunt and sleep with in the wilds of America, and I do not think there is a better place in this world to find out who you are associating with than when on a hunting expedition.

After my brother and I were accidentally separated I thought very little of going to the wilds again; but a bunch of my friends came to me and insisted that I go with them. As a result, a small party was organized and I went along, as what I considered a guest, for I was allowed to do anything I saw fit; they even carried the water, did all the cooking and sawed the wood, allowing me to do the splitting of it, as I understood the axe maybe a little the best. To say the least, we had one of those enjoyable outings, a good desire to go, plenty of food and plenty of game, and a good desire to come home.

After we were home and settled down with our loved ones again, one evening a rap came to my door, and on turning the knob, who should be there but my dear old hunting party, not loaded down with moose-meat, but with oysters, and they surprised me by their presence. But my surprise was, still greater when one of them rose up from the table, called me their leader, and read the following address:

"Our dear Gorilla Chief"

This, in all probability, will be the last meeting of the Quebec hunting party for 1901. If we should be permitted, in another year, to go again to the wilds of Quebec, there will possibly be some changes in our company—new members added, and some of our present members unable to be with us.

We wish to express to you, our leader, the thanks which are your due, for the kindness shown us all on our hunting excursion and ask you to accept this present as a token of our appreciation. We know that we could not have had a leader more thoughtful of our comfort and pleasure.

It is with grateful hearts that we remember that each was the equal of the others in your estimation, that no rough language was allowed in camp, and that when Sunday came round, no guns were shot off and the hymns of "home, sweet home" were sung and enjoyed by all.

That you may be permitted to lead hunting parties into Quebec for many years to come is the sincere wish of

Leonard Malott,
James Doan,
Wesley Ulch,
Elihu Scratch, Sec.

Actually, up till that minute I had had no thought of them looking upon me as their leader. The words contained in the address filled my living room, and I could hardly reply. But my thoughts drifted back to that September morning of 1873; and if this address were in its proper place, it would be engraved on the tombstones of those two dear old men who set me such a self-sacrificing example of good sportsmanship on that little pigeon hunt, so long ago.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE LOVE OURSELVES

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Narcissus, according to the Greek myth, was the son of Cephissus, a river-god, and Liriope, a nymph. Echo, a nymph, fell in love with him and pined away because of his neglect, only her voice remained. In punishment Nemesis made Narcissus fall in love with his own reflection in a lake. Narcissus in turn pined away and was changed into the flower that bears his name.

Freudians make use of this myth as an illustration of a certain type of nervous disorder in which the patient fixes his love on himself even as Narcissus fell in love with his reflection in the water. The malady goes by the name of Narcism.

In modified form Narcism is applicable to normal people as well. Like all other pathological cases it represents a distorted picture of the normal.

We are all born egoistic and self-centered. Unless the tendency is effectively checked by social contacts, self-importance may lead to self love. There are various shades and degrees of self love from plain unadulterated conceit and egotism to megalomania.

The megalomaniac is insane on the subject of his own greatness. It is an obsession. In every insane asylum there are a number of such who regard themselves as superior mortals. They attribute their confinement to the lack of appreciation on the part of the public and find consolation in the idea that as soon as they die the world will realize the great error and make up for it by erecting monuments to their memory.

We are all in love with ourselves at the outset as infants and young children but manage to get over it after a while, after we have rubbed elbows with others and have discovered our failings. There are those, however, who remain children in this and perhaps in other respects. They never get over their delusion of greatness. Others come back to it with a vengeance as the result of some real or fancied bit of success that quite sets them up. Fundamentally the drive of self love is the self-regarding impulse of self-assertion and the desire to show off, to do something big and impressive.

LADIES STUDY GREAT ARTISTS

Miss Mamie McCarthy Gives Paper on Characteristics of Some Men.

Miss Mamie L. McCarthy spoke on "The Characteristics of Great Artists" at this week's meeting of the Art Study Club of the Women's Art Association, held at the home of Mrs. H. W. Morphet, Hunter St.

Michaelangelo Bounarotti was was spoken of first, called "the giant of them all," with grandeur and power, might and vigor, as his chief characteristic. Raphael, his contemporary, had a life that was short but full of happiness, in contrast to the stormy, turbulent and sad existence of Michaelangelo. The later is noted chiefly for his sublime imagination and the incomparable beauty of his painted faces.

The third great Italian of this time was Leonardo da Vinci, a man of great learning, a painter, sculptor, writer, scientist and philosopher. He insisted on minute attention to detail and his portraits are noted for this characteristic.

In Spain, Diego Rodriguez de Silvay Velasquez was the descendant of an old and noble family. He was court painter of Madrid and made Phillip Fourth of Spain his chief model. When he painted, Pope Innocent Tenth, he made all the accessories of the picture red-the chair, robe, cap and curtain, although the Pope's complexion was the same trying color. The result was said to be wonderful, a picture stately and noble, full of force, expression and character. He was a master of truth and simplicity and sought always to express the mind and character of his sitter. He excelled in chiroscuro and atmosphere and was a peerless draughtsman.

The style of Rembrant of Holland is full of power, color and depth. He was a master of light and shadow and his later works increased in softness of outline. Orpen says of him, that he was "inspired with imagination of the noblest kind..., not merely fancy, but a strong, self-controlled poetic imagination not unlike that of Milton."

Turning to England, Miss McCarthy referred to Constable and Turner.

John Constable had little success with his painting until, at the age of forty, he married Maria Bicknell. From that time his style improved by leaps and bounds. He was a great innovator. His chief aim was to disprove the dictum of Sir George Beaumont, who voiced the prevalent opinion of the time that "a good picture must be like a good violin.... brown." His greatest art lay in his ability to depict Nature in all her moods, the gleam of light and shadow on green foliage, the glow of sunlight, the shade of passing clouds.

His greatest contemporary was Joseph Mallord Turner, who has been acclaimed by Ruskin as one of the greatest artists of all time. His favorite medium was water-color and in this he worked with delicacy and distinction, freedom and spontaneity. His water-colors represent the last word in this difficult, but fascinating art. In this medium, he employed different methods, the first that of a free, swift application of color, blurring in objects as he desired, and the second, in using a series of thin washes of color, laid one on top of the other, until he was satisfied with the result. His last method seems to have produced his most beautiful and ethereal pictures. He found, however, that to hold his public, he must resort to oil as a medium, and in this acheived some wonderful results.

Miss McCarthy concluded with a reference to the three great founders of the Pre-Raphaelite movement in England; Holland Hunt, Dante Gabriel Rossetti and John Everett Millais, who, in their early twenties, met and formed the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood.

Their aim in portraiture, like that of Turner and Constable in landscape, was to depict, with meticulous care, all that they saw in Nature. Their pictures show how they succedded. Their work was derided by the art critics of England until Ruskin made himself their advocate, when the tide began to turn. Holman Hunt is distinguished especially by his nobility of subject and thought, Millais by his painting of life exactly as he saw it, and Rossetti by his beautiful success and a baronetcy and married the wife of Ruskin, divorced by the latter.

$50,000 TO QUEEN'S FOR PUBLIC HEALTH

KINGSTON, May 3. — Although the name of the donor is being with held it was announced at Queen's University yesterday that a distinguished citizen of Chicago has offered to contribute $50,000 in five instalments of $10,000 each, for the establishment of a chair in preventive medicine and public health. He desires to do this in honor of a friend, Dr. Arthur Elliott, a graduate of Queen's, who formerly practised in Belleville.

Principal Taylor has communicated with the Ontario government, which, it is understood, is willing to cooperate and make Queen's Medical College the centre of its health department for Eastern Ontario. This would result in a yearly contribution from the government. The university also hopes to interest one or more of the large foundation funds, and will endeavor to secure from them enough money to erect a public health building, which would cost about $200,000.

Old-Fashioned washday methods have gone

...modern women have whiter clothes—yet save hours of hard work

OLD days—old ways. What woman who uses Rinso would go back to them?

To-day women have in Rinso the greatest wash day help that science can give them. It soaks clothes clean. Little or no rubbing to do and no boiling. Gone is the long, steamy, back-breaking wash day of years ago. Rinso has banished such drudgery. Clothes now soak in rich Rinso suds—then a light rub here and there. Rinse, and white clothes are whiter—coloured things brighter than ever before.

In the hard water of the prairies, the soft water of the cisterns and the medium water of the cities, Rinso is helping women everywhere to get a snowy wash on the line easier and earlier. Your nearest grocer will tell you how many women in your district use nothing but Rinso for washing clothes. Get a package and try it yourself.

MAN ARRESTED FOR OLD CRIME

Syrian Taken Near Hearst Held For Murder of Inspector Constable.

SAID TO HAVE CONFESSED.

HEARST, Ont., May 3 (Canadian Press). — After a brief hand to hand struggle in a shack in the wilds near Coppell, on the Algoma Central Railway, Railway Policeman Robert Sharpe arrested a Syrian who is suspected of being implicated in the murder nineteen months ago of Inspector Harry Constable, of the Ontario Provincial Police. Inspector Constable was shot on the street in Cochrane in October, 1926, and since then the widest search for his slayer has been unavailing. It is asserted, however, that the Syrian now in the Hearst Jail has confessed to Constable Sharpe that he killed Inspector Constable. The suspect was taken yesterday after the officer had travelled on a speeder on the railway from Hearst to Coppell, and had then taken to snowshoes to make his way, alone and unarmed, to a shack in the woods, where he found the wanted man, suffering from hunger and fatigue.

RADIO AND DRUGS KEEP FLIER AWAKE

Lieut. Royal Thomas Tries To Break Endurance Record Alone.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, Long Island, May 3 (Canadian Press).—Serenaded by his tiny radio set and with only "My right hand as relief pilot," Lieut. Royal Thomas circled over Long Island to-day in his Bellanca monoplane Reliance in an attempt to set a new endurance flight record. He took off at 12.30 yesterday afternoon and must remain in the air until 7.06.40 tomorrow night to break the present record. In addition to his radio set, which he hoped might help him keep awake, Lieut. Thomas took along some drugs which he said he would use if necessary to ward off sleep. He said he had worked out a system so that his controls could be fixed and the ship fly itself while he dozed.

CANNED FOODS WHOLESOME

The title of "Canned Goods" is generally restricted to foods put up in tin cans and sterilized by heating. The object in all kinds of canning is the same, that is, to kill all micro-organisms started, and then by the exclusion of all air to prevent any new ones from gaining entrance. Micro-organisms speedily render any food unfit for consumption because they induce fermentation.

There are many varieties of canned foods on the market. All kinds of food, including fish, poultry, meat, vegetables, fruit, etc., are put up in cans, and the United States stands today as the foremost exponent of canned goods, the output of this country being considerably greater than the total of all other parts of the world combined.

The first method of canning was a process invented by a Frenchman named Francois Apperp, a little more than a hundred years ago, and has been improved and amplified by modern mechanical devices and equipment. In this country the canning of all kinds of foods developed very rapidly during the Civil War period. The industry has gradually expanded because of the need of a greater conservation of vegetables and perishable goods of every kind. Today our canneries serve the need largely as community kitchens in which all the rough and dirty work of preparing vast quantities of food is done for the convenience and nourishment of enumerable households. Thousands of acres of fruit, grain, and vegetable land, and great herds of cows, and fisheries, are dedicated to their service.

The details in cannery methods vary with different foods. Some foods are placed in the cans in a raw condition, and others are first blanched or parboiled, as with asparagus, beans, and peas.

The time required to insure sterilization varies. With some vegetables, those of a tougher texture require a longer time for the full heat to penetrate to the center of the can; also, because of their peculiar composition, some foods need a very long processing.

As long as fresh, sound foods are used, if sterilization has been complete and if the cans are very tight, the contents, whether meat, vegetables or fruit, will be of equal nutritive value to those cooked in the household. Some dietitians argue that the vitamin content is lowered by food standing in a can for months before it is used, but there is no evidence to show that this decrease is very great.

Some of the best canned foods to use are: spinach, asparagus, string beans, corn, French artichokes, pineapple, (especially if prepared without syrup) and olives.

When using canned foods of any kind, be sure and examine the contents carefully as soon as the can is opened, and empty out into a dish. If there is a strong odor noted upon opening the can, this should always be regarded as a danger signal, whether with fish or any other food, and irrespective of the shape or appearance of the can.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. J. H. I. writes: "I read your advice every day and think it is wonderful. Will you please tell me what causes the feeling as if there is a lump in one's throat? My doctor tells me it is nervousness. The ten years I have had this trouble have been terrible to me."

Answer: The nervousness you are suffering from and the lump in your throat are doubtless caused by some form of thyroid derangement, perhaps a small goitre. Another cause of a choking feeling in the throat comes from pelvic disorders, such as metritis, enteritis, or from rectal trouble.

Question: R. J. asks: "When fasting on orange juice can one drink, during the day, water in which vegetables have been cooked?"

Answer: If you wish to take the vegetable juice diet you should not do so while taking the orange juice. You might try the vegetable juice one day and the orange juice the next.

Question: Mrs. B. asks: "Will you please tell me the food elements of gelatin?"

Answer: Gelatin is a form of protein, very beneficial to the body as a food. Those in health will find it advantageous to include it in the diet quite often, and it is tremendously helpful to those inclined to nose-bleed, on account of its blood-coagulating powers.

Question: K. L. writes: "I have used cocoa-butter for four weeks for a thin face, but it has not helped. Can you suggest anything better?"

Answer: There is not much you can do for a thin face except through increasing the circulation through the tissues you will be able to make a "simplier" face. This applies to the fat as well as the thin face.

NOTES ON THE RABBIT.

(By J. Abraham.)

While judging the rabbit section at the Y.M.C.A. hobby show April 12th, it struck me how the much despised rabbit might be turned into a paying hobby, in view of the future scarcity of the fur bearing animals in this and almost every other country. The rabbit pelts are being used extensively in some countries and raising the animals is fast becoming a thriving industry. It just depends on what breed of rabbit one keeps.

The breed most favored at the present time os the Chinchilla, or the blue Bevren, because of the demand for this fur. In Canada the favorites is the Chinchilla and there are quite a number of fair specimens in the city of Peterborough. This breed was first put in the show pen about 20 years ago in the old country, but really came into its own round about 1914. Since then it has made rapid strides. It was first brought to the fancy in France, but has since been greatly improved in coat, etc. It was imported to the old country from France, which in turn exported the breed to a great many countries.

Dealing with local specimens, I notice some of the exhibits were a little on the light side as to color, and some inclined to form a dewlap. This must be prevented if for exhibition, as it practically disqualifies the specimen. The Chinchilla should weigh, buck 5½ pounds, doe 6 to 7 pounds. As to color under part should be slate blue, and the lower sides or flanks of a pearl grey, running into darker grey and black and white. The whole of the remainder of body should be tipped black and evenly tecked. You will find the pell or back of the neck inclined to be red. This will take a long time to breed out. The chest should be tecked also. The ears should be short and perfectly upright and the eyes soft brown, large and bright. The whole coat should be about one inch in length.

There is another breed I would recommend to those who desire the rabbit for a hobby, the Flemish Giant. This is a much larger breed. Standard weight for bucks is 11 pounds and for does 13 pounds. I have seen does weighing 18 and 19 pounds each. In Kitchener, Ontario, the Flemish Giant breeding is quite an industry on a very paying side line. The pelt may not be quite as valuable, but they are much larger and are used extensively when dyed. The meat or flesh is most palatable of any rabbit and can be readily sold, and there are those in authority who openly declare it is more nutritive and digestable than the chicken for sick and invalids. The color of show specimens should be a true steel grey, short coated and even or wavy teching. The under coat should be white and the legs straight, with plenty of bone. The head should not be wedge-shaped but round at the base. The eyes should be bold and bright and the ears about 5 to 7 inches long, upright and moderately thick. This breed is hardier than the Chinchilla or Bevren. There are also the black Flemish. These specimens are about the same size, but their coats are a beautiful glossy black and large pelts. Unlike the Chinchilla, the Flemish doe must have an evenly shaped dewlap for exhibition purposes.

I may say the rabbit is not the objectionable hobby some may think they are, as it takes very little time to keep them clean. They are prolific breeders, and the Canadian climate is adapted for rabbit farming, as green food is life to the rabbit and plenty can be obtained. If this hobby is properly managed it is a money-maker as well as a good hobby. There are other breeds, such as the Angora, Belgian Hare, Dutch, Spotted English and Lops. I am speaking from experience, having been a large breeder of poultry and rabbits, and exhibited them in all parts of the old country at all the leading shows. I was secretary of a large fur and feather fanciers' association and first vice-president of the Midland Flemish Club, and on the executive council of the National Rabbit Club.

ISN'T LOVE LOVELY? By FANNIE HURST

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Humoresque", "A President Is Born"

It was one of those whirlwind situations that often happen in books, but occur with the greatest rarity in real life.

It was a real case of love at first sight. Dazzling, impetuous, sincere love that was too incredible, too delightful, to analyze.

THE remarkable thing about the vaudeville act known as "Duvene Sisters" was not that they were not sisters, most sister-acts aren't. But in this case, the two yellow-haired, blue-eyed, nimble-kneed, buck-dancing, somersaulting "sisters" were mother and daughter.

Marcia Duvene had been born in a theatrical boarding-house and reared in her mother's dressroom. Marcia's daughter Elsie, had been born in a theatrical boarding-house and reared in her mother's dressing-room. Marcia was just eighteen years older than her daughter Elsie. She looked so few of those eighteen years the elder, that even in the theatrical world where youth is not a luxury but a necessity, she was a sort of ninth wonder.

There was really only one kind of light that could reveal the actual difference in the ages of Marcia and her daughter. God's daylight. And since Marcia and her daughter were seldom exposed to it, the illusion of the sisterhood of these two from behind the footlights, at least, was about perfect. For that matter, even to behold them walking down the street revealed scarcely more than five years between them. Those differences lay in the tiny shadows beneath Marcia's eyes. And perhaps in the slightly loose muscles of her face.

But temperamentally, where the wrinkles did not show, never were two sisters more en rapport than Marcia Duvene and her lovely Elsie.

They slept together, they awakened together, they gossiped together, they loved together, they hated together, they lived the full and busy, the picayune, the carefree and the irresponsible life of the theatre together.

IT is doubtful if Elsie, who was her mother all over again, ever thought much of the strangeness of the situation. She had never known her father, who had died one month before her birth; her first crib had been a trunk and for as far back as she could remember, her mother had been someone who could turn a double somersault, flounce a naughty ballet skirt and combine sweetness and tenderness and a bit of temper, with youth, nonsense and a strange wisdom that might have been maternal. But not so that you could notice it.

They thought, these two, not as mother and daughter, but as sisters. Stormy little scenes between them invariably ended in tearful reconciliation. They dressed alike with the rather startling naivete of the theatre, and even in the day of the sophisticated little silhouette of the modern, bobbed-hair flapper, went about in poke bonnets with pale blue facing and yellow ringlets dancing to their shoulders and pastel-colored frocks in which they travelled.

TWO pretty women. Pretty in the same way. Just the right sort of prettiness for successful vaudeville performers.

Cheerfulness, too. A smile and a glimpse of white teeth gleaming between parted, curved lips. A smile that bespoke friendliness, a happy, carefree attitude toward life, a feeling that each day was worth living for the fun and happiness it held.

They were the typical vaudevillians, all right. The usual brand of "sister-act." About the same height, same weight, same accomplishment. Marcia was a little taller than her daughter and had a contralto voice which blended passably with Elsie's fluty little soprano.

Elsie was the more accomplished dancer—after all, the years were irrevocably in Marcia's bones—but Marcia still closed their act on the "split" done with a litheness that Elsie could not equal, much less surpass. They were not "big time" players. They were not sufficiently outstanding in any manner whatsoever for that, but by the time Elsie was eighteen, they had been averaging forty weeks a year for five years. They were a staple act.

IT was as the lovely Elsie crept up toward her late teens, that fears, apprehensions and dread began to creep out of the placid years that Marcia had enjoyed with her daughter as her private own. It began to dawn upon Marcia, as men's eyes turned more and more upon the loveliness that was Elsie's, that life was about to break in upon the placidity of which she was so greedy.

It is true that throughout the years of Elsie's little girlhood, men's eyes had not failed to turn toward Marcia. But Marcia's indifference to them was the indifference of a woman who is satiated with contentment. Her life with her daughter was sufficient unto itself and so there had arisen no problem. But now suddenly, the disquieting awareness had come to Marcia that Elsie was desirable.

To Elsie, her adolescence came as a surprise and a delight. The youths who paid her homage were as novel as they were stimulating. Life was suddenly a Christmas tree hung with sparkling ornaments that seemed within her reach. Watching, Marcia knew that she was helpless.

Helpless as any doting mother is when her daughter reaches the age when youths pay her homage. Close as was the bond between mother and daughter, delightful as was their companionship, Elsie's youth craved the homage that was offered to her. Craved it and answered to it as normal, happy, healthy girlhood does answer.

Elsie was unconscious that anything had happened. All she saw was that the world was a rosier, happier place, that it was a more joyous thing to be alive. That she had more joy to give, more love and affection to give, than she had ever known before.

Elsie knew nothing of the struggle that was going on inside Marcia's troubled breast. Knew nothing of the hours of panic and trouble. Hours, almost, of jealousy. Jealousy that anything so completely lovely and satisfying as her companionship with her daughter should be disturbed. For Marcia knew that it would be disturbed. Knew that she was helpless before the call of youth to youth, love to love.

AND then there began in Elsie's mother the fight to maintain her place in the affection of her daughter. She did it by entering the competition, so to speak. Elsie's wooers found themselves after a while, bewildered between the two of them; the rather dazzling charm of the mother, the less-sure, but nonetheless appealing charm of the daughter.

For every corsage that arrived at Elsie's door, another and sometimes two arrived at Marcia's. Often, with her feet aching and her throat aching and her heart aching, Marcia and one of the youths accompanied Elsie, whose feet and throat and heart were not aching, to dance or cabaret.

And all this Elsie took for granted as part of the natural regime of mother and daughter. It was natural to her since she had never known anything else.

The obvious entanglement which might arise in such a situation as this did not occur. There was never a moment that the affections of these two women fastened themselves upon the same individual.

The youths who milled around the "sisters" were amusing as so much pastime. In her own naive little way, Elsie had a curiosity of maturity. She loved the light, the glitter, the adulation, the adoration that went with her sweetness and charm, but there was nothing in these transient young men that seemed capable of fastening her interest or her emotions.

It seemed to Marcia in her secret fears and dreads and heart-sickness, that she could never be grateful enough for this. This girl, who was her life and almost as much a part of her as the very feet upon which she danced, who might ultimately break her heart when the time came to give her up, at least where affairs of the heart were concerned, was no scatter-brain.

Together, like any two sisters, they twitted and scoffed over their suitors and exchanged intimate jokes after they were tucked into bed at night and gossipped over their breakfast cups with all of the school girl absurdities of the undergraduate social world.

IT was in a town called Bradford where they had played many a time before, that Marcia and her daughter met a man named Grover, who had recently taken over the management of the theatre in which they were appearing. He was a well-preserved, jovial sort of fellow, enormously fascinated by the world of the theatre that was so new to him, a person of fresh, unjaded spontaneity.

The second night of the "Duvene Sisters" engagement, he invited them out to late supper and brought along as a foursome, his own son, Raymond Grover, a young physician in the town.

Then ensued one of those whirlwind situations that frequently happen in books, but occur with the greatest rarity in life. It was a case of love-at-first-sight on the part of two adult males.

For the three subsequent weeks, Lester Grover and his son Raymond followed from town to town the "sisters" who had so dazzled their vision, and their imagination.

To Marcia and her daughter, something incredible and too delightful to analyze had befallen.

They were in love. The rest tells glibly, easily and romantically. It is one of those stories that works itself out to the satisfaction of all concerned, but perhaps with the possible exception of one condition. And up to now, with the two handsome households of Marcia and her daughter so comfortably established in the town of Bradford, there is no reason to believe that this condition is ever going to matter to the detriment of anybody's happiness.

The condition, however, is this: Lester Grover, the father, married Elsie.

Raymond Grover, the son, married Elsie's mother.

LLOYD'S KEEPS ANCIENT PEWS

Tradition of Three Centuries Carried Into Fine New Quarters.

MOVING BIG JOB.

LONDON, May 3 (by the Canadian Press).—A three hundred years' old coffee house tradition—the use of hard straight-back wooden pews by underwriters and brokers—is preserved in the new 2,000,000 pounds Lloyd's building in Leadenhall street, which was opened by the King recently. "These seats date from the time of the Great Fire of London, when the Royal Exchange was burnt down, and the underwriters removed to a coffee house in Lombard street kept by a man named Lloyd," said a member of the famous firm to a reporter. 'It' was then the custom for a youth employed by the house to get into a pulpit and read every paper in a loud and distinct voice while the audience sipped their liquor, sitting in the old straight-backs. Since then the underwriters have never departed from the use of these seats. They scorn the ease and comfort of modern furniture, and the new seats, designed to meet the special requirements of individual members, are modelled on the ancient pattern."

Among novelties of the new Lloyd's is a kitchen on the top floor, where up-to-date cookers, over which it will not be necessary to stoop, are installed.

A gigantic task was faced in the removal of tons of ledgers, books and papers belonging to the underwriters, into the new premises. "Our artisan staff was continuously employed for five days shifting thousands of volumes which have accumulated during the past century," said an official. Business officially started in the new Lloyd's on Tuesday, April 10.
